Poetry.

LEFT ALONE.

What did you say, dear? Breakfast?
Somehow I've slept too late;
You are very kind, dear Effie,
Go tell them not to wait.
I'll dress as quick as ever I can,
My old hands tremble sore,
And Polly, who used to help, dear heart!
Lies t'other side of the door.

Put up the old pipe, my dear,
I couldn't smoke to-day;
I'm sort of dazed and frightened,
And don't know what to say.
It's lonesome in the house, dear,
And lonesome out of door,
I never knew what lonesome meant
In all my life before.

The bees go humming the whole day long,
And the first June rose has blown,
And I am eighty, I am to-day—
Too old to be left alone.
O heart of love, so still and cold!
O precious lips so white!
For the first sad hours in sixty years
You were out of my reach last night!

I can't rest now—I cannot rest—
Let the old man have his will,
And wander from porch to garden post;
The house is so deathly still—
Wander and long for a sight of the gate
She has left ajar for me,
We had got so used to each other, dear—
So used to each other, you see.

Sixty years, and so wise and good!
She made me a better man
From the moment I kissed her fair young face
And our lover's life began.
And I held her hand—was it yesterday
That we stood up to be wed?
And—no, I remember; I'm eighty to-day,
And my dear wife Polly is dead!

Miscellany.

"An' so Miss Dorinda Beam is dead an' buried."

"Yes, an' hain't left no will—that's the wust of it."

Mrs. Grimes stopped churning to listen to the news brought by Neighbor Hockins.

"You don't say!"

"It's so," declared Neighbor Hockins, emphatically.

"Beuly Bittersweet won't get nothin' after all, then," observed Mrs. Grimes, lifting the churn-lid to see if the buttei was coming.

"Not a stiver. An' her allus brought up to think she'd git it all."

"'Tis too bad. I reckin Peter Fogg an' his woman'll come in for the proppity, then?"

"Course they will, bein' they're the nighest of kin. All the kin folks she hed, I reckin, fur her an' Beuly wasn't no ways related."

"I shouldn't think Miss Dorindy'd sleep quiet in her grave, with them Foggs a-handling of her things. She hated 'em like pizon while she was alive," remarked Mrs. Grimes.

"She hadn't ort to put off makin' her will, then. But that's allus the way—folks keeps a-putting off an' a-puttin' off a-thinkin' they're goin' to live forever, an' then all at once they're gone 'fore they know it. An' then it's too late. Miss Dorindy died awful suddint, they say—appellexy or the like. I dunno what Beuly is a-goin' to do, I'm sure."

And indeed poor Beulah herself scarcely knew what she was going to do.

"Everything here will be yours, Beulah, when I am dead and gone," Miss Dorinda had often declared. "That miserly Peter Fogg an' his stingy wife won't get a stick nor a stone of what belongs to me! I kin tell him, even if he is my nephew."

And now Miss Dorinda was dead and gone, sure enough, and Peter Fogg and his "stingy wife" were the heirs at law.

The place had been thoroughly searched for a will, but none could be found, and Lawyer Green, who attended to all Miss Dorinda's affairs, declared that he had not been called upon to make any will; and so poor Beulah was left penniless and alone in the great world.

One year ago, Beulah was the promised wife of Richard Barrymore, a stalwart young farmer, who lived with his mother in the old homestead, with its green orchard trees, its meadows of sweet grass, and its waving fields of wheat and corn.

But Beulah was young and giddy, and when the new physician, Dr. Clarence Virden, began to pay lover-like attentions to her, Richard grew jealous, a quarrel ensued, and a broken engagement was the upshot of the matter.

Since that time, Dr. Virden had continued his attentions, until Miss Dorinda's death occurred, and Beulah's unfortunate position was made public.

Then his visits suddenly ceased, and he found it convenient to "pass by on the other side."

A week later, Mr. Fogg and wife came to take possession.

He was a sharp-featured miserly man, and she a sharp-nosed, avaricious woman.

"The ole woman hed a heap o' plunder," remarked Peter, as he went lumbering through the parlors with his heavy cowhide boots. "That there pie-anner won't be here long, though nor them picters on the wall!" he declared, eyeing the articles named with a calculating gaze. "I reckin they'll fetch a right smart sum o' money at the auction-rooms an' I'll cart 'em off an' sell 'em."

"There's a hull trunk full o' the ole woman's good clo'se," put in Mrs. Peter, who had been exploring the upper rooms. "You mout as well cart them off, an' sell 'em, too, Peter. I kaint wear 'em."

"Course you kaint," said Peter, gruffly. "Waat do you want of any more clo'se, anyhow? Them you've got on your back is good enough fur anybody."

Shocked and pained at their coarse remarks, Beulah went to her own room, to think over her plans for the future.

"You kin stay here, if you work fur your board," Mrs. Peter had informed her, but Beulah had declined the offer.

"I had rather beg my bread from door to door," she declared to herself, "than to stay with them. But where can I go?"

"Beuly!" called Mrs. Peter's sharp voice. "Come down—here's a feller wants to see you."

Beulah sprang up with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes.

"Could it—could it be Doctor Virden?"

She caught her breath, her heart beat so violently with a sudden hope.

She hurried down with a pink flush, like the tinted heart of an ocean shell, staining her cheeks, to meet—Richard Barrymore.

He took her hands in a firm, gentle clasp.

"Get your things, Beulah. I have come to take you home with me. Mother has a room ready for you, and you are to live with us."

"Oh, Richard, I—I don't deserve it?" sobbed Beulah, remorsefully.

"Hush! Get you things," ordered Richard, authoritatively, "and let me carry out your trunk; my wagon is at the door."

And half-reluctantly, though with a feeling of relief in her heart, Beulah allowed him to lift her into the wagon, where he had already placed her trunk, and they drove away.

Peter Fogg was as good as his word, and before many days he drove into town with his lumbering farm-wagon filled with the big piano, the handsome pictures, and Aunt Dorinda's trunk, containing her "best clothes."

* * * * * * * *

The honeysuckle and madeira vines clustering about the old Barrymore farm-house were full of bloom, and the scented petals of a tall cinnamon rose-bush were dropping lightly on Beulah's nut-brown curls, as she sat on the south porch with a basket of yellow September peaches beside her.

"Dick is so foud of peaches and cream," commented Beulah to herself, as she peeled and sliced the ripe, golden-hued fruit. "He shall have some every day while they last."

Just then the sound of wagon-wheels was heard in the lane.

"What on airth is that Richard's got in the wagon?" asked Mrs. Barrymore, coming out on the porch just as the wagon came into view. "Kin you make out what 'tis, Beuly? Your eyes are better'n mine air."

Beulah shaded her eyes with her hands and looked again.

"It—it looks like a big box," she said, doubtfully.

And so it was a big box, with a piano inside of it. There was another box, also, filled with pictures, and a trunk.

Richard drove up to the door.

"I've brought you a present, Beulah," he cried gaily. "The piano and pictures we'll put in the parlor, and this trunk I'll just carry up to your room."

And calling Sim, the hired man, they carried it up at once.

Beulah could only look her thanks, and then ran up-stairs to hide her tears.

Half an hour later she came dancing down stairs, laughing and crying together.

"Oh, Dick! Oh, Aunt Laura!" she cried, hysterically. "There was a will after all; and here it is! It was in the bosom of Miss Dorinda's dress, between the lining and the outside. I thought I would hang up the clothes, to air them, after being shut up in the trunk, and just happened to feel this in the bosom of her silk dress. It was one she had not worn for a good while."

It proved to be a genuine will, made three years ago, in St. Louis, where Beulah and Miss Dorinda had spent a few weeks one summer.

This accounted for Lawyer Green having no knowledge of it.

Beulah was soon reinstated in her old home, and Peter Fogg and his wife, after refunding the money paid for the piano and other articles, went back to their farm, greatly chagrined at the unexpected turn of affairs.

"I wish the pesky trunk had of burnt up 'fore ever we went an' sold it," grumbled Peter.

In which unavailing wish Mrs. Peter coincided with him.

Among the visitors who soon flocked to congratulate Beulah on her good fortune, was Doctor Clarence Virden; but much to his discomfiture he was informed that "Miss Bittersweet was engaged."

And so she was, in more senses than one.

For when the first October frosts had crimsoned the trailing ivy-leaves and turned the sumac and sassafras-leaves to scarlet and gold, Beulah Bittersweet was transformed into Mrs. Richard Barrymore.

The Kind of a Man He Was.

Mr. Closefist called at a neighbor's not long ago, and the little angel of the house was very attentive and inquisitive. After inspecting him pretty closely, she said:

"Mr. Closefist, your foot isn't very little is it?"

"No, Maggie," responded the visitor.

"Your hand ain't, either?" she continued.

"I think not."

"Your head ain't, either?"

"No, my dear, but why do you ask?" inquired the puzzled gentleman.

"Because, papa said you were the smallest man, in some things, he ever met. I guess papa has seen more of you than I have."—Merchant Traveller.

Interesting Reminiscences.

The following reminiscences in the life of the late Stephen Morse, Esq., of Marlboro, father of Mr. Stephen Morse of Quincy, we copy from the Marlboro Mirror-Journal of March 21st. The facts were given by the venerable patriarch last December to the Boston Globe reporter with the understanding that they should receive no embellishing but appear as a simple narrative. The events narrated are very remarkable and shows the honesty and uprightness of the people of "ye olden times."

I left Marlboro early one morning on foot when I was 14 years of age, to walk to Sudbury, where I had been bound to a shoemaker to learn the trade. This was in 1811, and I was to serve until 21. The hours for work were from sunrise until 9 o'clock P. M., compensation being board, trade, four weeks schooling in winter and a suit of clothes when my time was out. Having served my time, in 1821 I put in six weeks work for myself to get money to go to Boston, which place was duly reached after a journey on foot, which resulted in finding employment with Thomas Gaffield, then Boston's leading boot and shoe dealer, his place being near Merchant's Hall.

My position was foreman of the front shop. The store was close by the old Exchange Coffee House and in time I became acquainted with the substantial men of those days who were the founders of Boston's prosperity. I noticed an announcement that the Suffolk Bank, then situated corner of State and Kilby Sts., would receive applications for teller, bookkeeper and messenger, the salary of the latter being at that time $350. I applied with several hundred others, and received the messenger appointment. The duties of that official were what the term implies. The method of opening a bank for business was rather different in those days from what it is at present, and more primitive customs were in vogue. There were three sets of keys to the vault, carried by the president, cashier and messenger, and all three sets were necessary to open the strong-hold. My first duty almost of a morning would be to get the president's keys, to unite with those of the cashier and myself in opening the safe. There was some difficulty experienced with several banks, in having the money of the country banks redeemed in specie, under the banking system of that time, and the Boston banks finally combined and agreed to take country banks' money at par on deposit, it being agreed that the banks issuing the bills must redeem in specie. The Boston Banks agreed to furnish the Suffolk with a certain amount of money, free of interest, and the Suffolk was to transact their exchange business for them; in reality it was the clearing house of that time.

After a certain amount of a bank's paper money had accumulated, specie would be demanded. Then there were no railroads, and transportation must be effected by team and messenger. I was, I believe the first messenger sent out under the new order of things. My first trip was to Worcester and Oxford, for which place I started with $10,000 worth of bills, after giving the bank directors a receipt for the amount, although it was not worth the paper it was written on, as I was nothing but a boy and had no property. Well, I left the bank with the money and came home on the stage. The next day I took my father's team, went to Worcester, and Oxford, effected the exchange, receiving the specie in dollars and halves, which weighed sixty pounds to the $1,000. I got back home, rolled the kegs in which the money was packed under the bed, and the next morning returned to Boston and rendered my account.

My next trip was to Windsor, Vt. I left Boston one cold March morning with a truck, three horses and a driver, having with me $20,000 in bills to be redeemed. We went as far as Groton the first day, to Washington, N. H., the second, and nearly froze to death, the cold was so intense, and reached Windsor the third day.

A memorable trip was that made to Natucket I took a span of horses and drove to Sandwich then went across to Falmouth, and had $7000 in bills on the local bank redeemed in coin, which was sent back by a man who went with me from Boston. I was to go to Nantucket, having $20,000 in bills, which were to be exchanged, the specie to be shipped to New Bedford, where I had a four horse team ready to take it to the Suffolk Bank. We left Falmouth by packet, but a rough wind blew us in to Holmes Hole, where we remained until smoother weather. We reached Nantucket at night and I put up at old Marm Carey's. The next morning I went out to the banks, going first to the Phœnix. Cashier Folger said he had heard that I had arrived, and while he wished me no harm he would not have been sorry if the house I stayed in the night before had been burned down. You see they hated to be dictated to by the Boston banks. Well, there I was a green country boy, scared at my own shadow, and that kind of talk did not make me feel more at ease. Both banks paid readily, but I had to wait a week on the island on account of rough weather, and during that time that $20,000 in silver, packed in boxes, was stowed away under my bed at Marm Carey's. When the weather was clear I went to the packet master, told him I had such an amount of money; but he wouldn't take it for me to New Bedford, without he received a certain commission, which would amount to several hundred dollars, which I refused to pay, and he told me to get off the island as well as I could. A trading vessel put into Nantucket, the same being commanded by a Capt. Robinson, to whom I explained my situation, and finally bargained with him to carry the specie to New Bedford for $25. The Nantucketers were so incensed at the captain for taking the silver off the island that he was warned that he could not find any more trade there.

Many a time have I had my valise containing thousands of dollars in bills tossed about on a stage or about the taverns where I would stop. I did not dare to be too solicitious for its safety for fear that it might excite suspicion that it had valuables in it.

No, I never had anyone attempt to molest me; although I have teamed it all over New England, carrying a large amount of money. I would frequently charter a stage, would estimate that each seat would accomodate about $4000 in specie, and would pay for it on that basis.

This method of business was followed up until the country banks were forced to redeem bills in Boston.

I was promoted to the position of teller and continued to be sent out in obstinate cases. A New Bedford bank was particularly obstinate about coming into the arrangement entered into by the Boston banks. The Suffolk would send to this bank about $18,000 a month, which would not be the whole amount of its bills, held as a quantity would be kept in reserve. This was done until we had in reserve about $50,000 of its bills, with which I was to affect the redemption. This result was reached, although there was marked opposition; but my orders were strict; if the specie had not been forthcoming, and if proper action had not been taken there might have been trouble with that bank. As it was there was considerable discussion before by business was transacted. I remember leaving our bank at 10 o'clock one night with $115,000 packed in my valise, with which I walked across the city to my boarding house in Fayette St. I should not care to walk that distance in Boston now with such an amount of money about my person, but no danger was apprehended then. As I was leaving the bank, William Lawrence, one of the directors, said to me; "Morse, if you are ever going to run off, we shall never give you a better chance."

I remained with the Suffolk until 1835, when I resigned on account of ill health. Yes, every inducement was offered to have me remain, but my health was more to be considered.

In 1832 there was a collision between the sound steamers, Washington and Chancellor Livingstone, which ran between Providence and New York. The accident occurred on a bright starlight night, when the boats were off New Haven, and the Washington sunk in thirty minutes after the shock. I was aboard the other boat and being aware of the fact that the Suffolk bank had ordered a large amount of specie from the Phœnix bank of New York to be shipped by the sinking steamer, I immediately rushed around to ascertain its whereabouts, and managed by active work and assistance to save the same, which amounted to $21,000. One keg in which the coin was packed, burst, and there was $7 lost out of it. Oh, yes, the bank rewarded me, not with a sum that would now be regarded munificent, however.

An Important Food Reform.

PRODUCTION OF CHEMICALLY PURE CREAM OF TARTAR—TOTAL ELIMINATION OF ALL LIME IMPURITIES—NEW DISCOVERIES IN REFINING—A LONG STRIDE TOWARD PURE FOOD.

Discoveries of much importance on account of the relation they bear toward a more wholesome food supply and consequently upon the public health, have been recently made in the process of refining cream of tartar. Cream of tartar, as is well known, is a bitartrate of potassa purified from the crude tartar, or argol, which collects in a crystaline deposit upon the bottom and sides of wine casks during the fermentation of the wine. This tartar, in its crude state, contains lime and other impurities, which no process of refining known prior to that here described was able to entirely remove. It has been possible, it is true, to neutralize the lime to some extent by the aid of chemicals, and this method was resorted to in order to procure cream of tartar in small quantities for pharmaceutical purposes; but it was open to serious objection in view of the fact that the chemicals employed for this purpose were not always washed out but remained in quantities that were uncertain and prejudicial to its quality. The supposed impossibility of removing the lime has, accordingly, caused cream of tartar to be classed and sold as pure when it did not contain more than five per cent of this impurity. The major part, however, of that used in commerce, or for culinary purposes, contains the tartrate of lime to an extent much greater than five per cent. not infrequently being found, upon analysis, debased to a degree equaling one-fourth or more of its entire weight.

In a report upon the subject of food adulteration made to the New York State Board of Health by Professors Chandler and Love, it is stated that of 27 samples of cream of tartar bought from dealers as pure 16 were adulterated with various substances from 3 to 93 per cent, while of the remainder all contained tartrate of lime, some as high as 10.59 per cent.

The serious character of this adulteration is more readily appreciated when it is recollected how largely cream of tartar enters into the preparation of the food of every family. In connection with soda in baking powder it is the chief agent now employed for raising and making light and digestible all our biscuit, cake, and other pastry, and is besides, in many communities, superseding the old-fashioned yeast for all leavening purposes, so that it is employed to some extent in almost every meal of which we eat. The amount of cream of tartar used in this country in a year in baking powder and otherwise in the preparation of food, is estimated at ten million pounds. If this were 90 per cent. pure—a high estimate—we would consume one million pounds or more of lime annually as a substitute for bread. So large a deterioration becomes appreciable in the deprivation of our food of a portion of its nutritive elements not only, but if, as is now supposed, this excess of lime taken into the system has a relation to the painful affections of the kidneys so prevalent in this country, its bearing upon the health of the entire community is too important to be over-looked.

The new process by which cream of tartar is produced 100 per cent. pure—that is, with the lime totally eliminated,—by treating the crude material under pressure instead of using any chemicals whatever for the purpose, was the discovery originally of a German chemist, but has been developed and perfected by the Royal Baking Powder Company of this city, through whose efforts a few years since in behalf of a high standard of purity in food, the public was rid of the poisonous alum baking powders at that time so prevalent.

The determination of this Company to place upon the market only absolutely pure goods, and the impossibility of doing this from the cream of tartar of commerce, made it apparent that some new method must be sought by which cream of tartar could be procured in large quantities, free from lime and chemically pure. The cream of tartar refiners of this country and Europe when approached upon the subject, declared such a result impossible, and declined to incur the expenditure necessary to make the trial. The Royal Baking Powder Company, accordingly, resolved to solve the problem for itself; and having secured the aid of the best chemists of Europe and America, proceeded with its investigations and discoveries until the result, after several years of labor, and the expenditure of over half a million dollars in the purchase of patents, perfecting of processes, and the erection of buildings and machinery, was reached in the complete attainment of the end sought. The works (now owned by The New York Tartar Co.) are located in Brooklyn, and exceed in size and capacity any other similar refinery in the world. They produce a chemically pure cream of tartar, which is now exclusively used for pharmaceutical preparations, and in the manufacture of the celebrated Royal Baking Powder.

The energy and outlay that have effected this, will undoubtedly be fully rewarded by the public which will chiefly benefit by the successful issue of the investigations. People are coming daily to more fully appreciate the value of pure and wholesome food. By the exclusive use of this chemically pure cream of tartar, the Royal Baking Powder is produced entirely free from lime, and absolutely pure, qualities possessed by no other baking powders yet made. A baking powder entirely free from lime or other impurity must not only contain more strength or leavening power and produce better food and therefore be more economical for use, but what is more important, possess qualities of superior wholesomeness.

Chemists and physicans have looked upon the experiments with much interest, and regard their success as a matter of much importance.—New York Tribune.

A Wonderful Grotto.

A correspondent in Cagliari writes to the Avvaire di Sardegna the following description of the stalactiti grotto discovered not long ago at Dorgali, in Sardinia, which is approached by a difficult and tortuous path leading down into a gloomy ravine on the mountainous coast: "The grotto commences by an ample space, the vault of which is supported on columns. On the rocky ground may be seen the print of a human foot. From this place you enter a vast hall of such magnificence that it extorts an exclamation of wonder. Sixteen columns with varicolored capitals rise from the marble floor and sustain a pure white roof, from which depend the figures of birds, guns, serpents, baskets of fruit, and a thousand other tricks of nature. But the most striking object is an altar ornamented with enormous baskets of colored fruits on which are large candelabra and a shrine so exactly imitated that you are tempted to try to open it in order to see the chalice within. From the roof above hang festoons of flowers, which reach down almost to the altar as if attempting to conceal it. The most wonderful thing in the hall was, however, the petrified skeleton of a majestic stag, which was partly destroyed by visitors, and the spine of which has been sent entire to a professor of natural history in Cagliari. The grotto contains six other large chambers, decorated with arabesques in stalactite, and full of pillars, human figures, opaque mirrors, and other wonderful imitations of objects of art and nature."

The First Steel Pen Makers.

The word Pen, in Holy Scriptures, refers to either an iron style, or to a reed; the latter being the earliest form of pen used for writing on papyrus.

One of the earliest attempts to make steel pens is attributed to Wm. Gadbury, England, who, for his own use constructed a clumsy article from the main spring of a watch.

Steel Pens were first brought into use about the year 1803.

James Perry, of London, commenced to manufacture pens in 1824, and was the founder of the firm named Perry & Co., who are now the largest pen makers in the world.

Their celebrated "U" and Falcons for correspondents, and fine points Nos. A. O. 4 and 1073 for schools, are, without doubt, the CHEAPEST PERFECT PENS in use—they can be had from all stationers. Sole Agents for the United States, Messrs. IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR, & Co., New York.

Diphtheria.

If one is subject to catarrh, or inflammatory affections of the throat, especial care should be paid to the condition of the general health, and to the general hygienic surroundings. There is reason to believe that diphtheria originates spontaneously in those persons when the system is debilitated from any cause.

During the existence of diphtheria avoid crowded gatherings in badly ventilated rooms, as theatres, public halls, and even churches. This is of special importance during cold weather.

Secure thorough ventilation and perfect cleanliness of nurseries, kindergartens, school-rooms and other places where children are cared for. Parents should make it their personal business to secure these in the home and nursery, and to see that those in charge of schools, etc., are also mindful of these important matters. Children are more subject to diphtheria than adults, and the diseasese is more fatal with them hence the necessity for these precautions on their behalf.

How to Secure a Cold.

Let a man go home tired or exhausted, eat a full supper of starchy and vegetable food, occupy his mind intently for a while, go to bed in a warm, close room, and if he doesn't have a cold in the morning it will be a wonder. A drink of whisky or a glass or two of beer before supper will facilitate matters very much.

People swallow more colds than they inhale or receive from contact from the air, no matter how cold or chill it may be. Plain, hearty suppers are good to go to bed on, and are far more conducive to refreshing sleep than a glass of beer or a dose of chloral. In the estimation of a great many this statement is rank heresy, but in the light of science, common sense and experience it is gospel truth.

Gossip.

The following selection was sent us for publication and was clipped from a western paper:

"What is the cure for gossip? Simply culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Good-natured people talk about their neighbors because—and only because—they have nothing else to talk about. Gossip is always a personal confession of either malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but should with the most careful watchfulness guard themselves against every temptation to indulge in it. It is low, frivolous, and too often a dirty business. There are country neighborhoods in which it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it. Neighbors make enemies for life by it. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease which is practically incurable.'

☞ Orange raising in California has not been successful this year. Prices have fallen as low as 35 cents a box in some instances. The fruit is not so large as usual, but excellent in flavor, and though now ripe, will be better if left on the trees till May. The lemons are large and fine.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1885.

Fast Day at the Rink.

There was a large attendance at both the afternoon and evening sessions on Fast Day. The Brockton City Bicycle Corps gave an excellent exhibition of fancy bicycle riding both in the afternoon and evening, and were admired by all.

There was a bicyle race of two miles in the afternoon between William Rhodes of the Dorchester Club, and Frank Demuth of the Brockton City Club, which was easily won by the latter in six minutes, forty-five seconds; and the winner was awarded a silver cup.

In the evening there was a two-mile race between Frank Demuth of the Brockton City Club, and Maddocks the professional skater. The latter was given one lap the start. Demuth took the lead and had nearly gained a lap but in attempting to pass Maddocks they collided and Demuch was thrown; both parties claimed a foul, but the race continued and came to an unsatisfactory ending. The referee, who was a member of the Brockton City Club, declared the race won by Demuth because of fouls by Maddocks. Many of the audience thought the dicision unjust and it was feared for some time that trouble might ensue; Maddocks declaring that he would have the gold medal. The referee had given it to Demuth, however, and as possession is nine-tenths of law, he kept it. It was not until the Brockton boys had departed for home on the 11.30 train that the excitement abated.

The Polo Club Benefit.

The attractions presented by the Quincy Polo Club, on Tuesday evening, drew a large audience, who were all pleased with the numerous features.

Little Millie Smith and Tommy Stewart have appeared before Quincy audiences before, and the reputation then obtained is destined to continue with them. Frank E. Burrell of Quincy Point gave an excellent exhibition of club swinging. L. Pratt, the champion bicycle rider of Weymouth, was unable to be present, to race with Mr. Owens, and in their place was an exhibition race between Mr. Owens and H. D. Flint, which was won by the former.

The event of the evening was the game of polo between the East Weymouths and Quincys, for twenty-five dollars. The players in the local team were Glover, Foster, Hall, Miller, White and Burrell. It was a well contested game and the result is very gratifying to Quincy. The first goal was won by the home team in ten seconds and it looked as though it was to be "three straight," but no, the Weymouths were not to have it so, and after playing thirteen minutes more they also had a goal to their credit. They continued in good luck and won the next goal also. It began to look bad for the Quincy boys and the audience thought that at last Weymouths turn had come. The home team captured the next goal, however, and the game thus far was a tie at two. The "rubber" was the shortest of all, for with one rush the ball was caged in the Weymouths' goal, and Quincy had won. The individual playing of the local club was very good, with possibly one exception. We hope that Mr. Burrell will not leave his goal unguarded again as he did, for it might prove disastrous next time. Who says we have a weak club?

☞ A young man residing in Wollaston, named Robert Johnston, fell while skating at the Coliseum on the 20th ult. and fractured the bone of his right arm in two places. He was conveyed to the City Hospital for treatment, where he will probably be obliged to remain for some weeks to come.

☞ About twenty-five couples surprised Mr. W. F. Merrill, at his residence on Granite street, on Friday evening of last week. Dancing, a supper and a general good time was enjoyed. The surprisers presented Mr. Merrill with a plush album and brush broom case, the speech being made by Walter Pinel.

For the Patriot.

Quincy Point Items.

PERSONAL.

Mrs Sarah Kingman came home on Monday from Holliston, where she has spent the winter with her son.

Miss Annie B. Sampson spent Fast Day at the Point.

Miss Annie Starbuck arrived home on Wednesday from Bournedale to spend the spring vacation.

Rev. Mr. Chapin of North Weymouth filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church on Sunday morning last, and preached an excellent sermon.

Mrs. George L. Phillips, while attending the Coliseum carnival on Friday of last week, received a severe blow on the head from a chair which fell from one of the galleries.

The Federhen family held a reunion on Fast day as is their custom.

THIS AND THAT.

The first schooner this season passed through the Point bridge on Monday, bound for Weymouth.

Easter will be observed at the Congregational Church by an Easter sermon and selected music in the morning, and a concert in the evening.

The Baptist will also hold a concert in the evening at the usual time.

A sociable held on Wednesday evening by the Ladies' Social Circle connected with the Baptist Society was one of the pleasantest affair of the season. As part of the entertainment, Mr. Pastay, a native of Burmah lectured on the social life of the Burmese, and proved most entertaining and interesting. He also described in a graphic manner some of the difficulties he met in learning American ways and manners. He has been educated in Hamilton, N. Y., where he has passed four years and will soon return to Burmah as a teacher. E. M. F.

The Costume Carnival.

The second carnival at the Coliseum, on Friday evening of last week, was a very successful party, being largely attended by skaters and spectators. The costumes and characters were widely varied, and a great many of them were very rich. The representations of a turtle and alligator were very noticeable. Topsy was a very good trick skater, and was much admired, and as a humorist made considerable fun.

Fourteen prizes aggregating $200 in value were offered. The judges, with the exception of W. W. Adams, were out-of-town persons. The following were the fortunate ones.

Miss Annie Gardner of Brockton, a flower girl, was awarded a gold watch, the first prize, for the handsomest dress.

Miss Lizzie Merritt of Quincy, the second prize, a pair of pearl opera glasses.

Miss Emma Drolan of Dorchester, in comical dress, received the first prize for most original dress,— a silver berry dish.

Miss M. Lillie Taber of Quincy, with dress covered with fancy crackers from Kennedy's the second prize,—a silver pickle jar.

Mrs. Albert Taber of Quincy, an Indian squaw, took the first prize for comical dress,—a silver butter dish.

Miss Minnie Walker of North Weymouth, the second prize,—a silver spoonholder.

Charles A. Wardwell of Boston, was the handsomest dressed gentleman and received the first prize,—a gold watch.

Eugene Williams of Brockton, in court costume, took the second—a silver water pitcher.

Frank E. Osborne of Brockton, the turtle, received the first prize for an original suit,—a pair of clamp skates.

A. B. Dunbar of Brockton, the alligator, took the second—a dressing case.

Walter Lyons, of Randolph, the Irish woman, received the first prize for comical suit,—a gold ring.

Charles Marion of North Weymouth, "Topsy," took the second—a gold scarf pin.

Mrs. Isaac Bent and J. E. Glover were awarded the special prizes for being the most graceful couple,—two gold rings.

District Court, Quincy.

Michael Hefferman, of East Weymouth, for assault, was fined $3 and costs; he appealed.

William O'Keefe, of Randolph, for assault, was discharged.

Thomas Ryan of Weymouth, for being a vagrant, was sent to the House of Correction.

John Kelley of Weymouth was fined $1 for being drunk.

Philip Cullen of Weymouth, for keeping a liquor nuisance, was discharged.

John Dugan, of Webster, a tramp, was sent to the State Workhouse.

James Lee of Randolph, for assault on two young ladies, had his cases continued.

John F. Garvin of Quincy, for larceny, case continued to April 10th.

James G. Sherman, of Weymouth, for being a common drunkard, was sent to the House of Correction for six months.

John White, of Webster, a tramp, was sent to the State Workhouse.

John Trafton, for being drunk, was discharged.

John W. Owens, of Quincy, for a second drunk, was fined $3 and costs; for assault on John McKenzie, was fined $5 and costs.

☞ We had a genuine spring morning on Wednesday, no April fool about it.

Drunken Row.

Very frequently, last year, complaints were made of disturbances and quarrels on Granite street. Thursday evening about seven o'clock a gang of fifteen or twenty, mostly boys, armed with clubs took it into their heads to assault every one who went by. Justin Hardwick, Samuel H. Spear, Frank C. Crane, Loring W. Blaisdell tell of the disgraceful affair of Thursday evening. John Moyle was among those assaulted by the gang but he managed to get away. William Roe was also attacked, and when he got away he ran to the residence of Mr. Blaisdell for protection. The crowd followed, and commenced throwing stones. After one of the missiles had struck a little son of Mr. Blaisdell who was in the doorway, the rioters hurried away. The stone struck the little fellow on the forehead about an inch from the temple and felled him almost senseless on the floor. Yesterday the young lad could show a bad flesh wound, but was able to be out of doors. We had not heard of any arrests as we went to press but the parties are known and warrants have been issued, and some of them may be expected at the District Court Room this morniag. The residents along the street are desirous that an example shall be made of these offenders, that the gang may be broken up and the street become quite and peaceful once more.

West Quincy.

Mrs. Josiah Randlett is very sick.

Another pleasant sociable at the M. E. Church last Tuesday evening.

Miss May Badger left on Wednesday morning for a month's visit in Vermont.

Michael Owens is to build a new house at the corner of Willard street and Larry place. The lumber arrived Tuesday.

Business was generally suspended Fast Day and it was about as quiet as Sunday. Many went to the city.

The New England Conference of Methodist Churches occurs next Thursday. It is probable that there will be a change of pastors here.

Special services have been held at the St. Mary's Church this week, and some fine singing is expected at the Easter services to-morrow.

America Division elected the following officers Monday evening:

W. P.—Joffit Keast.
W. A.—Lizzie Mason.
R. S.—Henrietta McDonald.
A. R. S.—May B. Fuller.
F. S.—Edward Miller.
T.—Charles L. Orne.
Chap.—Charles H. Fuller.
Con.—John Rose.
A. C.—Columbus Carley.
I S.—Robert Craig.
O. S.—Alex Mason.

St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence Society was represented at the ninth annual convention of the societies of the State at Arlington on Wednesday. W. T. Shea was chosen the Norfolk County vice president. A union parade is to take place October 10th.

Miller & Luce were quite alarmed one day recently for fear their horse and carriage had been stolen. A man had come to the house saying Mr. Miller wished the horse at the quarry, and had been given it and drove away. It seems it was all a joke, that some one at the quarry had sent the man after the horse, and there it was found.

Quincy Yacht Club.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht Club is to be held this evening. The club was organized in 1874, and is one of the oldest in the state. Its first officers were, Commodore, James H. Slade; Vice Commodore, H. A. Keith; Secretary and Treasurer, H. M. Federhen. Prominent among the boats in those days was the India, Nettie, Lena, Flirt, Zephyr, Mabel, Maise, Aurora, Wildfire, Dolly Varden, Rocket, Fannie, Louise, Lottie, Romp, Red Lion and others. There were twenty-nine entries in the first race July 18, 1874. Many of our prominent men joined the club and it prospered, and although but few of the original members are still connected with it, the Quincy Yacht Club still continues. It now has about sixty members.

In 1875, Mr. Slade was again elected Commodore, and H. A. Keith, Vice Commodore, Secretary and Treasurer. In the next year the above officers were the same, and H. M. Federhen was elected Fleet Captain. The only change in 1877 was in the election of C. H. Porter as Secretary and Treasurer. In 1878 and 1879 the officers were: Commodore, H. A. Keith; Vice Commodore, William H. Nicholson; Fleet Captain, Joshua Binney; Secretary and Treasurer, George W. Morton. In 1880, John Q. Adams was Commodore, A. J. Clark Vice Commodore, with the same Fleet Captain, Secretary and Treasurer. In 1881, John Q. Adams was re-elected; the Vice Commodore was B. F. Bass; Fleet Captain, Peter B. Turner; Secretary and Treasurer, N. B. Furnald. In 1882, Sigourney Butler was Commodore, C. H. Porter Vice Commodore, and the other officers the same. The officers for the last two years were Commodore, George W. Morton; Vice Commodore, C. F. Adams, 3d; Fleet Captain, Peter B. Turner; Secretary and Treasurer, N. B. Furnald. We understand that the present officers do not desire a re-election, and probably a new board will be elected to-night.

The champions of the races last year were: Of the first class Queen Mab, owned by E. L. Burrell; of the second class, Joker, owned by George Coffin; third class, Mirage, owned by A. J. Clark. Second prizes were won by the Spray, Rocket, Thisbee, Niobe and Wildfire. In the "opening regatta" last year, May 28th, the first prize was taken by the Whiff, she being the only boat to go over the course. Another regatta was held three days later when the David Crockett, Pet and Flora Lee took first prizes. There was no second prize in the first class. The Niobe and Elsie took the second prizes in the second and third. In the last regatta the Queen Mab, Wildfire and Mirage took first prizes, and the Erin, Pet and Elsie second prizes.

CONVENTION. The thirty-third quarterly convention of the Massachusetts State Reform Clubs will be held at Faxon Hall, Quincy, on Tuesday next, April 7th, at 10 o'clock A. M. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will unite with the Quincy Reform Club in entertaining the members of the convention, and will leave nothing undone to make this a profitable and interesting occasion. At the meeting in the evening, at 7.30, good speakers from different clubs in the state will be present. The public are invited.

JOHN D. NUTTING, President;
HENRY CHUBBUCK, Secretary of Quincy Reform Club.

Atlantic News.

There seems to be an unusually good demand for houses in this village this spring. Many lookers around were out last week through here and Wollaston; twelve in number in one day. Mr. Alfred Thayer advertised his house on Billings street to let, all furnished, from June 1st to Oct. 1st, as his family is going to Green Harbor for the summer. The first applicant being Mr. F. M. Faber and wife of Baltimore, who looked it over and at once engaged it. Mr. Thayer will take his meals with them. The advertisement brought many applicants, both for furnished and unfurnished houses, who desire to come to this healthy little village for the spring and summer; and the writer would advise those who have property of this nature to advertise it, and would state that our local paper, the PATIOT, is a good medium, as it is sold at all of the principal news stands in this vicinity, and at the Old Colony railroad depot, Boston.

On Friday evening, the 27th of March, many of the friends from Atlantic and Lower Mills, stole in to see Mr. George L. Burt, 164 K street, South Boston, formerly of this village, and took him completely by surprise by presenting him with several articles of utility; among them was a nice pipe and a splendid parlor-desk. They caught him so suddenly that he forgot to get shaved, and it made the luxuriant growth of hair on the top of his head stand on end every time the door bell rang.

This was his forty-sixth birthday, and the occasion was greatly enlivened by our townsmen, Messrs. D. and H., as well as the ladies, C. and C., from the Lower Mills; and by some nice music on the piano by Misses Cox and Caldwell. All went for a good time, such as they can always enjoy at Mr. Burt's. After the usual games and social entertaining, Mr. D. sounded the bugle for a call, not to arms, but for the stomach, at which all responded faithfully; after enjoying more games all retired in good order to their several homes, saying to each other, "Haven't we had a good time."

The new houses being built on Walnut street by S. D. Ramsdell are nearly completed. They received their second coat of paint this week.

The Congregational Chapel is approaching completion. The walls have been plastered.

C. F. Foss and family have moved to Dedham. The house is being repaired and will be occupied by other parties the first of May.

Rumor has it that Atlantic, which never had a church until this year, is now to have two. Following up the rumor we found that a few residents met at the house of Chase Parker one evening last week to consider the feasibility of building a Methodist Church. The idea seemed to meet with favor, and resulted in the choice of Messrs. Chase Parker, B. R. Redman, Wilson G. Hammond and Dexter Ramsdell as a committee, to see if a desirable lot could be obtained. The committee will call another meeting when they are ready to report.

As the lease of the land on which the John Quincy Adams Chemical is located does not expire until September, and as the town would have to borrow money if it should build now, it is believed that the new engine house will not be built right away. No action was taken at the meeting of the committee on Friday evening of last week.

Wollaston.

Mrs John D. Kibby is very sick with lung fever.

D. Sage and family moved this week to Granite avenue, Milton.

Polo teams from factory and foundry cross sticks at the Coliseum next Tuesday evening.

Aunt Polly Bassett's "singing skewl" will be at the Congregational Church Thursday evening, April 16.

Union services were held at the Congregational Church on Fast morning, and were conducted by the Rev. F. H. Knights.

Wednesday evening, (April 1st) eighteen or twenty of the young friends of Miss Mable Corthell, surprised her at her father's residence on Newton street. It being April Fool's Day the guests were slow in arriving and many required a verbal assurance that it was no fool's errand. About nine however the festivities began and an unusually good time was enjoyed, and the hand of the clock sped so rapidly that the Quincy ones lost the train and enjoyed the long walk home.

Mrs. M. Miner while getting off the train at South Boston on Thursday of last week, fell and cut her forehead. She had eight stitches taken, in her forehead, and she is now doing nicely.

On Thursday evening the Officers of Merry Mount Division were installed. Several errors occurring in the list published last week, we reprint the new officers.

W. P. George E. Thomas.
W. A. F. P. Whitman.
R. S. Lizzie Griffin.
A. R. S. John R. Richards.
F. S. May Wilbur.
F. Albert E. Rhodes.
Chap. Carrie L. P. Coochier.
Con. James Craig.
A. C. Amilie C. McCauley.
I. S. Agnes E. Griffin.
O. S. David F. Badger.
Pianist. Lorenzo Buckman.
P. W. P. I. G. Wilbur.

The Hingham Journal says: Another instance of the appreciation of Hingham teachers. John S. Emerson of the Elm street grammar school has been tendered and will accept a position at the Wollaston school at Quincy, and will enter upon his duties the 13th of this month. While we regret exceedingly to lose Mr. Emerson, for he is an excellent teacher, who is endeared to his scholars, popular with his friends and associate teachers, we congratulate him upon his good fortune, for he goes on a higher salary, and to engage in teaching in what are considered, perhaps, representative schools."

A WEARY OX. Last Tuesday evening as Mr. Howard of Holbrook, was passing through town with a small drove of cattle, from Brighton, a lame ox became so weary when near Mr. George J. Jones' harness shop as to be unable to proceed further, and laid down. No urging or persuasion from the sidewalk committee could induce him to get up, and Mr. Howard was compelled to leave him. After a short rest Mr. N. B. Furnald, Mr. Jones and others got him up again and after a while he was driven into Mr. Jones' yard, where he remained all night; about eight o'clock next morning Mr. Howard returned for the beast, and he started off quite smart, much improved for his rest.

Village Improvement.

The first regular meeting of the Quincy Village Improvement Society for this year will take place at the residence of Judge Bumpus, on Goffe street, next Tuesday evening. All friends of the society are invited. The society at Wollaston is doing well in beginning work. Our neighbors at South Weymouth are going to have a social supper at their annual meeting, to be followed by exercises in a neighboring hall. Representatives from other rural societies are invited.

Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, has appointed April 16th as an "Arbor Day," and an organization called the "Patrons of Husbandry," in this state, recommend the 30th of April as a day when the people will plant trees in the streets, and on their own places, and hold public exercises in the evening.

Thus this movement is growing; a desire to elevate and refine communities by diffusing beauty and increasing our love of our homes by all means that can make them beautiful.

Our Quincy society needs a place where small trees can be transplanted for future use, when our streets are in a better condition to receive them.

A friend has given us a few trees, and another offers to improve some place to be selected in West Quincy.

The hollow near Granite street, beyond the engine house on School street, might easily be converted into a green slope that would rest the eye, and convert a blemish in the landscape into a thing of beauty.

There is such a space, only a larger one, we think, on Church street in South Weymouth; trees break the smooth surface of green, and the gently rising hill-side in just such a relative position as this, with a street all around it, is one of the most graceful and beautiful spots we know, suggesting infinite rest and peace. We hope many will see this place in Quincy through the eyes of the Village Improvement Society.

ANNIE E. FAXON, Sec.

Milton.

During the cold snap of a few weeks ago, the pipes in Faulkner's greenhouses froze and burst, and many of his plants were ruined.

A petition has been circulated this week asking the Road Commissioners for a hearing on the proposed road from the East Milton depot to Hunt's corner.

The East Milton Congregational Church held a parish meeting at the church, Monday evening. Jesse Bunton was chosen chairman. But little business was transacted, and the meeting adjourned to the last Monday in April.

E. A. Harris is going to England soon.

The pupils and teachers of the public schools are enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

There has been a change this week in the keeper of the almshouse; Calvin Sanford and wife retiring.

John Maloy, who has kept the house on the Dagin estate, has leased the S. K. Bailey estate on Pleasant street.

Mrs. A. C. Taylor has recovered from her recent severe illness, and is very smart for a lady of eighty.

The East Milton Division, S. of T., elected the following officers Tuesday evening, and they will be installed next Tuesday:

W. P. O. A. Andrews.
W. A. Mrs. Josiah Babcock.
R. S. John P. Adams.
A. R. S. Miss Annie Alden.
F. S. Mrs. Julia E. West.
T. Miss M. A. Babcock.
Chap. Frank Kemp.
Con. Mrs. James McKellar.
A. C. Thomas M'Quirk.
I. S. Walter Williams.
O. S. William Craig.
O. Miss Grace Webster.

FOR THE SPRING MONTHS. The short and pointed reminders of Messrs. Macullar, Parker & Company appear in the leading newspapers from time to time, and are found to answer every purpose of that firm in the way of advertising. No words need be thrown away in simply calling attention to the specialities of each season in their turn. To-day's announcement refers to elegant spring overcoats, business suits in medium weights, and to an extra large assortment of trousers. In extent, organization and reputation the workshops of this firm are not exceeded, and but seldom equalled, on either side of the Atlantic. The services of more than six hundred people are required to keep the wheels of business moving in the Boston warehouse and manufactory. The Providence branch is the same in kind, but is not carried on on so large a scale at present. Many nations contribute to make up the immense stock of piece goods carried by this house, but Scotland leads them all with her exquisite and unrivaled loom-work from along the banks of the Tweed and the Yarrow. No person need hesitate to trade with a house so well equipped at all points, and with a record for fair dealing extending back for nearly thirty-three years.—Congregationalist.

THANKS. We have received from Mr. Arthur B. Smith, a Quincy boy, residing in Lincoln, Neb., copies of papers printed in that place, also a copy of the Omaha Bee, a handsomely illustrated paper printed in Omaha. The buildings shown in this paper are very large and handsome. Mr. Smith will please accept our thanks for these favors.

Mortgagee's Sale.

UNDER and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Ezekiel C. Sargent to Joseph W. Coburn, dated May 13, 1882 and recorded with Norfolk County Deeds, lib. 537, fol. 220, and for breach of the conditions therein contained and for the purpose of foreclosing same, will be sold at public auction in Quincy, in said County, on the premises first hereinafter described, on April 28, 1885, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage deed. Said premises being described in said Mortgage deed as follows: A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Quincy aforesaid on the easterly side of Howard street and the northerly side of Howard avenue, and shown on a plan of land situated at Quincy Neck, owned by E. C. Sargent, 1881, drawn by Whitman & Breck, Surveyors, to be recorded herewith, bounded and described as follows, viz:—

Beginning at the southwest corner of said premises at the junction of Howard avenue and Howard street, as shown on said plan, thence running southeasterly on said Howard avenue six hundred and forty-seven feet; thence turning and running northeasterly on land of George J. Sargent about eight hundred and thirty feet to the centre of Bent's Creek shown on said plan; thence turning and running along the centre of said Creek to Howard st., thence turning and running southwesterly on said Howard st. two hundred and eighty and four-tenths feet to land of Newcomb; thence running southeasterly on said Newcomb's land forty-one and seventy-five one hundredths feet; thence northeasterly on said land nineteen and three-tenths feet; thence running southeasterly on said land one hundred and nineteen and five-tenths feet; thence running southwesterly on said land seventy-six and twelve-hundredths feet; thence northwesterly on said land one hundred and sixty and ninety-two one-hundredths feet to Howard street; thence running southwesterly on said Howard street fifteen and two-tenths feet; thence running southeasterly on land formerly of one White, and land of Samuels four hundred and forty and eighty-two one-hundredths feet; thence running southwesterly on said Samuel's land two hundred feet; thence running northwesterly on said Samuel's land four hundred and forty-seven and six-tenths feet to Howard street; thence running southerly on said Howard street one hundred and thirty-three and seventy-two one-hundredths feet to land of Moynahan; thence running easterly on said Moynahan's land one hundred and twenty-seven and forty-five one-hundredths feet; thence turning and running southerly on said Moynahan's land ninety-three feet; thence running westerly on said land of Moynahan one hundred and twenty-four feet to said Howard street; thence running southerly on said Howard st. one hundred and thirty-two and three-tenths feet to the point of beginning.

Also, a certain other piece of land shown on said plan bounded and described as follows, viz:—Westerly by said Howard street one hundred and forty-six and ninety-five one-hundredths feet; southerly by land of H. H. Faxon one hundred and eighty-eight and five-tenths feet; easterly by a passageway shown on said plan one hundred and fifty-four and nine-tenths feet; and northerly by other land of said Faxon one hundred and eighty-one and nine-tenths feet, containing twenty-seven-thousand nine-hundred and twenty-one square feet according to said plan.

A portion of the premises first above described is subject to a mortgage of two thousand dollars to Daniel Baxter of Quincy.

The Quincy Granite Co.,

F. J. FULLER, PROP.,

West Quincy, Mass.

ONE of the oldest and most reliable firms in New England, would respectfully inform the public that they are better than ever prepared to furnish the finest quality of Granite work that can be produced. Our facilities are such that we can furnish all work in this line at the lowest prices. Being the entire owner of one of the oldest Dark Blue Granite Quarries in Quincy, Mass., our Quarry has a reputation far above any other of its kind, and the stone being procured from so great a depth (having been worked down about one hundred and fifty feet) that we obtain a richness and purity of color that cannot be excelled. We guarantee that this stock will retain its rich color and polish longer than any other Dark Blue granite that is now produced. We have also control of a superior White Granite Quarry in New England, and with our constantly improving machinery, are doing the best quality of work.

All our stock is carefully selected from the quarries, and as the most skilled workmen are employed to oversee the work, we are willing to guarantee entire satisfaction in all cases before the work is accepted. Persons wishing to purchase any Granite Memorial Work, such as will find it decidedly in their interest to communicate with us for any information desired, as we keep on hand a large supply of designs, which we will furnish for the inspection of our patrons.

Parties can order work of us at much less expense than of dealers in their own vicinity, many of whom buy their stock and work of us. We will gladly answer all communications and submit designs if required, with confidence that our prices and workmanship will secure for us an extended patronage.

Thankful for the liberal patronage which we have received during the last ten years, we expect a continuance of the same and respectfully solicit your orders.

Important Raid.

One of the largest seizures ever made by the Quincy Police was on Monday evening, it requiring the services of all the force, the specials, the new deputy sheriff and even the Selectmen. After a four days' fast they rendezvoused at the Quincy depot shortly after six o'clock, and slyly took the 6.32 train for Boston. There they divided into squads, and after a short skirmish attacked Young's Hotel on all sides. The brave force were marshaled by the Chief of Police, Joseph Warren Hayden, and special officer Henry H. Faxon. Each man knew what depended upon him and went nobly forward; but the proprietor of the hotel had been informed of the proposed raid and consequently it was not an easy matter to capture the fort, nearly two hours being required. Reporters had got wind of the affair and accordingly were at the front and we are thus able to give the particulars.

The search warrant was as follows, and was read by officer Faxon.

MR. CHIEF AND FELLOW-MEMBERS OF THE QUINCY POLICE ASSOCIATION—I am happy to greet you on this, our anniversary, under the auspicious and pleasing circumstances which surround us as an organization. For several years the law-abiding citizens of the town, at their annual election, have indorsed our actions by directly or indirectly giving us another lease of official life. Good citizens are increasing in numbers, and rascals are leaving our borders, many of them with warrants behind them. Distance between them and us "lends enchantment to the view."

I do not believe that there is a town in this Commonwealth, possessing a police organization, which has struck such terror to the hearts of rumsellers and rascals of all grades as has the Quincy Police Association. To perpetuate ourselves we must do our duty in the future, as in the past, remembering that as election day draws near each of us has a political obligation to perform to our constituents as well as ourselves.

Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and we can learn wisdom even from the rumsellers, who know that to be perfectly safe they must politically manage as they do in this city of Boston, that in the event of being convicted their cases will be placed on file, nol. prossed, or by some other hocus pocus arrangement justice be defeated. Elected or appointed by those who seek to build up the honor and prosperity of Quincy, let us do our duty unflinchingly, and thus defeat any combination that the rumsellers and their co-workers in disorder may bring to bear against us.

The two hours' search resulted in finding:

Bluepoints on Shell.
SOUP.
Mock Turtle, Consumme a la Royale.
FISH.

Radishes and Cucumbers.
REMOVES.

Mine host Whipple wished to know if his case could not be heard that evening, as he could not spare the time to attend court. Accordingly the court was organized with G. Harvey Field as judge, George H. Locke appeared for Mr. Faxon and Robert J. Williams for the defendant. The jury were E. A. Perkins (foreman) Frank A. Spear, A. G. Olney, Marcus E. Wight, E. H. Richardson, C. A. Spear, Mark E. Hanson, George O. Langley, N. B. Furnald, John F. Hunt, Samuel B. Turner and Walter H. Ripley. Joseph Warren Hayden, William C. Seelye, Charles N. Hunt Amos L. Litchfield and Edward A. Spear testified to having obtained several of the different kinds enumerated above, but when questioned as to how much they paid each replied "nothing." Henry H. Faxon testified he had received samples of the above and had paid high for them, but had found that they contained more than 3 per cent. Lawyer Williams in summing up the case thought no evidence had been given showing a purchase and that the transaction was merely a "treat," and the jury looked at it in the same light. All returned to the temperate town of Quincy by the late train. The reporters on the occasion were Messrs. Sproul Marden, Green and Prescott.

GET THE BEST. There is no value in knowledge unless utilized. Success or gain is not always luck. Economy proves luck the exception.

Every manufactured article has its degree of merit.

In the household, soap is very important, greatly increasing or diminishing expense. Some manufacturers prefer to let the quality of their goods guarantee legitimate results, rather than compete for profit in making inferior grades. Adulterations and excess of caustics in soap and washing powders, make a continuous demand for fabrics made worthless by their use.

The petty difference in cost between the spurious and reliable article, bears no comparison to that increase of expense in dry goods.

Facts, therefore, suggest the use of the best of this commodity.

WELCOME SOAP is recommended for the excellence of a pure and superior washing quality.

In the laundry it maintains its well-deserved reputation as the standard of all laundry soaps.

☞ The elevated railroads of New York are now carrying at the rate of over 100,000,000 per annum, equal annually to eighty times the inhabitants of the city, twenty times the inhabitants of the State, and more than twice the entire population of the United States by the last census.

The New Orleans Custom House.

The Boston correspondent of the Hingham Journal writes in the issue of March 27th the following concerning the New Orleans Custom House.

"The building was to be of stone—granite, lined with brick; the roof of iron, etc. The specifications having been given out, there was a competition between the granite quarries of Quincy and those of North River for the stone. Quincy obtained it. Then came up a dispute with the Quincy quarries. They could not agree upon a fixed rate for the stone, and the contract lapsed.

Just thirty-six years ago this question was settled, and queerly so. Luther Munn, of the firm of Richards, Munn & Co., called at No. 19 South Market street. The firm was J. Silloway & Co., and a young man very much resembling your correspondent was the Co. Mr. Munn in a very few words stated his proposition, and that was to contract for the freighting of the custom-house stone to New Orleans. The junior partner, after listening to the terms, at once accepted the contract.

The first freight was by the brig Sam & Ben of Kennebunk, owned by Mosher of that place, and commanded by Captain Smith. The agents in Boston were Daniel Deshon & Stackpole. The brig loaded at Quincy Point, with 190 tons in the hold and 60 tons on deck. Then followed the brig Telos, the barque Lellewellyn and the brig Helvellyn. When these four vessels arrived at New Orleans the authorities would not allow them to land their cargoes for fear of breaking in the levee. It was some time before Quartermaster Hunt of the U. S. A., a genial old gentleman and a thorough officer, got it through his wool as to how the difficulty could be remedied, and the idea he obtained from your correspondent.

Of all the parties engaged in that New Orleans custom-house contract there are living Frank H. Forbes, who made the contract for freight, and Messrs. Sargent, Field, Barker, Penniman and Chapin, the original quarriers of the stone. As this was essentially a Quincy contract and the leading parties Quincy people, I propose to extend the details in another letter.

☞ Mrs. Charles Morrill of South Weymouth, who keeps a variety of pure breed fowl, added to her stock the past year the famous Wyandottes,—thirteen pullets that were hatched in July. They commenced to lay the first of January. In the month of February they laid 334 eggs, an average of 10.93 per day, which sold for $3 for a setting of 13 eggs. One of the pullets laid thirty-four eggs without pausing a day. Sixteen very fine Plymouth Rocks laid 185 eggs in the same time. Both flocks were fed and cared for alike—mixed feed in the morning, wheat, oats and barley at noon, and warm, whole corn at night, with plenty of fresh water.

YACHT RULES. The regatta committee of the Hull Yacht Club has decided upon the following rules to govern the regattas of the season: Length of course for first and second classes, 11 1-2 miles; for third class, 7 1-2 miles; for fourth, fifth and sixth classes, 6 miles. Limit of time, four, three and three hours respectively. The "one gun start" of last year will be used this season.

ACCIDENT. While engaged in splitting a stone near McKenzie's & Paterson's quarry on Saturday morning last, Robert Lonberr, a man of about sixty years, had a part of the block fall on him, breaking his leg. He was taken to his home and Dr. Donovan called. As he is an old man it is feared it will go hard with him.

YOUNG MEN. The State Agricultural college has eighty free scholarships waiting for young men who may wish to become educated farmers. If any of our young men desire to receive the benefits of the college they can do so on application to that institution.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, March 30, 1885.

It looks as if there will be at last genuine retrenchment and reform in the Government offices of Washington. Even that usually serene, imperturbable body, the United States Senate, has caught the infection. It has become alarmed at its own extravagance and has decided its contingent fund, as well as the secrets of its executive sessions, must be protected. Committeemen, who did nothing all winter, desired to employ clerks, stenographers, messengers, and to travel about the country all summer, stopping at this pleasant place for a time, then at that; the expense of all to be paid, of course by the public. From time to time the Senate had accorded these privileges to a large number of its committees. Other committees asked permission to sit during the Congressional recess, with similar favors, until the contingent fund was threatened with exhaustion. Senators grew frightened at their own prodigality, held caucuses, had lively discussions and voted for retrenchment. The junketing excursions are all nipped in the bud. Then it was agreed to cut down the list of committees to a severely utilitarian standard. It was decided that the Ben Butler house on Capitol hill, which has been used as an annex to the Capitol, for Senatorial committees at a cost of $15,000 a year, shall be given up. It was discovered that over three hundred persons on the Senate rolls are costing the Government about $350,000 a year, which suggested the possibility of saving a few dollars in that direction.

That efficiency and economy are to be the rule in the executive departments of the Government during the Cleveland administration has, by this time, been made pretty clear. Therefore it behoove the legislative department, particularly that branch of it which is under Republican control, to tolerate no laziness or extravagance in its domain. The good resolutions of this week were led by the Republican Senators, and they deserve commendation for voting to reduce the number of underworked and overpaid employes of their honorable, but by no means frugal, body. The thoughtful constituent, too, will be flattered by just such little attentions to his prejudices in favor of reform.

It was arranged by the Senators that the present extra session should close last week, but the President asked them to wait another week. He desires to have all his diplomatic nominations confirmed, as ministers and consuls would not like to be sent to foreign countries, without their tenure of office being made clear and final. His appointments for the missions to England, France, Germany, Turkey, and Mexico, were much discussed during the week, and on yesterday ex-Governor Jarvis' name was sent in to be confirmed as Minister to Brazil. The President decided to give this honor to North Carolina, and the delegation from that state, decided in caucus, that Mr. Jarvis was the proper man. A position much coveted by many applicants, that of Commissioner of Agriculture, goes to Missouri and to Col. Coleman. Senator Cockrell was instrumental in getting this appointment, having worked early and late for the nominee. Two Virginians were applicants for the place, Mr. Beverly, and ex-Senator Withers. The latter was indorsed by the state delegation, but the President concluded he could not afford to side with either faction, and therefore left the Old Dominion out again.

Yesterday for the first time since his inauguration, President Cleveland attended divine service. He entered a small Presbyterian church on Four-and-a-half street, under the pastorate of Dr. Sunderland, it is a plain unfashionable church. The President occupied a pew which he rented a week ago, and for which he paid a quarter's rent in advance. In this matter as well as in other things, Mr. Cleveland shows originality. He is opposed to appearing in church as a side show of a wordly aristocratic congregation. It cannot be denied that since the time the Metropolitan church, under Rev. John P. Newman, was arranged for the accommodation of Gen. Grant, the Members of the Cabinet, and the Justices of the Supreme Court, there has been a scramble for the place of "Court Church" in Washington.

When ex-President Arthur took his final departure from the city on Saturday, a large crowd of distinguished people gathered at the station to see him off. Since he left the White House on inauguration day, he has been the recipient of the most lavish hospitality from Washington society. It is doubtful if there ever was a more popular President than Mr. Arthur, and now that he has gone, everybody has something good to say of him. ADAMS.

SCHEDULE OF GAMES. One evening recently, representatives from the Quincy, Chelsea, Roxbury and Brockton cricket clubs met in Boston and formed a league, and arranged for the following matches:

THE CENTURY. The April number comes to us freighted with rich and interesting matter. The opening article is "A Florentine Mosaic," and is the second illustrated paper on Florence. To those interested in reading travels, "From Puget Sound to the Upper Columbia," accompanying which are views of Mount Tacoma and the Tyler glacier, will be found much to amuse and entertain. Edward Eggleston's "Colonists at Home," is one of the most popular of the series. "Phases of State Legislation" reveals the dark side of the legislative picture. The anecdotes and incidents of legislative experience enlivens the paper. Admiral David D. Porter contributes to the war series, "The opening of the Lower Mississippi." Accompanying the article are portraits of distinguished naval officers, and more than twenty-five maps, plans and pictures of incidents from personal observations.

The fiction of the number includes the sixth part of "The rise of Silas Lapham," by Mr. Howells; the third part of "The Bostonians," by Henry Jamas; and a humorous short story by Col. R. M. Johnston, entitled "The Meditations of Mr. Archie Kittrell."

The first edition of the April number was 225,000. The Century is for sale at E. B. Souther's.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate IN QUINCY.

BY virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by the late Charles Hobart to the late Edward A. Adams, dated April 27th, A. D. 1882, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 536, folio 169, for breach of the conditions thereof, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises hereinafter described, on THURSDAY, the sixteenth day of April, A. D. 1885, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage, and therein bounded and described as follows, to wit:

"A certain lot of land containing one-half acre, with all the buildings thereon, being the same premises conveyed to me by John Quincy Adams, by his deed dated June 11, 1851, to be found recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Lib 96, Fol. 18, in which deed, said premises are bounded and described as follows, viz: as "one half-acre of land situated on the brow of Penn's Hill, in said Quincy, fronting on the road leading from the County of Plymouth road to the Rev. Mr. Storrs' Meeting House, beginning eight rods, more or less, distant southwesterly from the corner of the road, running eight rods south, fifty-nine degrees West in the course of the Road, then at right angles, ten rods down the Hill North, thirty-one degrees West thence eight rods north, fifty-nine degree East, parallel to the line upon the road and thence ten rods South, thirty-one degrees East to the place of beginning."

Said premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage, held by Jeremiah Nightingale, of Quincy, upon said premises, for six hundred dollars and accrued interest, and also subject to all unpaid taxes, outstanding tax or assessments, if any. Terms of sale, fifty dollars cash at sale, and balance in ten days thereafter.

HE FELL IN THE STREETS

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience and Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and have had plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. I think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank God, finally then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the symptoms gradually abated, and I have had no trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES H. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others. If you desire to do so

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ### FAITH.

With constant faith surpassing doubt
I stand and watch the tide go out;
That 'twill come back I say to you
I do not know, and yet I do.

At eventide I see the day
Put night on guard and go away.
Will morning come the mist to woo?
I do not know, and yet I do.

I see the sere that autumns bring,
Will verdure come with waking spring?
My faith alone can answer true—
I do not know, and yet I do.

We see our loved ones droop and die,
Hath heaven a brighter life on high—
Is death the vale that leads thereto?
I do not know, and yet I do.

Farm and Garden.

Early Peas.

There are some vegetables which we can buy in market as good as we can grow at home. Peas are not one of them. We get them from the South, and they are very fair, but lack the delicacy of those from our own garden. It is desirable, therefore, to get peas as early as possible. The sweet wrinkled peas are not, and never will be, as hardy as the smooth varieties. The same is true of sweet corn; the extra early kinds are not as sweet as the later varieties; but, like the peas, they are very good until we get something better. The small, hardy varieties of peas, like the Early Kent, will stand rough treatment. They can be sown the moment frost is out of the surface soil, and after they are up, it is seldom, if ever, that they are seriously injured by frost. A warm, sandy soil is desirable, with a southern exposure, and if on the eastern or southern side of a wall or board fence or building, so much the better. The soil can hardly be too rich. It is a mistake to spade fine, light sandy soil deep for early peas. The surface soil, which has been exposed to the sun is many degrees warmer than the soil below, which has only just thawed. The later varieties, planted when the soil is dry and warm, can be covered with two, three, four, or even five inches of soil, deeper or shallower as the soil is heavy or light; but the small, early peas should rarely be covered over two inches deep, and if the soil is wet and cold, an inch is sufficient. As soon as the peas appear, draw some earth up to the row with a hoe or rake, and if the soil is dry and light, half an inch or so of soil may be pulled between or over the peas. If the soil is moist and heavy, it may be well to scatter a little stable manure on the side and on the top of the row. A board placed edgewise on the north side of the row will reflect the rays of the sun.

Another method of hasteniag early peas is to soak them in warm water for twenty-four hours and then mix them with moss or light sand and keep them warm and moist until they sprout. Then sow them in the ordinary way—using plenty of seed. We have sown them when sprouted an inch long, but it is better, if the weather is not suitable, to check the growth of the peas in the house by placing them in a cellar or other cold place. If the land is rich, thick planting is desirable as it favors early maturity. We make the row three or four inches wide and deep, and sow the peas in the rows, for their whole width, almost as thick as they will lie without touching each other.—American Agriculturalist for April.

The Canker Worm.

The first warm, pleasant day after the frost is out of the surface of the ground the grub of this pest of the apple orchard will appear on the trunk of the trees. If the trees have been supplied with patent protectors it is important that they should be carefully examined to see that the troughs are tight, and that there are no open spaces between the protectors and the trunks of the trees large enough for the grubs to pass through. The troughs should be well cleaned out and filled with oil; if this work be properly done at the right season there will be but little danger of the trees being injured by the canker worms, providing the protectors are occasionally examined to see that the oil has not leaked out or been bridged over by the dead bodies of the dead grubs.

Trees that have not been provided with protéctors should be at once provided with strips of tarred paper, at least one foot wide, around each trunk; this should be covered with some sticky substance. Tree ink is usually used, but a sticky substance may be made of linseed oil and rosin that will last longer than tree ink. Whatever substance is used should be applied as often as it becomes hard enough for the grubs to pass over.

If there could be united action among the people, the canker worm could be killed out in a few years, but so long as a few will allow their trees to become covered with worms, so long will the more careful have every year to fight the enemy. Until within a few years it has been supposed that the only remedy was to prevent the grub from ascending the tree to lay her eggs, but recent experiments prove that, even after the worms are hatched, they can easily be destroyed by syringing the trees with water that has Paris green mixed with it, at the rate of one teaspoonful to each two gallons; the water is sprinkled on with a small garden syringe; the work can be done very rapidly. The only objection to this remedy is the danger of such free use of a deadly poison; it should never be used when there is any possibility of its falling on growing lettuce, dandelions or any plant the leaves of which are to beeaten. It is very easy for very serious consequences to occur, by a very little carelessness in the use of a poison of so deadly nature as Paris green.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

A young lady being taken to task for tight lacing, said she resorted to the practice on purely economical grounds.

"How is that?" asked her reprover.

"Why," she replied, "I lace tight simply to prevent waistfulness.

Quack—"So you prefer my medicines to those of Dr. Pillsbury?"

Mrs. Mulligan—"Och, indade, docther, dear, ye're a deal better than the other old 'umbug."

"Because," said another, "he turns white when he pops."

Household Receipts.

VEAL STEW. Cut four pounds of veal into strips three inches long and one inch thick, peel twelve large potatoes and cut into slices one inch thick, spread layer of veal on bottom of pot, sprinkle in a little salt and pepper, then layer of potatoes, then layer of veal seasoned as before. Use up veal thus: Over last layer of veal put layer of slices of salt pork, and over the whole a layer of potatoes. Pour on water till it rises an inch over the whole. Cover close, heat fifteen minutes and simmer an hour.

FRUIT LAYER CAKE. This is a delicious novelty in cake making. Take one cup of sugar, half a cup of butter, one cup and a half of flour, half a cup of wine, one cup of raisins, two eggs and half a teaspoonful of soda; put these ingredients together with care, just as if it were a very rich cake; bake it in three layers and put frosting between—the frosting to be made of the whites of two eggs with enough powdered sugar to make it thick. The top of the cake may be frosted if you choose.

ORANGE JUMBLES. Rind and juice of two sour oranges (rind of one only, if preferred); grate the rind. One and one-half cups finest granulated sugar, one egg, one-half cup butter, one-half cup cream, sour and thick, one teaspoonful soda dissolved in the cream, four cups of flour according to the size of the oranges. Roll thick as jumbles and sprinkle sugar on.

Alcohol,—Effect upon the Lungs.

CONTINUED.

Here we can see how certainly the presence of alcohol interferes with the red corpuscles in their task of carrying oxygen. "Even so small a quantity as one part of alcohol to 500 of the blood will materially check the absorption of oxygen in the lungs." The cells unable to take up oxygen, retain their carbonic acid gas, and so return from the lungs, carrying back, to poison the system, the refuse matter the body has sought to throw off. Thus the lungs no longer furnish properly oxygenized blood. The rapid stroke of the heart, already spoken of, is followed by a corresponding quickening of the respiration. The flush of the cheek is repeated in the reddened mucous membrane lining the lungs. When this "vascular enlargement" becomes permanent, and the highly albuminous membrane of the air-cells is hardened and thickened as well as congested, the Osmose of the gases to and fro through its pores can no longer be prompt and free as before. Even when the effect passes off in a few days after the occasional indulgence, there has been during that time a diminished supply of the life-giving oxygen furnished to the system; weakness follows, and in case of hard drinkers there is a marked liability to epidemics.*

Physicans tell us, also, that there is a peculiar form of consumption known as Alcoholic Phthisis caused by long continued and excessive use of liquor. It generally attacks those whose splendid physique has enabled them to "drink deep" with apparent impunity.

This type of consumption appears late in life and is considered incurable. Severe cases of pneumonia are also generally fatal with inebriates.

*"There is no doubt that alcohol alters and impairs tissues so that they are more prone to disease."—(DR. G. K. SABINE.)

This and That.

☞ Dr. Warren of the Massachusetts General Hospital, in Boston, reports that in his experience of forty years at that institution the whole number of cases of cancer on the lip was seventy-seven, of which only four were females. Forty-four of the men were smokers, and of the four women three admitted that they smoked pipes.

☞ A bank in a small town in New York suspended payment because the clerk of the time lock in its safe door ran down at 6 o'clock in the morning, and, consequently, never reached 9 o'clock, when the lock was set to open. It took five days to get into the safe.

☞ In several South American countries it is customary to have those attending the funeral of any prominent citizen sign a testimonial to the worth of the deceased, or pass a series of resolutions setting forth his merits and distinguished traits. These tributes are placed in the coffin.

☞ By means of a simple and conviently worked device of coiled spring, an English inventor has succeeded in dispensing with the need of driving sewing machines by hand or foot; a few turns of a handle winds up sufficient power to keep a machine going at full speed over an hour. It is completely under control as to the rate of stitching, and can be applied to any existing machine at moderate cost.

☞ Although three, four, five or six cents seem very little for the use of $1 for a year, it is surprising what a large sum it amounts to when left for a number of years, as in the case of a Connecticut man who in 1838 commenced making deposits in a savings bank. His total deposits from that date until 1885 amounted to $1962.25. Between 1838 and 1858 he drew from the bank $1270.70; and yet, a few days since, on having his book written up and balanced, he was found to have a balance on deposit amounting to $11,273.33.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude?" Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSIAH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange.

New York, Nov. 25, 1884.

Analyses heretofore made by noted chemists show the amount of Tartrate of Lime found by them in different samples of Royal Baking Powder as follows:

| | Per Cent of Tartrate of Lime found in Royal Baking Powder. |
|---|---|
| WM. M. HABIRSHAW, F. C. S., Chemist of the N. Y. State Agricultural Society. | 5.05 |
| STILLWELL & GLADDING, Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange. | 5.00 |

These analyses show that the Tartrate of Lime which the Royal Baking Powder Company condemns in its advertisements has been found in its own baking powder.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Alum, Lime, Potash, or Bone Phosphates, and it is ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM ADULTERATIONS.

THE ROYAL AN
Ammoniacal AND Short Weight Baking Powder
VIEWS OF THE STATE CHEMIST OF MAINE.

I have procured in our open market and analyzed samples of CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER, and the ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

CLEVELAND'S POWDER I find to be composed of good, pure, wholesome materials properly combined for producing the maximum of gas, AND IT IS IN EVERY RESPECT A HEALTHFUL AND DESIRABLE ARTICLE.

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER I find to be more complicated in composition, and while the material it is made from is fairly good, it contains one ingredient that should not enter into the composition of any baking powder, namely: CARBONATE OF AMMONIA. This is a strong alkali, UNFIT FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION, and I am surprised that this chemical should be used when it is so well known to be INJURIOUS TO HEALTH IN ANYTHING USED FOR FOOD. In comparison there should be no hesitation in choosing Cleveland's Baking Powder for purity and wholesomeness.

Cleveland's Powder gives off its gas slowly and evenly, while the Royal passes off much quicker. It is perhaps needless to say that in this respect the Cleveland Powder has the advantage.

The samples of the Royal Powder, which I have carefully weighed, are almost invariably short weight, from 1-8 to 1-2 oz., while the Cleveland Powder holds full weight.

Poetry.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew what forms were fainting
For the shade that we should fling,
If we knew what lips were parching
For the water we should bring,
We would haste with eager footsteps,
We would work with willing hands,
Bearing cups of cooling water,
Planting rows of shading palms.

If we knew when friends around us
Closely press to say "good bye,"
Which among the lips that kiss us
First should 'neath the daisies lie,
We would clasp our arms around them,
Looking on them through our tears;
Tender words of love eternal
We would whisper in their ears.

If we knew what lives were darkened
By some thoughtless word of ours,
Which had ever lain among them
Like the frost among the flowers,
Oh! with what sincere repentings,
With what anguish of regret,
While our eyes were overflowing,
We would say, Forgive! Forget!

If we knew. Alas! and do we
Ever care to seek or know
Whether bitter herbs or flowers
In our neighbor's garden grow?
God forgive us! lest hereafter
Our hearts break to hear Him say,
"Careless child, I never knew you;
From my presence flee away."

Miscellany.

Glitter and Glare.

"Not even to make my last hour peaceful, Allan?"

"Father, it would darken my whole future."

"It would glorify it, my son! I have lived many years and met so many women that their hearts have been as open books to me; but in no clime, in no land to which I have traveled, have I found the purity, the perfection of innocence, the warmth of heart, the nobility of womanhood, which is the portion of my ward, my adopted child. I would fain leave to your care this fair young blossom, which I have guarded so carefully, my son. Lying upon a bed from which I will never rise, Allan, I would fain give to your keeping a treasure beyond aught I can leave you; a noble-hearted, true-souled comforter.

"Father," the young man's tones vibrated with emotion, "you have been so kind to me always; you have taught me to discern between right and wrong; would there be no wrong in this?—would I not slay the fairest hopes of my life by consenting? This girl is nothing to me—let my heart find its own mate, father! It pains me more than I can tell you to refuse your slightest wish, but I cannot bind my youth in fetters that would so surely chafe my manhood. I cannot woo this girl or ask her for my wife! I cannot, father!"

"You refuse what would have been a richer possession than all the wealth of the Dreemes! But, on the brink of death, I cannot quarrel with my only child. Thank heaven that Leoline knows nothing of this! You will be a brother to her, Allan? Her father was one to me—she will be lonely—alone when I am—dead!"

"I will promise that, gladly," the young man answered; "I can promise that, father! Leoline shall have my best and tenderest care."

From the doorway a slight form darted then—a form which neither the dying man nor his son had seen; and a girl, with white quivering features, and dark, distended eyes, fled from the darkened chamber.

An hour later and Harold Dreeme whispered faintly:

"Allan, give me your hand. Call Leoline."

And Allan grew white, as touching a silver bell which would summon his father's ward, he bent over the face on the pillows.

Through the long hours they watched there, these two, and in the gray of the opening day they knelt together over the body of the dead, the girl sobbing passionately, the man shaking in his silent grief. On the calm face of Harold Dreeme lay death's gray shadow. On the heart of the girl who knelt there lay one as dark and dreary, but without its calm; for with her whole heart she loved this man who scorned to call her wife.

Left early an orphan by her artist father, she had been taken to this home of luxury by her father's friend, and she had grown to regard the young heir as a sort of hero worthy of her worship—a knight who would some time stoop to her and glorify her life with his affection. When she left her knees her girlish face was set and cold—white with her great anguish, but calm through womanly pride—and stooping to kiss the forehead of her guardian, she left the father to his son, and glided out.

And that night there was excitement and fear in the Dreeme mansion. Leoline Elmer could not be found, search as they might. In the light of that summer day she had gone forth, bearing with her naught save the memory of Allan's words: "I do not love this girl! Let my heart choose its mate!"

Allan sought vainly for a trace of her, and wondered as vainly why she had fled.

* * * * * *

"All gaslight and glare!" thought Allan Dreeme, half wearily standing among the guests in the rich saloon of Madam Riviere. The ocean, which laved the rocks below Dreeme hall, rolled between him and his home; but wilder, darker, drearier, was the division between him and the youth in which he had refused to wed his father's ward.

His hostess, noticing the look of weariness upon his face, tapped him lightly with her fan.

"There is one here who will not bore you," she said, laughingly. "You have not met the beautiful artist of whom we all talk because we find no subject so agreeable? Then I will give you a new delight," and, laying her jeweled hand upon his arm, she led him across the wide room to where a regal woman held her court. Where had he seen that face, he wondered, bending low before the stranger, who received him as a queen might. It was dark and calm, but the great eyes, all gloom and power; the red lips, with their delicate curves; the white brow, from which flowed back a mass of dusky, unrippling hair, struck on him like the memory of a half-forgotten dream.

"Have I met you before?" he asked her, later in the night. And he fancied the dark eyes saddened as they turned on him.

"Would you have forgotten me?" she asked with a slow smile. And he told himself, with a new thrill at his heart, that he never would. Once looking on that lovely face would leave it engraved on his heart forever.

For three months from that night Allan Dreeme suffered the agony of an uncertain love. His heart was filled with the glory of her beauty, hope and fear. So many besides himself sought the smiles of this regal, dark-eyed woman, whose brush had made her famous. And then, one night, when he found himself alone with her among the bloom of a conservatory, again at one of Madam Riviere's balls, where, amid "glitter and glare" he had first seen her, a beautiful queen, he laid his heart at her feet and trembled, because she was so long silent.

Within the music swelled; the laughter of the guests reached them, soft, sweet, mirthful. He bent his proud head in meekness, waiting for her answer.

She lifted her drooping eyes and laid a fair hand on his arm, a tremulous joy touching her warm lips.

"Allan," she said softly, "when I went forth from the home your father left you I had no hope of this. I loved you then, Allan, and I heard you say words which I have never forgotten. I heard you tell your father to let your heart choose its own mate. Are you sure—sure, Allan! that your heart has chosen Leoline Elmar?"

"Leoline!" he cried, shrinking, "you are not Leoline!"

"I have not been called so since that summer day, when a heart-sick hopeless child of seventeen, I knew I loved you, Allan, and you gave me no return! But, if you love me—I am doubting still, Allan——"

"Oh, do not doubt my love!" he whispered, taking her hands, and drawing her toward him; "I was then a thoughtless youth, and my father's wish to bind me seemed cruel. I am a man now, and my heart has spoken! Is not the man's love more worthy in your sight than that of the boy could be, my darling? If you loved me then, do not tell me that I caused that love to die!"

"Does love ever die?" she questioned, gently laying her beautiful head on his bosom; "no, Allan, I have not forgotten; it was that love which drove me from Dreeme Hall; it was that which kept me strong, when I found the world so cold and hard to me! It was that for which, when I had gained friends and fortune, I refused a coronet! Ten years stretch drearily between to-night and that summer day, Allan, on which I took my young heart from Dreeme Hall and bore it far from you, with the hope that I might teach it to grow calm; but I could not calm it, my dearest; it would quiver and thrill at thought of you, at the sound of your name. You will have to love me well to erase these sad, sad years, Allan!"

His eyes were misty as he held her to his heart and laid his loving kisses on her beautiful face.

"My love! my love!" he said sadly; "was it but a memory of my coldness, my blindness, that you could take with you? How can I ever win your complete pardon for the past?"

"By loving me well," was the low-toned answer.

"Had you but remained!" he whispered, "my blindness could not have lasted long. I would have wakened to your worth; would have sought your love, long years ago, my peerless darling!"

"Allan," she said gently, passing her jeweled fingers through his hair, "we seldom realize the truth of the poet's words:

"That is best which lieth nearest."

But Allan Dreeme, looking down lovingly upon her face, told himself that he must have been blind in his youth to have looked with indifference on beautiful Leoline Elmer.

About Roller Skating.

A letter on the subject from one of the most eminent physicians of this country says: "Nothing has ever taken with our best citizens as roller skating has done, and nothing ever set on foot for the amusement and physical improvement of young people is more worthy of encouragement. Roller skating is the thing wanted by our young people, especially the ladies. It affords just the sort of exercise that they require for their physical development—gentle, but active and so attractive they cannot resist it. It is my deliberate opinion that no conception has ever entered the human mind, in this century, so important to the health of ladies in our cities as this skating within doors. Nothing could exceed it in grace. No sight I have ever beheld is so beautiful as a roller skating rink, with its tastefully dressed young men and ladies sailing, swimming, floating through the mazes of the march, as if impelled by magic power. The old people assemble nightly to witness the sight, apparently as much delighted as their children.—Williamsport Breakfast Table.

Town and City.

During the four years immediately preceding the adoption of the city form of government, in Brockton, the whole cost of town officers averaged $2400 a year. As a city the salary bill is about $10,000 a year. An annual increase of $8,000 in the cost of officering the city looks pretty steep at first glance, and those of our worthy citizens with whom the town meeting was a pet institution will point to the figures with grim satisfaction. But does any unprejudiced man in his sober senses undertake to say that Brockton to-day—with 20,000 population, growing and extending rapidly in every direction and requiring every year more constant and and skilled supervision and direction of her several departments of local government—could afford to entertain for even a moment a purpose of going back to the town form? The management of a town is not unlike the management of a mercantile concern—if the business and income increase the expenses will increase. The cumbersome and inefficient methods of administering town affairs that cost only $2500 a year five or six years ago, would be costing a great deal more than that now were Brockton still a town. We contend that the service obtained now for $10,000 a year is as cheap for the tax-payers and for the city's interests as that which was obtained for one-fifth the sum under the town form of government. Compare the systematic and vigilant supervision given the different departments to-day with the best they ever received in the days of "annual meetin'" and selectmen, and ask yourself if the change has not proven itself a wise and beneficial one in many directions.—Brockton Daily Enterprise.

Appearances Worth Something.

Many of our young people are not particular to have their habits speak for them. But nevertheless they do, whether you would have them or not. If not for you, then sadly against you. For instance, how many of us ever give a thought to the manner of our carriage,—in plain words, to the manner in which we walk? Only a short time ago a young person was trying to start a school in an old town in England. He had occasion to apply for help to a wealthy old land owner and a person of influence, who lived a little distance from the village. He was received by the old gentleman, and made known his desire, but left with no promise from him, either of help or otherwise. The young man was surprised a few days later, by having the promise of his influence from the wealthy gentleman, and an offer of four thousand dollars per annum. It turned out that he had followed the young man back to the village through a very rough road, and had been pleased with the way he had got out and over the obstacles in the pathway. "He walked well," said the old gentleman to a friend, "I like the way he put his feet down."

You probably never will get a four thousand dollar salary, but surely you will never want friends—good warm-hearted ones—nor a certain feeling of manly self-respect if you observe this common maxim,—Walk as if you meant business, and be sure and have a good business to walk for. H. P.

At the White House.

Mr. Cleveland's father was a Presbyterian minister, who lived most of his ministerial life and died in Central New York. When he came up from New Jersey, where the President was born, he became pastor of the Presbyterian church in Fayetteville, Onondago county N. Y., a small village about seven miles south-east from Syracuse, and settled by people of the best New England stock. Sometime afterwards he was at Clinton, Oneida county, N. Y., where Hamilton College is situated. In the spring of 1853 he moved to Holland Patent, a small village twelve miles north of Utica, in the midst of a rich farming community to be the pastor of the Presbyterian church there, where in two or three months he died. Friends of the family purchased the house in which they were living, and gave it to Mrs. C. for her home; and there she remained till her death last summer.

The family consisted, (as we are informed), of four sons and five daughters. The eldest son is also a minister, preaching in central New York. The eldest daughter, Mrs. Hastings, is a wife of a missionary in India. The two other brothers were in some foreign country in business, and when coming home together several years ago, they were lost at sea. The sister who presides at the White House is the youngest daughter, and is exceedingly clever. The account we quote of her is not overdrawn. Indeed if she will go her own instincts of neatness, plainness and propriety, she will show herself one of the most intellectual, masterful, and genuinely democratic ladies which the White House has ever contained. She is undoubtedly one of the highest bred and trained women in the country, and should she manifest the same independence and power of character which she has done heretofore she will be able to take a place beside Mrs. Hayes in setting a standard of well-doing quite in advance of what the world has been wont to see in such high station. Miss Cleveland is an active member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the more she brings the influence of that order into the White House the more will she win the love of the millions of women of her own kind in this land.

A sentence containing every letter in the English alphabet, and a favorite with writing teachers, is "A quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog."

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

The birth-place of the immortal Shakespeare, the greatest poet and dramatist that ever honored and ornamented this world of ours. I think we shall never have another genius equal to him in his line. One is just enough for one world to produce. He shows the wonderful possibilities of human nature, and that will answer. Enough is as good as a feast. In Shakespeare we have enough, and the feast too. I was delighted to be in Shakespeare's native town. Next to seeing a celebrated man is, I suppose, to visit the place which was his home, and to see the house and the room in which he was born, and I should add, to read his poems and see his plays.

When I was in London, which I think I justly called the wonderful city, I had the pleasure of seeing the distinguished actor, Henry Irving, in his own Lyceum Theatre, in Shakespeare's beautiful comedy, "Much Ado about Nothing," assisted by his companion in the histrionic art, the charming actress, Miss Ellen Terry. It was put on the stage in the most magnificent style. The acting was superb, I think I should say that if I were a competent critic. He delights all, so he must be the best.

Mr. Irving is as popular in London as he is in New York or Boston. So I went to Stratford-on-Avon with a fresh thrill of his renowned genius in my soul; thanks to Mr. Irving and Miss Terry. This is a pleasant village of about 4000 inhabitants, in the county of Warwich, pronounced in England as if the second w were not there. It is situated on the right bank of the river Avon, pronounced there with a long a. It is a neat, smart little town, and though very old, it has a new look as nearly all the old houses have gone in out of sight. But there is one old house there which gets more attention than all the other houses put together, that is the Shakespeare house in Henley street, the very quaint, modest, little frame cottage, where Shakespeare put in his first appearance on the stage, as you know he calls the world, "All the World's a Stage," sometime ago, April 23d, 1564.

Two nice prim maiden sisters have charge of the house, which is a kind of Mecca for tourists, especially those who have heard something about Shakespeare, (and who hasn't?) These good ladies told me they were not married, I thought as much before they told me. But like their other maiden sisters scattered around, the salt of the earth, I suppose it was not their heart that prevented the ringing of the wedding bells. They only state the fact of their single blessedness that no mistake will be made in calling them Mrs., instead of Miss. These Misses Jones were as polite and smiling as a basket of chips.

You pay a sixpence to enter the house, —general admission;—and then a sixpence more to visit the museum of Shakespeare's mementoes and curiosities, his manuscripts and coat of arms, and such things. There you can see the house in which he was born, and his cosy dining room, and the room he wrote those lines in, which the world will always remember. Barnum made an offer for this old house some years ago, that he might bring it bodily to this country for a show. It would doubtless have proved quite a jumbo in its way. Then the English people were roused to appreciate its value by its famous association, and it became National property in 1847. Everything was so tightly nailed, smooth and closely trimmed up that I couldn't get a chip or a splinter as a souvenier of my visit. I visited the Stratford Church, in which Shakespeare was buried. It has a charming location on the banks of the Avon; you approach it through a long avenue shaded with tall-spreading lime trees.

The church is old, built in 1764, but well preserved, its spire is an elegant structure, so graceful and imposing; it is sixty-three feet high. The grave of Shakespeare is in the chancel, and covered by a plain flag stone. But how numberless are the monuments to his genius bearing grateful praise and admiration more enduring than marble or gold in the hearts of millions throughout all the world. By his side lies his wife, whose name before her marriage you remember was Anne Hathaway. I did not miss going to Shottery, where Anne lived when she was a girl. I roamed through the fields in the same road, they told me, to see the cottage almost hidden with vines and flowers, where Anne lived, and was born, where William went to see his girl when he was sweet on her in the days of long ago. I suppose Anne called him a sweet William, and well she might.

This cottage is an odd, cosy little old house. A very nice old lady, a direct descendant of Anne Shakespeare, has charge of it, and was so kind and generous to me, and gave me many little things as mementoes, and such lots of flowers, I might have had a bushel basket full, and they would not have been missed. I saw on the visitor's book prominent names: Edwin Booth, Mary Anderson and General U. S. Grant, whose present misfortune the world deplores, who Grandmother Taylor who keeps the house told me, viewed with much interest the cottage of Anne Hathaway. RALEIGH.

"Och," said a love-sick Hibernian, "what a recreation it is to be dying of love! It sets the heart aching so delicately there's no taking a wink of sleep for the pleasure of the pain.

The moistest climate known is in India, at Cherrapongee, where over a small area the yearly fall of rain is more than six hundred and ten inches, or about fifty-one feet.

Police Protection.

Every few weeks the attention of our citizens is called to acts of rowdyism, disturbances and occasionally assaults upon our streets. Most of these quarrels result we know, from Boston rum, which is brought out by the evening trains either inside of, or in the pockets of, our drinking men. This perhaps cannot be helped, but something should be done to protect our citizens more effectually from the fear and abuse to which they are now subjected.

Granite street is one of the greatest sufferers in this respect. Its residents are often disturbed in the evening by roughs, and the disgraceful way in which the young trees have been broken and killed is evidence of the character of some of the passers by. It cannot be expected that our constables will of their own accord, and without pay, put a stop to this mischief; and, we believe, it is one of the recent decisions of the members of the force not to respond in the night unless a warrant is issued, for otherwise they would not receive any compensation for their trouble. Some arrangements should be made whereby officers should receive pay when they are thus called out, even if they should be unsuccessful, and not capture a rogue; or, what would be still better, we should have a night police, with the power of police, whose duty it shall be to stop these disturbances, and protect our citizens.

Obituary.

On Sunday last Mr. Charles C. Brackett, an old and highly respected citizen of Quincy, departed this life at the ripe age of 76 years. Mr. Brackett was a gentleman of quiet and unobtrusive manners, honorable in all his dealings, and was loved and respected by all who made his acquaintance. As a contractor and builder his work was always done in a thorough and workmanlike manner, giving perfect satisfaction in every respect. During his business career he contracted and builded upwards of one hundred houses, also several churches and schoolhouses.

Mr. Brackett was born in Greenland, N. H., July 2d, 1808; he learned the carpenter's trade in Danvers, in this state, but subsequently located in Topsfield, where he commenced business, and during a fifteen years sojourn in that place built many of the finest residences. In 1844 he represented that town in the legislature. He moved to Quincy in 1850, and here as in Topsfield built some fifty or more handsome and substantial residences. Among them was Mrs. John Holden's, Messrs. John O. Holden's, Charles H. Porter's, Henry Barker's, H. F. Barker's, R. F. Claflin's, Christopher Spear's and Lewis Bass'. The last house erected by him was on Greenleaf street, in 1882, since which time owing to impaired sight and other infirmities consequent to age he has undertaken no large jobs.

Mr. Brackett was a kind and devoted husband, and his aged and infirm partner will greatly miss the lover of her youth and old age. Three sons and a daughter mourn the loss of a loving father, one who was not only a parent but a companion. Three sisters have by this sad dispensation been called to mourn for their only brother whose loss they deeply deplore.

His funeral took place from his late residence on Hancock street, Wednesday afternoon, and a large gathering of relatives and friends were present to pay the last sad tribute of respect to one who was greatly esteemed and respected. The Rev. Mr. Ayer, pastor of the Congregational Church during the absence of Rev. Mr. Norton, officiated. Singing by a quartette added greatly to the solemnity of the occasion. He was buried in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, many carriages containing relatives and friends following his remains to his last resting place.

CLOSE OF DANCING SCHOOL. There was a very pleasant gathering at Robertson Hall, on Wednesday afternoon, the occasion being the close of Madame J. Arcan's very successful juvenile dancing class. Her private class also closed yesterday; Mrs. Thomas A. Whicher making it the occasion of a birth-day party to her son.

Madame Arcan gives universal satisfaction as a teacher of etiquette, deportment and dancing, and that our young people may continue to enjoy the benefit of her instructions in the future, is the generally expressed wish of all her patrons.

She leaves here on Monday to commence her sixth annual spring term in New York city, where she is teacher in a young ladies' boarding school.

CHRIST CHURCH. At the annual parish meeting held Easter Monday, April 6th, the Rector, Rev. H. E. Cotton was chosen Moderator. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Wardens,—William Amory, Jr., Peter Butler.

Vestrymen,—William L. Wainwright Elisha Packard, Jeffrey R. Brackett, J. Francis Hayward, George M. Wahl, William P. Martin, Benjamin H. Warren, Walter T. Babcock, F. F. Crane.

Treasurer,—Walter T. Babcock.

Clerk,—Sigourney Butler.

Auditors,—John R. Graham, F. A. Marsh.

SAD ACCIDENT. Mrs. James Kelly, who resides on West street, Quincy, was very badly burned on Tuesday last. She started a fire to burn some leaves and dry grass; it spread rapidly and attempted to leave her premises, when she went heroically to work to stay its progress, but unfortunately her clothes took fire and she was quite severely burned. Dr. Sheahan was called who dressed her wounds and did what he could to relieve her sufferings. Hopes are entertained that she will recover.

OUR ROADS. Some of our streets have been in a bad condition lately, because of the frost working out of the ground. Common street has been impassable to heavy teams. The streets of Wollaston have also been very bad.

Wednesday evening about 11.30, while conveying a party home from Weymouth, one of Joseph T. French's barges became stuck in the mud on Quincy avenue, near John L. Eldridge's, and it was impossible to get it out until assistance arrived from the stable. The ladies and gentlemen were conveyed to their homes in another carriage and it was 1.30 before the ill-fated barge was stabled. We have heard of others becoming mired but not as seriously as the above.

EASTER.

Easter dawned clear and bright rejoicing many who had looked with poor grace on Saturday's severe storm as sadly interfering with the preparations of the morrow and who also feared that the storm would continue over Sunday.

The services at the Congregational Church in the morning consisted of an appropriate sermon by the pastor and Easter anthems and hymns by the choir.

The evening service took the form of a Sunday School concert; a large congregation was present and the programme arranged by Assistant Superintendent, Charles H. Sherburne, was successfully carried out.

The larger part of the music was rendered by the choir in a pleasing manner.

A duet by Misses Minnie and Louisa Carter was well received; also an Easter selection sung by some of the smallest children in the school.

The platform throughout the day was decorated with a profusion of potted plants in full bloom and noticable many beautiful lilies; all were arranged with great taste and much credit is due the committee who had the matter in charge.

The Baptist Sunday School also gave an evening concert which was arranged with much effort by Supt. Marks and which passed off creditably to all who took part.

S. OF T.

The Quincy Stone Division, Sons of Temperance chose the following officers for the second quarter of the present year on Saturday 28th ult. and installed the same last Saturday night.

W. P. Chas. H. Sherburne.
W. A. Minnie J. Carter.
R. S. J. Frank Carter.
A. R. S. Mrs. Hattie E. Perry.
F. S. Louisa B. Carter.
Treas. Lemuel J. Myers.
Chap. Rev. Chas. W. Williams.
Con. Edmund G. Bryden.
A. Con. Ada N. Driscoll.
I. S. Chas. H. Tower.
O. S. Otis M. Wait.

Deputy Walsh of Dorchester was the installing officer. The Society is prospering greatly and now numbers about forty members.

PARISH MEETING.

The annual Parish meeting of the Baptist Society was held on Monday evening.

The election of officers for the ensuing year took place with the following result:

Clerk,—M. A. Marks.
Treasurer,—D. H. Bills.
Auditor,—M. A. Marks.
Parish Committee,—C. E. Whiton, T. J. Bower, Robt. Clark, O. M. Wait.
Baptismal Committee,—D. H. Bills, M. A. Marks, Mrs. N. H. Randlett, Mrs. M. A. Marks.

A debt of $100 being declared, the the amount was quickly raised among the members, and the society begins the new year in a prosperous condition.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. L. Harris has been confined to the house the past week through illness.

Mr. J. L. Whiton has this week moved from his home in order to commence extensive alterations in his house, which, when completed will be one of the handsomest houses on Washington street.

THIS AND THAT.

The Washington School Association are preparing for a public entertainment to be given about the first of May.

School begins on Monday and teachers and pupils will return recruited from their vacation ready to struggle with the last term.

A copy of the Dummerston, Vermont annual town report was recently received and was a pamphlet of eight pages, printed on a poor quality of paper and not honored with covers. One item of expense was the payment of $3.75 to Mrs. Mary L. Dutton for breaking the roads two and a half days.

The Ladies' Aid Society will serve a pie supper on Thursday evening at 6.30 o'clock in the vestry of the Congregational Church to be followed in the evening by an entertainment one of the features of which will be Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works.

A slight accident occurred on Sunday at the Neck from fast driving on Newcomb's hill, by two men with a horse and buggy, which resulted fortunately in only a pair of broken shafts.

Wollaston.

The Wollaston boys play a new game of marbles.

A pound party will probably be held next month.

Samuel Brown is grand guide of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Honor.

Benjamin C. Barlow is to build a house on Belmont street, for Walter Wellington.

Hon. Charles W. Slack has been confined to his house in Boston this week by pneumonia, but is slowly improving.

Mr. W. H. Jones, who has been sick for some weeks, remains about the same. Dr. Gordon is attending him.

Mrs. Emerson and Mrs. Pierce are making arrangements for the cantata, "Flower Queen," to be given at the M. E. Church, in the near future. About sixty girls are to take part in it.

A coffee party was given by the Ladies' Social Circle, in the M. E. Church, Wednesday evening. Speaking and singing by the children, and songs by Mrs. Emerson, were a part of the entertainment.

A grass fire on the "third hill" in the vicinity of Beale street caused some alarm in the neighborhood on Tuesday afternoon, and box 53 was rung in. The fire department was not needed however. About the same time there was a grass fire in the vicinity of the Neponset River.

The burning grass on the side of "third hill," came very near setting fire to some of the houses on Beale street, on Tuesday. There is too much setting fire—"just for fun"—to the dry grass in our village. If there is no law to prevent it, one should be enacted.

We learn that the grass fire at Wollaston on Tuesday is to be thoroughly investigated, and if the guilty party is found he will be brought before the District Court. Some of citizens are determined that this grass-fire business must be stopped. It has caused on several previous occasions much anxiety to a number of our citizens.

The following officers have been elected by the M. E. Sunday school, for the ensuing year:

Superintendent, Mr. C. W. Johnson.
Ass't Superintendent, Rev. F. H. Knight.
Secretary and Librarian, James Nesbit.
Treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Johnson.

The musical for the study of classical music, was held on Monday evening, at the house of Rev. W. R. Lord, a large and appreciative audience being present. The music rendered was of a high order, and carefully selected from the great composer's works, Mozart; by the executive committee:

Essayest, Rev. B. B. Sherman; Trio from Symphony in E flat major, Alice Lincoln, Minnie Prescott and Nellie Lovett; Song, Who Treads the Path, Dr. Colgan; Song, List t'will be Wise, Alice Prescott; Piano solo in F minor, by Prof. Noa; Duet, Nay bid me not, by Miss Pfaffman and Mr. Elliot; Song, Jehovah guide me, by James Lord; Piano duet, by Alice Lincoln and Miss Lord; May song, Miss Parker; Quartette, Mr. Lord, Mr. Sprague, Mrs. Lord and Mrs. Nickerson; Song, Happy childhood, Miss Pfaffman; Duet, Piano and Flute, Miss Packard and B. B. Sherman; Song, Twilight, by Mrs. Patch; Song, The Violet, by Sam King; Trio by Mrs. Patch, Mr. King and Mr. Colgan; closing with the chorus Gloria, from the twelfth mass.

We will say although comparatively a stranger, we have not enjoyed an evening so well for a long time, and wanted to take every one who helped make up the evening entertainment by the hand and bid them go on in the good work they had begun, in improving the mind with knowledge of our best composers who have long ago passed away.

The Musical Society will meet at the residence of Rev. Mr. Lord on Monday evening, April 20. The subject will be "An evening with Beethoven."

The Easter Sunday services at the M. E. Church, were very interesting. The morning exercises commenced at 10.45, with an Easter anthem, by a choir consisting of Mrs. Emerson and Miss Merrill, sopranos; Miss Lord and Mrs. Pierce, altos; J. H. Lord, tenor; W. C. Pierce, A. J. Colgan and E. Hewitson, bassos. Then followed scripture readings and a fine sermon by the pastor, Rev. F. H. Knight. The sermon was appropriate to the occasion and made a deep impression on the audience.

The new Superintendent, Mr. C. W. Johnson, took charge of the Sunday school, and also of the anniversary and Easter concert exercises in the evening. A large number of the younger members of the school took part in the concert, which made it very pleasant.

A full house witnessed the exercises. The infant class, under the charge of Mrs. Johnson, has—increased in a year and a half—from three, to about thirty scholars.

Two members of the school have not been absent during the year, Miss Gracie Johnson and Master Benny Barlow; while the Librarian has been absent but once in two years. The average Sunday collection during the year was $3.16.

The collection taken up at the concert was the largest in the history of the school.

Rev. Mr. Knight has done a noble work in building up the society and Sunday school, and it is earnestly hoped and expected, he will be returned by the N. E. Conference now in session at Springfield.

The church was tastefully decorated on Sunday, many plants and flowers having been brought in for the occasion by members and friends of the society.

THANKS. Herbert M. Federhen, Esq., our industrious Representative at the State House, has our thanks for two bound volumes: The Adjutant General's Report for 1884, and a Manuel for the General Court for 1885. The manuel contains the rules of the two branches, together with the constitution of the Commonwealth, and that of the United States, and a list of the executive, legislative and judicial departments, state institutions and their officers and other statistical information, which makes it quite valuable for reference.

A Mistake.

I noticed in last week's issue of the Patriot, "Rumor" said, that Atlantic never had a church. Rumor made a mistake, the Catholic Church was erected in 1877, and dedicated Sept. 15th, 1878. Probably in rumor's estimation that is not a Church. ATLANTIC.

☞ The assessors are preparing for their long tramp about town.

West Quincy.

Harris Farnum has been confined to the house this week.

The cellar for a new house has been commenced on "Town Hill."

F. Wesley Fuller has returned home after an absence of nearly two months.

H. F. Doble advertises several horses for sale.

Daniel Hayes is building a new house on Miller street.

Martin Duboyce and family intend moving back to West Quincy soon.

West Quincy is to have a harness maker. Quarters are being fitted for him on Cemetery street.

A delegation from Merry Mount Division, S. of T., of Wollaston, visited America Division on Monday evening.

Mr. Johnson, a student of the Boston Theological school, preached at the M. E. Church last Sunday, morning and evening.

H. W. Varney, baggage master on the Granite Branch, jammed the fingers of his left hand while coupling cars Thursday morning.

Willard street, near its junction with Cemetery street, has been built up considerably during the winter. The new sheds, offices, polishing works, etc., of H. Farnum & Co., A. Mannocks and Flaherty Bros. make a more business like appearance.

Atlantic News.

The north part of the town has the church building fever bad. It is said there are twenty Unitarian families in Atlantic, and some of the ladies think there should be a church of that denomination.

Gordon Chapel is suggested as a name for the new Congregational Chapel.

The house built by Elliot Wood is going forward very rapidly.

W. W. Williams' lease of the Huckins estate has expired and N. V. Titus, the owner, will henceforth carry on the farm.

John A. Duggan is the happiest man in Atlantic.

The new foot way from Hancock street to the Atlantic station is being made.

Hancock street between the railroad bridge and the Neponset river is being repaired by the Surveyors of Highways.

The Easter services of the Atlantic Mission were conducted by the Sunday School last Sunday morning, and consisted of singing, speaking, etc. They were quite interesting. Rev. Mr. Gordon was unable to be present and his place was filled by a Boston gentleman.

While Thomas Kennon and wife were riding on Hancock street one day the first of the week, a wheel gave way and pitched the team over, but fortunately the parties were rescued before any damage was done.

The annual parish meeting of the Congregational Society was held Wednesday evening, with Mr. E. R. Wade. W. S. Knowles was chosen moderator, and the following officers were elected: Secretary and Collector, C. Drew; Treasurer, E. G. Hall; Parish Committee, James Burr, C. Drew and Henry Hallett.

Probate Court, Quincy.

Judge White held the regular monthly session of Probate Court in the Town House, Wednesday morning.

Irene G. Glover was granted a widow's allowance in estate of Phineas H. Glover of Quincy. Fraria Dugan of Braintree, petitioned to be guardian of William J. Lynch, a minor.

John Allison, guardian of Sarah J., James R. and Kate H. Allison of Quincy, was granted leave to sell house and land on Garfield street.

Ally Freeman, executrix of the insolvent estate of John S. Freeman of Quincy, was granted a discharge.

Appointments. George W. Whitten of Weymouth, administrator of estate of Hattie F. Whitten; bond $2,000.

Theodore B. Thomas of Quincy, administrator of estate of George Thomas; bond $2,000.

Zechariah L. Bicknell of Weymouth, administrator of estate of Nahum Whiting of Weymouth; bond $8,000.

Charles Q. Tirrell of Natick, guardian of George Edwin Tirrell of Weymouth; bond $7,000.

John W. Burr of Weymouth, administrator of estate of Mary W. Burr; bond $400.

George B. Bryant of Randolph, administrator of estate of Benjamin Bryant; bond $2500.

Inventories. Of estate of Matilda W. Peterson, late of Weymouth; William J. Alden, William J. Alden, Jr., and Lewis Winsor appraisers.

Of estate of Ellen S. Nightingale of Quincy; George L. Gill, Lewis Bass and Charles Marsh appraisers.

Of estate of Albert Richardson of Weymouth; Leonard B. Tirrell, David Blanchard and John Blanchard, appraisers.

Of estate of Hugh Mundy of Quincy; Henry McGrath, Eugene W. O'Connor and Patrick H. Gavin appraisers.

Of estate of James Jones of Weymouth; Henry A. Nash, John J. Loud and Lawrence H. H. Johnson, appraisers.

Of estate of Alfred Sampson of Quincy; Ebenezer E. Adams, Jonathan E. Hayward and Bryant N. Adams appraisers.

Accounts allowed. Of Henry A. Johnson executor of will of James Jones of Weymouth.

Of Ebenezer F. E. Thayer, administrator of estate of John J. French of Braintree.

Of Louisa A. Nightingale administratrix of estate of Ellen S. Nightingale of Quincy.

Of Theodore R. Glover, trustee under will of Samuel G. Glover, late of Brookline.

Of Sarah E. Shedd, administratrix of estate of Betsy Littlefield, late of Randolph.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB. The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht Club was held at the School Committee's Room last Saturday evening. Commodore Morton presided. Several propositions were made and about two hours were spent in discussion. In the regattas this season the starts will be "flying ones." The following officers were elected:

Commodore,—C. F. Adams, 3d.
Vice Commodore,—H. H. Sheen.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Henry M. Faxon.
Fleet Captain,—George A. Ordway.
Measurer,—A. B. Lelois.
Regatta Committee,—H. A. Keith, James H. Slade, Charles H. Porter, A. D. Perry, and the Commodore ex officio.

FIRE. The alarm from Box 62 at 2.10 yesterday afternoon was for the burning of twenty-five or more sleepers between the Atlantic station and the Atlantic street bridge. The second alarm was entirely unnecessary. The J. Q. Adams Chemical extinguished the flames.

THE SPAULDINGS. Next Monday evening our citizens will have the pleasure of listening to Spaulding Bell Ringers in the Town Hall. They come this season with a new programme and new people, headed by Georgie Dean Spaulding, who is a whole show alone. Do not miss the opportunity of seeing this ever first-class entertainment. Prices are within the reach of all, which is only 25 and 35 cents. Reserved seats are now for sale at Souther's.

PADDY MILES' BOY. A crowded house greeted the St. John's C. L. A. A. at the Town Hall, on Monday evening. A variety programme, consisting of vocal solos, club swinging, horizontal bar exhibitions, clog dancing, flute and banjo solos, and the amusing farce of "Paddy Miles' Boy," were successfully presented. Dancing followed the entertainment; music being furnished by Hanson's orchestra.

☞ The alarm for fire a few minutes before twelve o'clock Friday noon was for a brush fire in the vicinity of Bunton's quarry. The steamer made very good time. The safety of a house in the neighborhood caused the ringing of an alarm, but it proved unnecessary.

REGULATIONS OF THE Board of Health OF THE TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

Temperance Convention.

The Massachusetts Reform Clubs held their 33d quarterly convention at Faxon Hall in this town on Tuesday. There were sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening. Early in the day the hall was filled with delegates from other towns and our townspeople. The report of the Committee on Credentials showed that there were 35 clubs represented by 159 delegates, while there were a hundred or more not connected with the clubs, making it one of the largest gatherings ever held by the Reform Clubs of Massachusetts.

The president, S. R. M'Cready, of Cambridgeport, called the meeting to order, and the Rev. Thomas Bickford of Cambridge, the State Chaplain, conducted devotional services. The secretaries, treasurer and other State officers were in their positions. The Committee on Credentials were F. L. Beal of Nantasket, E. D. Jones of Boston, and F. E. Travis of Natick.

Rev. D. M. Wilson of Quincy welcomed the delegates. He spoke of the good work that had been done and is being done in the town, and of the great work still before us in the State and Nation. He said the rum sellers never had such a power in the large cities as now. It was a spirited address and well received. Frank P. Dyer of Hingham responded for the visitors. He knew the delegates were among a hospitable people and that a good time would be enjoyed.

Representatives from the following clubs made reports for their respective organizations, which as a whole were encouraging and progressive; Ashland, Boston Temperance, Bunker Hill, Cambridge, Chelsea, Needham, East Weymouth, Haverhill, Hingham, Lynn, Monumental of Charlestown, Natick, Norwood, Osgood of Charlestown, Stoneham, Winchester, Worcester; also from the Cambridge Progressive Union, Hingham Total Abstinence, Lynn Auxiliary, Nantasket Temperance Union, North End (Boston) Gospel Temperance Union, Parker (Chelsea) Mission, Stearns (Cambridgeport) Chapel, Worcester Ladies' Temperance League, Worcester Temperance Club. There were also reports from the Sons of Temperance Divisions of West Quincy, Wollaston, Quincy Point, Quincy and Neponset.

At noon a bountiful dinner of cold meats, beans, puddings, pies, ice cream and all the "fixins" were served by the local clubs and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the lower rooms and fully 250 partook.

At the afternoon session the Committee on Resolutions—H. H. Faxon of Quincy, Mrs. Martha J. Hadley of Cambridge, and W. D. Cole of Ashland—reported the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Reform Clubs of Massachusetts in convention assembled earnestly request the Legislature to enact the bill establishing a Metropolitan Police, that Boston may be relieved from the political influence of its dramshops, which are fast undermining the integrity, honor and welfare of the whole state.

Resolved, That the issue of to-day is, shall the rumsellers of Boston rule Massachusetts, or shall the whole state, through her legislators, rule the Boston rumsellers?

Resolved, That we as members of Reform Clubs will support no man for the Legislature who is not sound upon the question of Constitutional Prohibition, with vigorous enforcing powers.

Resolved, That if the voters of Boston do their duty at the next election of District Attorney the present incumbent will be laid on file, nol pros'd or pigeon-holed.

W. S. Macdonald, the secretary, in his report said there was a steady increase in sentiment, as well as membership of clubs, and numerous remarkable reformations had been reported.

Mrs. C. A. Fuller, the treasurer, reported a debt of over thirty dollars which had resulted from the picnic of two years ago. An attempt was made to cancel this indebtedness by a collection, but only about six dollars was realized. Henry H. Faxon, however, offered to pay the remainder, and consequently the State organization is free from debt.

Some little controversy arose about the president's address, the gentleman seeming to think that the clubs did not wish to hear it because of the manner in which his last had been received at Worcester. They had not adopted any of his recommendations then, and therefore he read but a small part of the one he had prepared for this meeting, and that related to resolutions to General Grant. The meeting indorsed his recommendation and Mrs. S. Louise Barton, Frank P. Dyer, Fayette E. Travis and Rev. R. T. Sawyer were appointed a committee. They reported the following message, which by vote of the convention was telegraphed to General Grant:—

"We, the members of the Massachusetts State Reform Clubs in convention assembled, extend to General Grant, the hero we honor, the friend we love, our heartfelt sympathy to himself and family and offer our earnest prayers for his recovery."

By invitation of the Lynn Reform Club it was voted to hold the next quarterly convention in Lynn in July. Vote of thanks were extended to Henry H. Faxon for his gift, to Quincy Club and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, for the hospitable manner in which they had been entertained, and to the Old Colony Railroad for reduced fares.

About six o'clock the business meeting adjourned. Again the Quincy people did the handsome thing and gave a supper to the 250 in attendance.

Most of the delegates returned to their homes previous to the evening meeting, and therefore the attendance was much smaller than through the day. Miss Carter of Quincy Point, presided at the organ, Rev. R. T. Sawyer offered prayer, and remarks were made by W. S. Macdonald, the Secretary of the State Reform Clubs; B. R. Jewell, George W. Parker, Rev. William Boyle and Rev. R. T. Sawyer.

The Boundary Line.

The Committee on Towns, to whom was referred the petition of William J. R. Evans and others, that the boundary line between Quincy and Milton be relocated, have reported the accompanying Bill.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

SEC. 1. The boundary line heretofore existing between the town of Quincy and the town of Milton is hereby changed and established as provided in section two.

SEC. 2. Commencing at a stone bound post standing in the northerly line of Beale Street, at a point distant two hundred and forty feet westerly from the southeast corner of land of N. H. Beale; thence easterly, following the northerly line of Beale Street, a distance of four hundred and eight and five-tenths feet, to a stone bound post standing in the present boundary line between the towns of Quincy and Milton. All the land to the south of the northerly line of Beale Street lying between the said stone bound posts is hereby set off from the town of Milton to the town of Quincy. Continuing from the last mentioned stone bound post on Beale Street the new boundary line shall run north thirty-four degrees twenty minutes west ("magnetic"), following the present dividing lines between said towns a distance of two thousand seven hundred and ninety-five and three-tenths feet to a stone bound post; thence, by the same course, a distance of one thousand and twenty-nine and five-tenths feet, to the southerly line of Squantum Street; thence, running in a northerly and easterly direction, following the easterly line of said Squantum Street about seven hundred and twenty feet, to a stone bound post standing on the southeasterly line of said street; thence, running north six degrees eight minutes east (magnetic) a distance of three thousand and fifty-one feet, to the northwest corner of the stone wharf at Neponset River owned by one Faulkner; thence, by the same course, to the center of the channel of said river. All the land on the easterly side of said line is hereby set off from the town of Milton to the town of Quincy, and all land on the westerly side of said line is hereby set off from the town of Quincy to the town of Milton.

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Letter from Rev. R. B. Davis.

The following letter was written to the Norfolk County Gazette, by the Rev. P. B. Davis of Hyde Park, while on board steamer Amazone, on the Mediterranean Sea, March 10, 1885. The Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy, accompanied Mr. Davis and we do not doubt but the letter will be of much interest to our readers.

MR. EDITOR:—I have not forgotten your remark that a line from me during my absence might not be unwelcome to some of your readers. Since reaching Liverpool my movements have been too rapid to allow an ealier compliance with your request. Twenty-seven days between disembarking at the Mersey River, and leaving Italy at the Bay of Naples, with an attempt meantime to gain a partial acquaintance with Liverpool, Chester, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick, Kenilworth Leamington, Oxford, London, Paris, Genoa, Pisa, Florence, Rome, Pompeii, Puteoli and Naples, have afforded no more time, either by day or night, than was actually needed for work and rest.

Providence has been most benignant towards me at every point since, on a very cold afternoon, the 29th of January, I stepped on board the good ship City of Chicago at New York. On Sabbath evening, February 8th, at six o'clock, I stood on the Queen's soil at Liverpool. The ocean passage, although not severe for the winter season, was quite unlike a pleasure excursion down Boston harbor; and I was glad to exchange the boat for something that would keep still long enough to step on it. Of the places visited since then I would like to say much, but must not now trespass on your readers' patience. The twenty-seven days have been to me full of interest, and I hope profitable.

It was a beautiful afternoon last Saturday (March 7th) when, at 4 o'clock I was rowed out from Naples to the magnificent steamer Amazone, lying in the Bay, en route from Marseilles to Alexandria. In an hour we sailed away amid scenes of rare beauty. The Bay itself is one of the most charming in the world. The city of Naples, containing 700,000 inhabitants, the largest in Italy, seems to rise out of the sea, climb the hill by a steep ascent, and swing around the Bay like a crescent. On one side, and only a few miles away, is Vesuvius with its smoking fiery apex. At its base is Resina, built above the spot where of old stood Herculaneum. A little further away is Pompeii, whose miles of ruins, recovered from the sleep of centuries I had visited two days before.

As we steamed away the sun was setting in a cloudless sky and added a peculiar beauty to the villages and hills, many of which were clad with verdure to their summits. The Bay looked like a mirror set about with jewels. We passed close to Sorrento, said by some to be the fairest spot on earth. Here Tasso was born. We were near Biae and Cumae and and Mycenae of ancient fame. On our right was the Island of Capri, and close by Ischia, so desolated by an earthquake a few months ago. Near to this was Puteoli, where Paul, on his way to Rome, "found brethren," and was desired to "tarry seven day." Here the Appian way begins. I had visited this the day before, and also at Rome, where this noted way ends, along which Paul journeyed when about to appear before Noro. As the sun went down and the twilight faded the villages and hills gradually disappeared from view, and nothing remained visible but the flame-capped summit of Vesuvius, and the molten lava flowing down its side. I gazed long on this strange lighthouse, which no human hands had built, and for hours saw its intermittent flash gleam in the distance like a meteor.

Early in the morning our boat was close to Stromboli, a single volcanic peak rising out of the sea. Dense smoke was issuing from it, and settled like a cloud upon its sides. On our left was the southern point of Italy, known as the toe. On our right was Sicily, separated from the main land by a narrow strait, where are Scylla and Charybdis of classic fame. These we passed without harm. We sailed close to Messina, famous for its ofanges, and then near to Rhegium, where our steamer changing her course several degrees, we, like the Apostle Paul at the same place, "fetched a compass" and sailed away. We were soon opposite Mt. Etna. This volcanic mountain rises more than 10,000 feet above the sea. Its summit is always snow clad, while at its base are found in profusion palms, olives, figs, oranges and lemons. Gradually the snowy whiteness vanished from our view and we were out of sight of land.

I shall never forget that Sabbath on the Mediterranean. The sky was cloudless, the water was as smooth as glass, and the air like a day in June. It seemed in very deed the Lord's day. And what a sanctuary for worship was this middle-of-the-wild sea, which has no tide, which is constantly replenished with water from one ocean and three continents, and yet is without any visible outlet. What associations in both classic and sacred history gather about this sea, whose waters are as blue as the sky, and on whose bosom, and along whose shores, decisive battles have been fought, and where philosophers, prophets and apostles have taught. I remained on deck after all others had gone below. The sky was full of stars, which, shining through the clear atmosphere, seemed but a few times higher than the masts of the ship. Yesterday (Monday) at noon we saw in dim outline Greece, just above the water, and toward night came somewhat near the bold heights of Candia (or Crete) where Paul encounted the Euroclydon.

March 11th.—I was landed safely at Alexandria this morning at six o'clock, amid such a bedlam of voices as I never heard before. I am sure the monument just outside the city walls must be the Tower of Babel, although they call it Pompey's Pillar. This afternoon we are off for Cairo.

I remain, yours, P. B. DAVIS.

Washington Letter.

Washington, April 6th, 1885.

Mr. Cleveland has now been at the helm for one month. His exceedingly industrious habits, and his accessibility to common as well as uncommon people, has been commented upon favorably everywhere. Since his inauguration he has made one hundred and seventy-four nominations to office. The Senate confirmed one hundred and fifty-three of them, rejected two, and adjourned on Thursday sine die, leaving thirteen unacted upon.

The Senate spent its last hours in secret session, and various views are entertained by Senators as to the meaning of Thursday's events, regarding the failure to confirm certain Presidential appointments. The issue that arose was tenure of office under the civil service law, Republican Senators holding that certain officers were not liable to removal. Still a number of them insist that there is no policy of antagonism against the Administration, and that the nominations will be confirmed when the Senate re-convenes. It is understood that commissions will be issued to all these whose nominations were not confirmed and that they will at once enter upon the duties of the offices for which they were named. Should the Senate fail to sanction these incumbents when it convenes next winter, they will be displaced by other appointees.

The fourth of April was the first pay day of the new regime. To the President it brought the sum of $4,166. It costs a good deal to live in the White House, but in view of the Jeffersonian simplicity that is to mark this administration, it is thought Mr. Cleveland will not spend more than one half his wages. This reminds me that some one asked the other day how the President was paid. I mean from what official of the Government, and in what manner he receives his salary, whether by check or in hard cash, as most of the subordinates of Uncle Sam. The President is paid by the United States Treasurer's draft, issued on the warrant of the Secretary of the Treasury. The draft is based on an account audited by the First Auditor and First Controller of the Treasury.

The record of the extra session now ended shows that, with respect to office holding, the policy of the new administration is conservative and moderate. Relatively, the changes have been few. There would have been quite as many, had Mr. Blaine been elected. Of course, many others will follow, but the statistics presented, as well as the character of the selections, prove that Mr. Cleveland inclines towards conservatism. The new officials, as a class, are men of conservative tendencies and are not identified with active machine politics. It is a common complaint that the "workers" have been left out, and one has only to refer to the files of newspapers of the dates following the fourth of March, and read the columns of hopes and claims in the political gossip of the hour, to see how much ground there is for these lamentations. In scarcely a single instance has a man who was "prominently mentioned" "well backed" or "strongly pushed" for a place, got it.

The most significant political incident of the week was the renomination of Mr. Pearson as Postmaster at New York. This confounded politicians of both parties and temporarily called forth much indignation and excited language from the Democratic Senators. The act probably meets with the approval of these elements in the voting population with which Mr. Cleveland was identified. The Senate confirmed Mr. Pearson without contest or division, even those voting for him who had been loudest in their denunciation of his appointment.

Owing to the critical condition of Gen. Grant, President Cleveland has postponed the reception to the public, which was to have been given this evening. The White House where the dying man lived for eight years could not appropriately be the scene of a reception or large gathering, while his life hangs by so slight a thread. His approaching death is deeply felt in many households here, and all intended movements in official society wait on that inevitable event.

The size of the congregation at the new so called "President's church" on the last two Sunday mornings, has demonstrated the fact that something besides a revival can fill every pew in the church and leave the vestibule full of eager faces. Many strangers were in attendance, and they all wanted the ushers to seat them near the President's pew. This kind of magnetism is very distasteful to a man of Mr. Cleveland's unostentatious ways, but he must pay the penalty of greatness in the people's own way during the next four years. Doubtless he realizes this fact, and is resigned. ADAMS.

Milton Gleanings.

The Selectmen have appointed J. E. Mellen, depot master at East Milton, a special police.

Schools commence Monday after a two weeks' vacation.

The public reading rooms over Josiah Babcocks' store is now open until nine o'clock in the evening.

It is believed that the work of connecting the Granite and Milton Branch Railroad will soon be commenced.

Dr. H. P. Jacques has rented his residence to Eben Jordan, Jr., of the firm of Jordan Marsh & Co.

District Deputy Johnson of Dorchester installed the new officers of the Milton Division S. of T., on Tuesday evening.

An old fashioned clock is advertised for sale in another column.

James Crawford has sold his house on State street. Mrs. Crawford will continue her business at Mrs. George W. Randlett's.

Charles C. Brackett, father of Albert A. Brackett of the board of Selectmen, died at Quincy last Sunday evening.

While Mrs. Harris Farnum of West Quincy was driving on Granite avenue, East Milton, on Thursday afternoon, her horse was taken ill and fell, but soon recovered. Neither occupant or carriage were injured.

The Congregational Church at East Milton was tastefully trimmed with flowers last Sunday, and the Easter Concert was very good.

Parker & Wood's new 1885 Catalogue, just issued. Its contents are copious in valuable information as to culture of Seeds, Plants, etc., and its illustrated pages of Implements, Machines and Wooden Ware make it a handsome souvenir to every farmer, and to all interested in agriculture. See advertisement in another column.

Braintree.

Special and adjourned town meetings were held in Braintree, Monday afternoon. $1200 was appropriated for a superintendent of schools.

Voted to purchase a road machine, and $200 was appropriated.

The free use of the Town Hall was refused to the Military Company and other societies.

The Selectmen were instructed to act as agents of the town in all suits that may be brought against her.

After more or less discussion $100 was appropriated for the delivery of books from the Public Library to the citizens in the eastern section of the town.

The firemen are to receive $10 each for their services, being the same as last year.

The High School pupils in East Braintree will have to walk to and from school, as no appropriation was voted.

The meeting thought almost unanimously that night police were not needed.

Pleasant street was accepted and $200 appropriated.

The collection of taxes was let out to the lowest bidder. John Stoddard bid one per cent., and he was afterwards elected Collector of Taxes.

$1000 was appropriated toward the payment of the town debt.

The vote of the last meeting whereby it was voted to pay Edward Bannon a bounty with interest was reconsidered at this meeting by a vote of 61 to 47, after much discussion.

The total amount to be raised for town expenses is $81,300. The meeting adjourned to Monday evening, April 20, at 7.30 o'clock.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Mortgagee's Sale.

UNDER and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Ezekiel C. Sargent to Joseph W. Coburn, dated May 13, 1862 and recorded with Norfolk County Deeds, lib. 537, fol. 220, and for breach of the conditions therein contained and for the purpose of foreclosing same, will be sold at public auction in Quincy, in said County, on the premises first hereinafter described, on April 28, 1885, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage deed. Said premises being described in said Mortgage deed as follows: A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Quincy aforesaid on the easterly side of Howard street and the northerly side of Howard avenue, and shown on a plan of land situated at Quincy Neck, owned by E. C. Sargent, 1881, drawn by Whitman & Breck, Surveyors, to be recorded herewith, bounded and described as follows, viz:—

Beginning at the southwest corner of said premises at the junction of Howard avenue and Howard street, as shown on said plan, thence running southeasterly on said Howard avenue six hundred and forty-seven feet; thence turning and running northeasterly on land of George J. Sargent about eight hundred and thirty feet to the centre of Bent's Creek shown on said plan; thence turning and running along the centre of said Creek to Howard st., thence turning and running southwesterly on said Howard st. two hundred and eighty and four-tenths feet to land of Newcomb; thence running southeasterly on said Newcomb's land forty-one and seventy-five one hundredths feet; thence northeasterly on said land nineteen and three-tenths feet; thence running southeasterly on said land one hundred and nineteen and five-tenths feet; thence running southwesterly on said land seventy-six and twelve-hundredths feet; thence northwesterly on said land one hundred and sixty and ninety-two one-hundredths feet to Howard street; thence running southwesterly on said Howard street fifteen and two-tenths feet; thence running southeasterly on land formerly of one White, and land of Samuels four hundred and forty and eighty-two one-hundredths feet; thence running southwesterly on said Samuel's land two hundred feet; thence running northwesterly on said Samuel's land four hundred and forty-seven and six-tenths feet to Howard street; thence running southerly on said Howard street one hundred and thirty-three and seventy-two one-hundredths feet to land of Moynahan; thence running easterly on said Moynahan's land one hundred and twenty-seven and forty-five one-hundredths feet; thence turning and running southerly on said Moynahan's land ninety-three feet; thence running westerly on said land of Moynahan one hundred and twenty-four feet to said Howard street; thence running southerly on said Howard st. one hundred and thirty-two and three-tenths feet to the point of beginning.

Also, a certain other piece of land shown on said plan bounded and described as follows, viz:—Westerly by said Howard street one hundred and forty-six and ninety-five one-hundredths feet; southerly by land of H. H. Faxon one hundred and eighty-eight and five-tenths feet; easterly by a passageway shown on said plan one hundred and fifty-four and nine-tenths feet; and northerly by other land of said Faxon one hundred and eighty-one and nine-tenths feet, containing twenty-seven-thousand nine-hundred and twenty-one square feet according to said plan.

A portion of the premises first above described is subject to a mortgage of two thousand dollars to Daniel Baxter of Quincy.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

HE FELL IN THE STREETS

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the symptoms gradually abated, and I have had no trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others. If you desire to do so

Address—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

THE LONG AGO.

Oh! a wondrous stream is the river of time,
As it runs through the realm of tears,
And a faultless rythm, and a musical rhyme,
And a broader sweep, and a surge sublime,
And blends with the ocean of years.

How the winters are drifting like flakes of snow,
And the summers like buds between,
And the years in the sheaf as they come and go
On the river's breast, with its ebb and flow,
As it glides in the shadow and sheen.

There's a magical isle in the river of time,
Where the softest of airs are playing,
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the Junes with the roses are staying.

And the name of the isle is Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there—
There are brows of beauty, and bosoms of snow,
There are heaps of dust—but we loved them so!
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of song that nobody sings,
And a part of an infant's prayer;
There's a lute unswept, a harp without strings,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments she used to wear.

Farm and Garden.

What Potatoes to Plant.

If you want potatoes as early as possible, select the best early potato you can find. The genuine Early Rose is good enough and early enough. The Beauty of Hebron is equally good, and there are a dozen other varieties any one of which, if you happen to have it, will ripen about as early, and give satisfaction. If any one tells you he has a potato that will ripen two weeks earlier than the Rose or the Beauty of Hebron, and yield as much again per acre, tell him that it is a most valuable variety, and that he had better plant all he has got, and not sell a tuber to anyone else for seed. For early potatoes, plant in good, rich, mellow soil as soon as the frost is out of the ground. You can hardly plant too early. Until the plants appear, severe frost will not hurt them. When the plants are up, a frost will sometimes destroy the crop, or at any rate, seriously retard or injure it. A piece of paper, or a light covering of soil will save the plant. For winter potatoes, select a variety that possesses at least four points, viz: quality, vigorous growth of leaves to resist the potato bugs, a good keeper, and productiveness.

When the potato bugs first appeared everybody planted early varieties of potatoes, in hopes of getting ahead of the bugs. Now that we know how to keep the bugs in check, we can plant later kinds. As a rule, the early varieties cannot yield as well as the later sorts, which have a longer season to grow in; or if they do in exceptional cases, it is probably owing to unusual richness of land. On ordinary land, other things being equal, a late variety will yield better, and keep better (the next spring), than the early varieties. A late variety of potato should be planted as early as the soil can be got into good condition. If you do not wish to plant early—or perhaps we had better say, if you are behind with your work, and cannot plant as early as you wish, plant an earlier variety. The later you plant, the earlier should be the variety planted. The same principle, or rule as to planting, applies to cabbages, cauliflowers, tomatoes, cucumbers, melons, turnips, corn, beans, peas, etc. The earlier the variety, that is, the quicker it matures, the later can it be sown or planted.—American Agriculturist for April.

☞ The work horses now need an abundance of strengthening food. Keep the harness clean and soft. It is easier to prevent galls than to cure them, especially during this busy season, when a horse's labor is most constant and valuable.

Anecdotes.

"Have you weak eyes?" said a lady to an applicant for a kitchen position who wore blue spectacles.

"No, ma'am," said the applicant, "but I scour pots and things so thoroughly that the glitter of them hurts my sight."

A lady, engaged to be married, and getting sick of her bargain, applied to a friend to help her untie the knot before it was too late.

She replied: "Oh, certainly, it is very easy to untie it now while it is only a beau knot."

A lisping boy was out in the back yard pounding on a tin pan. The father came home tired and sullen, and being disturbed by the noise, cried out:

"What is that turned loose in the yard, a wild animal?"

The little fellow answered: "Y eth thir, it's a pan-thir."

A gentleman addressing his servant: "James, how is it that my butcher's bills are so large, and I always have such bad dinners?"

"Really, sir, I don't know; for I'm sure that we never have any thing nice in the kitchen that we don't send some of it up to the parlor."

Conundrums.

Why is a woman living up two pairs of stairs like a goddess? Because she is a second Flora (floorer).

When does a man eat the most indigestible supper? When he bolts the street door before going to bed.

What is the difference between an Emperor and a beggar? The one issues manifestoes, and the other manifests toes without his shoes.

Why do we suppose that tight rope dancers are great favorites with the public? Because their performance is always encored (on cord).

—The Weymouth Gazette in its North Weymouth items says, "that Mr. James Edwards, of Quincy, who is a large real estate owner in Old Spain, has sold a number of house lots on Rose Hill to parties in Boston and South Weymouth. The old Monatiquot, with its beautiful scenery, is attracting the attention of those who wish to build summer residences, and we believe there is to be a boom in real estate along its banks. When we have a railroad through this place, together with the water from Great Pond, then we shall hope to see this place a leading business section of the town."

Household Receipts.

PLAIN TEA CAKES. Two cups of sifted flour, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one egg well mixed with a cup of milk, one teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar dissolved in hot water. (Instead of the soda and cream of tartar, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted with the flour may be used.) Mix well and bake in muffin rings for twenty minutes in a very hot oven.

A SAVORY STEW. Take any kind of cold meat, though chicken or veal is best, cut into bits not very small, and add enough water to cover them, with a piece of butter the size of an egg, a dust of flour and salt and pepper; when thoroughly heated add one-half a can of peas, stir until all is well mixed and and serve hot. A very nice dish for a pick-up dinner or lunch, and very good with canned corn as well as peas.

BREAKFAST CAKE. Put a piece of butter the size of an egg into a quart of milk and let the milk become warm enough to melt the butter. Stir in flour sufficient to make a stiff batter and add two teaspoonfuls of salt, dissolve one-third of a cake of compressed yeast in a little warm water and mix it with the batter. Cover tightly, let it stand in a warm place over night and fry on a griddle.

SOUR MILK COOKIES. Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one of sour cream or milk, three eggs, one teaspoonful of soda; mix soft, roll thin. When the cookies are cut out sift granulated sugar over them, and roll it in by pressing the rolling-pin gently over the cakes, taking care not to flatten them too much.

FLAVOR FOR SOUP. An agreeable flavor is sometimes imparted to soup by sticking some cloves into the meat used for making stocks; a few slices of onions fried very brown in butter are nice; also flour browned by simply putting it into a saucepan over the fire and stirring it constantly until it is dark brown.

Relation of Alcohol to Digestive Organs.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Is Alcohol a Food? To answer this question, let us make a comparison. If you receive into your stomach a piece of bread or beef, nature welcomes its presence. The juices of the system at once take hold of it, dissolve it, and transform it for the uses of the body. A million tiny fingers (lacteals and veins) reach out to grasp it, work it over, and carry it into the circulation. The blood bears it onward wherever it is needed to mend or to build "the house you live in." Soon, it is no longer bread or beef, it is flesh on your arm; its chemical energy is imparted to you, and it becomes your strength. If, on the other hand, you take into your stomach a little alcohol, it receives no such welcome. Nature treats it as a poison, and seeks to rid herself of the intruder as soon as possible.*

The juices of the system will flow from every pore to dilute and weaken it, and to prevent its shrivelling up the delicate membranes with which it comes in contact. The veins will take it up and bear it rapidly through the system. Every organ of elimination, all the scavengers of the body, the lungs, the kidneys, the perspiration glands at once set to work to throw off the enemy. So surely is this the case that the breath of a person who has drunk only a single glass of the lightest beer will betray the fact."

*Food is digested, alcohol is not. Food warms the blood, directly or indirectly; alcohol lowers the temperature. Food nourishes the body, in the sense of assimilating itself to the tissues, alcohol does not. Food makes blood; alcohol never does anything more innocent than mixing with it. Food feeds the blood-cells; alcohol destroys them. Food excites, in health, to normal action only; alcohol tends to inflammation and disease. Food gives force to the body; alcohol excites reaction and wastes force, in the first place and in the second, as a true narcotic represses vital action and corresponding nutrition. If alcohol does not act like food neither does it behave like water. Water is the subtle but innocent vehicle of circulation, which dissolves the solid food, holds in play the chemical and vital reactions of the tissues, conveys the nutritive solutions from cell to cell, from tube to tube, and carries off and expels the effete matter. Water neither irritates tissue, wastes force, nor suppresses vital action; whereas alcohol does all three. Alcohol hardens solid tissue, thickens the blood, narcotizes the nerves, and in every conceivable direction antagonizes the operation and function of water."—(Lee's Text-Book.)*

Ammonia in Baking Powders.

Among the recent discoveries in science and chemistry, none is more important than to the uses to which common ammonia can be properly put as a leavening agent, and which indicate that this familiar salt is hereafter to perform an active part in the preparation of our daily food.

The carbonate of ammonia is an exceedingly volatile substance. Place a small portion of it upon a knife and hold over a flame, and it will almost immediately be entirely developed into gas and pass off into thin air. The gas thus formed is a simple composition of nitrogen and hydrogen. No residue is left from the ammonia. This gives it its superiority as a leavening power over soda and cream of tartar used alone, and has induced its use as a supplement to these articles. A small quantity of ammonia in the dough is effective in producing bread that will be lighter, sweeter, and more wholesome than that risen by any other leavening agent. When it is acted upon by the heat of baking the leavening gas that raises the dough is liberated. In this act it uses itself up, as it were; the ammonia is entirely diffused, leaving no trace or residum whatever. The light, fluffy, flaky appearance, so desirable in biscuits, etc., and sought after by professional cooks, is said to be imparted to them only by the use of this agent.

The bakers and baking powder manufacturers producing the finest goods have been quick to avail themselves of this useful discovery, and the handsomest and best bread and cake are now largely risen by the aid of ammonia, combined of course with other leavening material.

Ammonia is one of the best known products of the laboratory. If, as seems to be justly claimed for it, the application of its properties to the purposes of cooking results in giving us lighter and more wholesome bread, biscuit, and cake, it will prove a boon to dyspeptic humanity, and will speedily force itself into general use in the new field to which science has assigned it.—Scientific American.

An Indianapolis barber who abandoned his business and went into the ministry, was suddenly called upon one Sunday to baptize three candidates. He got along very well, but after baptizing the first, he astonished his congregation by lustily shouting "Next!"

Poverty has its cares my son; but then wealth has its cares, too,—more than poverty, ten to one. Look at the panics on the money market every week. Do you ever hear of a financial panic in the almshouse?"

Gail Hamilton says: "When I see a young man just starting out in life I always feel like being confidential with him." It's no use, Abigail, no use; you are to old.

An absent-minded husband telegraphed to his wife: "I send you a kiss." He received the reply: "Spruce young man called and delivered the kiss in good order.

The water system of New Orleans consists of large wooden tanks at the rear of each house, some of them reaching to the eaves, which catch all the rain from the roof. The water is remarkably good, but these huge tanks give the houses a very odd appearance.

A PERFECT BAKING POWDER

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder is due to the extreme care exercised by the manufacturers to make it entirely pure, uniform in quality, and of the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge, care, and skill attained by a twenty years' practical experience are contributed toward this end, and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with a greater accuracy, precision, and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients is definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence, always pure, wholesome, and uniform in quality. Each box is exactly like every other, and will retain its powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, at any time. The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity, and wholesomeness, and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

FARMERS DON'T BE HUMBUGGED

by high valuations which are Entirely Unofficial, or taken from old reports, published years ago, when the trade values given to fertilizing elements by State Chemists were much higher than they are at present.

One Fertilizer Company is advertising valuations of its phosphate, based on analyses of samples, taken from special lots by the direction of the Company itself, and sent to State Chemists for Private Analysis; the valuations, thus obtained, are advertised as the true value of this phosphate, when the latest Official Valuations of the same brand, determined by the same State Chemists, from samples, drawn by the Chemists themselves, or their authorized agents, from goods found on sale in the "open market," are from six to nine dollars per ton lower.

Others are advertising valuations purporting to represent the true value of their fertilizers, when the actual valuations, found in the Latest Official Reports of the State Chemists, are from from five to fifteen dollars per ton lower.

The Inspection of fertilizers is important and furnishes valuable information to the farmers, if the actual reports of the State Chemists are examined, and their analyses are made from samples taken in the open market, by the Chemists themselves, or their authorized agents, but until the present abuses are corrected by some better legislation, so that parties cannot advertise valuations of their fertilizers, which are higher by five to fifteen dollars per ton than those found in the latest Official Reports, the present system will continue to mislead rather than guide the public.

BEST BAKING POWDER.

Tests Made by the Government Chemist.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly Analytical Chemist for the Government, has made some interesting experiments as to the comparative strength of baking powders. Dr. Love's tests were made to determine what brands are the most economical to use, and as their capacity lies in their leavening power, tests were directed solely to ascertain the available gas of each powder. Dr. Love's report gives the following:

| Name of the Baking Powders: | Strength: Cubic Inches Gas per each ounce of Powder. |
| "Royal" (absolutely pure) | 127.4 |
| "Patapsco" (alum powder) | 125.9* |
| "Rumford's" (phosphate) fresh | 122.5* |
| "Rumford's" (phosphate) old | 32.7* |
| "Hanford's None Such," fresh | 121.6 |
| "Hanford's None Such," old | 84.35 |
| "Redhead's" | 117.0 |
| "Charm" (alum powder) | 116.9* |
| "Amazon" (alum powder) | 111.9* |
| "Cleveland's" (contains lime) when fresh | 110.8 |
| "Sea Foam" | 107.9 |
| "Czar" | 106.8 |
| "Dr. Price's" | 102.6 |
| "Snow Flake" (Groff's, St. Paul) | 101.88 |
| "Lewis's" Condensed | 98.2 |
| "Congress" yeast | 97.5 |
| "Pearl" | 93.2 |
| "C. E. Andrews & Co's" (contains alum) | 78.17* |
| "Hecker's" | 92.5 |
| "Gillet's" | 84.2 |
| "Bulk" | 80.5 |

*In his report, the Government Chemist says: "I regard all alum powders as very unwholesome. Phosphate and Tartaric Acid powders liberate their gas too freely in process of baking, or under varying climatic changes suffer deterioration."

"I have tested Royal Baking Powder, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates or any injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

Dr. H. A. Mott, the former Government Chemist, reported to the Government in favor of the "Royal" brand. He says: "It is a scientific fact, that Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

A Common Sailor.

I am a man before the mast,
That ploughs the trackless sea,
And on this simple subject,
Would you please enlighten me.

Common sailors, we are termed,
Tell me the reason, why
That sneering adjective alone
To our calling should apply?

When speaking of a man on shore,
I never hear you say,
He is a common this or that,
Be his calling what it may.

But he is a common sailor,
You will often hear folks say,
When talking of us hardy men
Who maintain our country's sway.

For among the nations of the earth,
What would America be;
If not for laurels dearly won
By her children of the sea.

Then why you term us common,
Is a mystery I am sure,
When we always thrash your foes,
And plant freedom on your shore.

For if a foreign foe again should try
A landing on our shore,
Why! we would man your fighting ships,
As we did in days of yore.

And when merry Christmas comes around,
What would your puddings do,
If choicest fruits from foreign lands,
They were not brought to you.

And, young ladies of our country too,
You should our calling bless,
For do we not bring home the stuff,
Of which you make your dress?

To be admired by gentlemen,
Your silks and satins show,
Then don't despise those hardy men,
Who bring those things to you.

And all you who use the fragrant weed,
When smoking at your ease,
Just think upon those sleepless nights,
We pass upon the seas.

In bringing leaf to make cigars,
To decorate your face,
You would not think it common
Were you sometimes in our place.

And all you who think so light of us,
I would like you thus to try,
One night upon the ocean,
When the northeast winds blow high.

With roaring winds and blinding snow,
With pelting hail and rain,
'Twould be an uncommon circumstance
That caught you there again.

To maintain a wife or mother,
Upon our scanty pay,
We cannot save a dollar,
No more do I think could they.

Still, we ask not for your pity,
Award us but our due,
And respect us in proportion,
For the good our labors do.

And all those luxuries you enjoy,
W'll dutifully procure,
Without trouble they shall be brought
Unto your very door.

But I would ask this as a favor,
If you hear a woman or a man,
Use that unkind word,
Rebuke them if you can.

Before they term us common men,
First let them make sure,
They could undergo the hardships
Which we common men endure.

F. L. P.

Miscellany.

To Whom was Honor Due?

"Oh, dear! It is just as mamma said."

Maud and I stopped on the stairs and looked back at the speaker, a blue-eyed little woman with a tangle of short, brown curls, who knelt in the hall beside a large trunk, the varied contents of which were piled on the floor beside her.

"What is it, Nettie? What did your mother say?" asked Maud.

"Have you lost anything?" I asked, for among the seven girls who had rented rooms together and were attending the Normal school at E——, Kansas, pretty little Netrie Nelson with her helpless ways and loving heart had become a prime favorite.

"Oh! it is nothing you can help. Mamma said she should always think of me as a poor, little thing away off here alone, with everything too dirty to wear, and wished she could get at my trunk once a week, and—oh dear! I wish she could." And she drew her usually cheerful face into a perplexed frown.

"I did mean to keep my things nice, and when I saw how neat you girls kept yours, I meant to more than ever, and now I don't believe I've a single clean lace for next week, and there is no use looking any more.

"The rest of my things need washing too, but there is nothing that shows off like a soiled neck ruffle. I thought I had one more, and I'd make that do till next Saturday, and then I'd wash everything; I should have done so this morning when you did, but I do so dread it. I guess I'll have to put these things back," and she commenced with both hands to pitch the things into the trunk again, "and go find some one to do it for me.

"I don't suppose"—and the frown deepened—"I ought to hire my washing done, the rest of you don't, and I presume you have as much money to spend as my papa has for me.

"But"—and her face cleared—"I guess I will; they told me to. I suppose they knew I didn't know how very well, and then I like to have my things look nice, and most any one can make them look nicer than I can. I'll pick up everything, and then I shan't have to wash again until the term is out; and then I can have all the time I want, or mamma will do it for me,"—with a little sigh.

"I wonder why this trunk won't shut, I am sure I had all these things in and my books besides—but then, mamma packed it, and I presume she was more careful than I have been.

"Well, there! I'll make that do. It isn't shut, but there is no one here that steals; and if there was, they would never take my things, they are too mussed. I must hurry now and dress, or it will be dark before I get around. No, you needn't wait; if I did like the rest of you, I'd be all ready; but here I am dressed in this felt skirt and knit jacket, and my hair hasn't been combed since Friday morning." She ran her fingers through her curls, "There! I'll call that combed for this time. I wish it wasn't so much trouble to be neat. Ask for my mail, too, please, I'll not have time."

"Isn't it odd?" said Maud to me, when we were on our way, "if you or I did as Nettie does, we wouldn't be fit to be seen; but she will turn her lace wrong side out, buy a new ribbon, and look neater than either of us."

"She said her mamma made her clothes, and they are so well made, it seems strange that Nettie should not have caught a little of her mother's neatness," I answered.

"The idea of one's weekly wash consisting of a piece of lace," and we both laughed.

"Letters all around, girls," cried Maud, running into the room on our return. "Here's two for Katie, and three for our stately Grace, one for Madge, one for Laura, and you haven't been forgotten either, my 'wee, winsome' Nettie, for here's a letter from some girl friend, and here's another from your sweetheart, for I couldn't help taking a peep at the envelopes, and you must not blame me, for I am jealous of any one who tries to make love to my sweet little grandmother; so here's a kiss, and here are your letters; but let's not one of us look at a letter until we have closed the blinds, drawn out the study table and lit the lamp."

And Maud, chattering away, flitting from one thing to another in her birdlike way, was the last to flutter into a seat and spread her six letters out before her, for Maud was like the man who always put on spectacles when he ate cherries; so though she had more correspondents than all of us, she always took the utmost deliberation in reading, that her letters might last longer; and as to-night was Saturday, and she had plenty of time, she dallied over the postmarks, examined the writing, and finally chose one, held it up to the light, lest there might be something on the outside that had escaped her notice, until Madge laughingly suggested to string them and hang before the mirror, and then it would look like she had twelve letters, and as she had no curiosity as to the contents, she need never take them down, and so she might always have twelve unread letters in the house.

In the meantime I had read and reread my own home letter, and wondered at the secret of sweet mother love that could tell you, you are loved and missed while seemingly telling only homely details of every-day life.

I carefully folded the letter, slipped it back in the envelope, vaguely wondering what life would be like without dear old mother's love; when I looked up to find Nettie watching me earnestly.

"Who was your letter from, Fannie?" and she took it from my hand. "From your mother?" what a beautifully quaint scribe she is. I knew it must be from your mother by the way you looked at it. Mine was from mamma, too."

"From your mamma," said I, looking at her letter. "Why, Nettie, there isn't a girl here that writes a more beautiful and girlish hand."

"What!" cried Maud, didn't I guess right? Wasn't your letter from some girl?"

"You weren't so far wrong, it was from mamma."

"She does write a girlish hand; it does not look at all like Fannie's or mine from my mother," said Maud looking at the writing closely.

"Well, she isn't my real own mamma. My mother died when I was only eight years old, and so she is—is"—she hesitated, and went on quickly, "she is my mamma now."

"Your step-mother!" we all exclaimed, for though Nettie was always talking of her "mamma," this was the first she had ever mentioned her being only a step-mother.

"No," she said with quiet dignity, "she is my mamma."

"Why, Nettie," cried Madge, who was only sixteen, "I thought girls always hated their step-mothers."

"And the step-mothers always hated the girls," added Maud.

"Well, I don't hate mine, and if she hates me, she has a queer way of showing it."

"Why is she nice?" asked Kate, in much the same tone as she might have asked: "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

Nettie picked up her history as though the subject was dropped—"Of course she is nice, or my papa would never have married her."

"Why, of course," cried Kate, confusedly, "I didn't think of that."

"How old were you when your father married," asked Maud.

"Sixteen, and mamma was just seventeen," read Nettie from her history in a tone that would have stopped most questioners.

"Oh, come, Nettie, put away that book and tell us all about it," coaxed Maud. Maud had a step-father, brother and sisters, and how a step-anything could have any lovable traits was a mystery she meant if possible to solve.

"How could you, being old enough to keep house, look upon a girl only a year older as anything but a nuisance, when she came meddling with the work and stealing your father's love away from you."

Nettie looked up from her book; "I don't like to talk about it," very quietly,—then, "Some way it hurts."

"Oh, forgive me, cried Maud, impulsively. "Don't tell if you don't wish to, only—" and her lips quivered and the tears started, as her mind went back to her childish years, wondering if she had felt as Nettie did, if her home life would have been any happier.

Nettie, seeming to see something in Maud's manner more than mere curiosity, said cheerily: "Never mind, Maudie, I was cross. Of course, you girls can't know what I suffered in those eight years, when I had 'papa's love and the housekeeping all to myself.' Papa seemed to love me more after she came, for he hadn't so much to worry him; and he seemed to think it kind of me to love mamma, as though I could help it, or would not have tried hard when I saw her love made him happy.

"As for the house work, I was glad enough to have her meddle, I was different from you, Maud; you know how to work and seem to take a pride in it; I didn't know how, and had tried so long with no one to show me that I grew disgusted and never wanted to learn.

"Papa and I had always kept house, at least, that is what we called it. He said I was all he had and he must have me near him. We kept help when we could and hired out the washing, ironing, baking and sewing, when we could not. Papa was always loving and kind to me, but he wasn't happy, and as I grew older matters seemed to grow worse, and the shadows deepened in papa's eyes; for I didn't look, act or dress like other girls, and seemed to know less about housekeeping than at first. Papa wanted me to go away to school, but as he wouldn't send me away when I was little, so I could not bear to leave him then. And then he brought mamma home, and she seemed a transforming fairy. Dirt and disorder seemed to have as great an antipathy for her as they had liking for me. If houses have feelings, I am sure ours must have rejoiced to have the cobwebs and mice thoroughly banished once more. But if the house did not, I am sure the inmates did. The old merry twinkle came into papa's eyes again, and I had time to read, visit and think, and when I saw papa was happy, and the work went on better when I was away, I was glad to come here to school. Now, girls, can you wonder I got angry when you called her my my step-mother in the slighting way you did?

"Do you know, I always thought the girl in the song, 'I could not call her mother,' must have been very silly if she thought it would be any favor to a young bride to have a great 'harum scarum' girl (as motherless ones always are, poor things!), calling her mother.

"I believe all girls want, when they get married, a little home just large enough for two, and if she denies herself for a man and his motherless children, don't she deserve more praise than blame? And how could a girl blame her for so loving her father?

"It seems too, as the song has it, as God could give me but one mother, he did the next best thing, and gave me a sweet little mamma to make a home for papa and me once more, and giving me a chance to make a woman of myself."

"But," queried Kate, "your father has been married four years, why has not she taught you how to be a 'transforming fairy?' Then your washings would not trouble you as they do now."

"Perhaps," with a little sigh, "I should not have loved her quite so well if she had tried to teach me. It is not pleasant to be told of one's faults.

"I think she thought so anyway, and she told me most girls of my age knew how to keep a house nice and themselves neat, simply because they had mother to teach them, and as I had missed that, I need not worry about the work now. She would rather I would give all my mind to my school, keep myself neat, and beyond that simply be happy, and try to make up for what I had lost in the last eight years. After I graduate, she says if I still wish it, she will gladly teach me what little she knows of housework.

"Why, Maudie, you foolish little thing, what are you crying for? Because you are not as good a Yankee as you thought?

"Come, don't cry, and I'll say to cheer you, your second guess was right, and that is another thing I may thank mamma for, as no one would want a sweetheart that would look as untidy as I did this afternoon, and I never can look like that when I'm with mamma."

"Any man might well want you for his sweetheart when he knew your loving heart and sensible head. If all children thought and acted as you did, it would end the misery of this step relation."

"You mean," answered Nettie, "if all step-parents acted as my mamma has, it would lift the reproach from the name."

Letter from Rev. Edward Norton.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA, STEAMER AMAZON, MARCH 9th, 1885.

It is a delightful day on this blue sea, off the coast of Greece. Though as the date of my letter informs you it is early March, I am writing on deck, beneath an awning; and the sea-breeze is as welcome as it would be outside of Boston harbor in the heat of July or August. Two days ago I sailed at sunset out of the charming bay of Naples. Till late into the evening hours I watched Vesuvius lighting up the heavens.

The next morning when I went on deck we were passing Stromboli. It looked like a cone lifted out of the sea, and was sending its volume of smoke to the skies. Soon after we entered the strait of Messina. Here we had, on our right, and at the water's edge, Messina with its orange and olive groves; and on our left Reggio, the Rhegium to which Paul came when he fetched a compass from Syracuse. And afterwards, though we were sailing directly away from it, snow-covered Ætna was a most all day long in sight from the deck of our ship. Now we have just seen in dim outline the coast of Greece; and later and more distinctly the hills of ancient Crete, on which island are the Fair Havens, in which Paul found harbor. But from this time we shall see no more land till we sight Alexandria, and step on shore in the land of the Pharoahs and the pyramids. What can I do better therefore than to take pen and tell the friends at home, who perchance would like to hear from me a word about my wanderings.

Since I left Boston, January 27th, I have seen a little, first, I think I may say, of the Atlantic ocean. That body of water is visible I have always been told from the United States, and I had fancied before leaving home that I had seen it. But crossing as I did in that terrific weather, when the Servia came into New York without her upper deck, and the Alaska was six or eight days over-due, I came to the conclusion that I had not before really made the acquaintance of Ocean. But I tried to enjoy the voyage, and as I was not sea-sick, rather think I did; though I might easily be made to confess that I "do not wish to do so anymore."

Then since sailing up the Mersey, February 8th, about sunset, I have seen a little, and but a little of England. When I crossed from Liverpool to New Haven, though it was really mid winter, this country was putting on much, and far more than usual, I was told, of the appearance of spring. Its abundant evergreen was to me a continual delight, and often did I wish that our own climate made the same possible with us. The old city of Chester, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick and Kenilworth castles, Oxford and London in turn claimed my attention and richly rewarded my visit.

I found Englishmen everywhere thoughtful, and seriously so, over affairs in the Soudon. Gen. Gordon's death has cast upon them a deep gloom. He was, perhaps a strange, certainly an unusual compound but a noble, self-sacrificing, and heroic man. When I went from France into Italy English officers were on the train, and they were free to tell their anticipations—which have since been justified—of no easy task at the seat of war to which they were hastening. And as you know the clouds still thicken and the end is not yet. Then still again, if you will keep it as quiet as newspaper publication will allow, I will tell you that I have seen the English Channel, and never wish to see it again. Englishmen call it "a nasty bit of water" and there is no improvement on that phrase in the mother tongue. Though this channel treated me with some degree of consideration, it inflicted on fellow travellers nameless suffering. And though I have labored hard since I left home to cherish no ill will toward any person or anything still I find, I suppose, on the night of Feb. 18th, really wish that this "nasty bit of water" had been bridged or tunneled, hoisted or sunk, before I saw it. But across the dreadful channel I was ready to say with one of the poets, "O pleasant land of France."

Paris, it has been often said, is France. And Paris is light, airy, rich, gay, beautiful. I have never seen so beautiful a city before, and fear I shall not again in all my journey. My railway ride across this "pleasant land of France" was full of interest. The fields were lawns, the hedges were trimmed into the latest fashion, and the trees which bore up unnumbered vines were set in beauteous order.

When I reached Mt. Cenis tunnel the snow was very deep and piled in heaps, but once through, we were soon down on the plains of sunny Italy. In a few hours we went from mid winter to balmy spring and the orange groves. Italy is the land of the vine, the orange, the lemon, and the mulberry. It certainly has been too the home of art and now in the intellectual and moral world the sun of a brighter day seems to be rising upon it. Humbert king of United Italy is very popular with the people. He has made education compulsory and the day is not distant, I hope, when the occupation of the scribes, who sit at the street corners to write letters for those who cannot write themselves, will be gone.

For Italian cities I have seen Genoa, Pisa, Florence, Rome and Naples; and did time and space permit I should be glad to tell you of the many things of interest I have seen in them. I have like others on a similar journey seen acres of pictures and mountains of sculpture. I have stood by daylight and moonlight amid the ruins of ancient Rome. I have heard the marvelous stories told by monks about the relics in their possession and sometimes doubted. I have gazed in amazement at the superstition manifested daily and hourly under the dome of St. Peter's. I have tried to peer into the darkness of the papacy as it now lives or stays in Rome, but darkness so thick is not easily penetrated. And finally I have climbed Vesuvius—a harder climb I never wish to undertake—looked into the terrible crater and turned away. But I must make this story short, and hasten to that which is yet before me.

After a brief stay in Egypt, I'll endeavor to make the acquaintance of the Nile, I shall go to Palestine and if time permits will write you a word about these lands. Meanwhile I have note books which are fast filling, page by page, and if I survive the heat and the robbers, as I confidently expect to do, you may expect to hear from these note books in Quincy.

Half-Time Plan.

The School Committee of Quincy have adopted the half-time plan with the little children attending the D primary at the Adams and Willard schools. The plan is for a part of the D primary scholars to attend one-half of the day, and the remainder the other half, that is, a scholar will attend three forenoons and two afternoons one week, and two forenoons and three afternoons the next week, and so on through the term.

Owing to the great increase in school children in these two districts, the Committee are unable to find seats for only about half of those who are sent; consequently they have been obliged to adopt this method to accommodate all. Not because they have come to believe in its wisdom, but from lack of room, they have been compelled to adopt it for the present. This method may be found so wise and good that they will follow it with all the lower grades; although the Committee are in hopes the town will in the near future build on the new school lot, purchased last season, between Granite and Water streets, a large handsome schoolhouse that will better accommodate these crowded districts.

Anniversary Exercises.

The Sunday School connected with the Congregational Church, Quincy, held its anniversary exercises last Sunday evening, it being the 53d anniversary of the organization of the school. The exercises consisted of prayer by Rev. Mr. Ayres, readings and recitations, interspersed with singing by members of the school, an address by Rev. Mr. Ayres, and the report of the Secretary giving the statistics for the past year, by which it appears that over 425 different names appear on the register for the year 1884-5. The largest attendance on any one Sunday was June 22d, when 264 were present; smallest, exclusive of March 29, was August 17th, 166; on March 29th, 91 were present. The largest number in the Primary Department was 78, June 8th. The average attendance, 220. Three officers and seven scholars have been present every Sabbath during the year, and several have been absent only once or twice. Seven from the school have united with the church, and one has died.

The school now numbers 330; teachers and officers, 40; Bible class, 20; Primary Department, taking the little ones under eight and some not over four years old, 70; and the main school, 200. The library contains 468 volumes. The benevolent contributions have amounted to $200, and the general expenses to $158.

The exercises were in charge of the Superintendent, Mr. C. W. Carter, who presided in his usual pleasing manner.

LARGE EDITION. Having an extra call this week for the PATRIOT we are obliged to print an edition of

4,800 Copies

to supply the demand. This is the largest addition the publishers were ever called upon to furnish; but as we are soon to be a city, we presume it will often run up to tens of thousands.

MAY FESTIVAL. Another of those delightful May festivals is in preparation by the young people of the First Church Sunday School. It promises to be the best they have yet given. For some time they have been planning it, and working for it, and have many amusements in store. There will be a May-pole dance by sixteen girls trained for the occasion by Madame Arcan. There will be a chance for young and old to go-a-Maying in an entirely surprising and amusing manner; there will be tables for the sale of fancy articles, flowers, May baskets, etc.; a post office and a shooting gallery, besides other entertainment such as music and marionette exhibitions. The festival will be held in the Town Hall the afternoon and evening of Saturday, May 2d.

SIGNAL FLAGS. Last Sunday, Signal Officer George S. Bass, displayed for the first time from the Post Office the flags indicating the predictions of Old Prob. regarding the weather. There are eight flags in all. The flags themselves are white, and the emblems are of different shapes and colors. The cold wave flag with its black square centre has been quite neighborly during the winter and is familiar to all, but the others are strangers: the circular red centre indicates higher temperature; red crescent, lower temperature; red star, stationary temperature; circular blue centre, general rain or snow; blue crescent, clear or fair weather; the blue star, local rain or snow; the red flag with a black centre is the cautionary signal, and indicates a storm, high winds or foul weather.

SAVINGS BANK. The Quincy Saving Bank Corporation held its annual meeting on Tuesday. Hon. Charles Marsh was re-elected president, and Horace B. Spear vice president. The board of trustees are the same as last year, with the exception of the substitution of Walter T. Babcock's name in place of the late Israel W. Munroe, viz: Charles Marsh, Horace B. Spear, George A. Brackett, Chas. A. Howland, John Q Adams, D. H. Bills, William G. Sheen, R. F. Claflin, John Q. A. Field, Charles H. Porter, Elias A. Perkins and Walter T. Babcock. George L. Gill was re-elected treasurer and secretary.

IMMENSE. Mr. Gilbert Miller, who resides at Town Hill, West Quincy, has raised some of the largest parsnips we ever saw. One measured 17 1-2 inches in circumference, 18 inches in length and weighed 3 1-4 pounds; another was 12 inches in circumference, 31 1-2 inches long and weighed 2 1-2 pounds. If any of our farmers or gardners can beat this we would be pleased to hear from them.

DISCHARGED. James P. Nolan, who was before the Superior Court at Dedham this week, for allowing minors in his billiard hall, in Robertson's Block, Quincy, was discharged on the first offence. The jury disagreed on the second; and on the other two complaints the government was not ready for trial. W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., appeared for the defendant.

CONCERT. On referring to the advertisements, it will be seen that a grand concert is to be given at the Town Hall on Wednesday evening next by the well-known Weber Quartet, in which Master Eddie Warring of Quincy will take part. Master Warring has a charming soprano voice, and his selections will be listened to with pleasure by all lovers of fine singing.

Brief Locals.

☞ Carpenters are busy.

☞ The native dandelion has come.

☞ Some farmers have commenced ploughing.

☞ The wild geese are on their migrations northward.

☞ W. I. Tuckerman is to enlarge his cottage at Hough's Neck.

☞ A cottage house is being built on Penn street for Andrew Milne.

☞ Dog licenses will have to be paid soon; the year expires May 1.

☞ J. M. Murray's cottage at Hough's Neck is being improved.

☞ The High School now commences at eight o'clock in the morning.

☞ Box 62 at Atlantic is obtaining the reputation of being the false alarm box.

☞ A cellar is being dug for a new house for John Boyle off Liberty street.

☞ Mrs. E. R. Wentworth has returned from a visit to her daughter in New York.

☞ Should not this town have a Business Men's Association, or Board of Trade?

☞ Chas. H. Spear is building a stable on the land in the rear of his residence on Franklin street.

☞ Edward Glennon has nearly completed the cellar for a stable in the rear of his house off Liberty street.

☞ John P. Duffy and Timothy Shea have each been fined one dollar and costs this week for being drunk.

☞ McKenzie & Paterson's polo team were defeated by the Barker & Son's team three to one last Saturday evening.

☞ Tirrell & Sons have built a pretty little barge, the "Gypsy" for George W. Young of East Weymouth.

☞ Beacon Light Club is to have an entertainment on the 21st inst., as will be seen by referring to advertisement.

☞ It is rumored the Old Colony Railroad is going to sell its land on Centre street, adjoining the Adams' farm.

☞ In the District Court, Thursday, John R. Kennedy was fined $15.00 without costs, for keeping a dog without a license.

☞ There are two bands in Weymouth. It is not the old one that Quincy was to secure, for they are to play at home Memorial Day.

☞ William M. Marden, reporter of the Globe, will have his watchful eye on Cape news this summer, in addition to his present duties.

☞ Thomas H. Plumer has commenced on the cellar for his new building between the stores of C. B. Tilton and T. E. Furnald.

☞ Millinery openings are now engrossing the average female mind, and they will make many a pocket book look as if an elephantic Jumbo had sat down upon it.

☞ The Sunday Heralds now arrive in town at five o'clock Sunday morning, a special train which runs through to Newport, having been put on by the Herald people.

☞ Quincy has been more fortunate than some of its neighbors regarding measles and whooping cough. Milford reports 200 cases of the former.

☞ The management of the Coliseum, which said that it had the smallest attendance on polo night, now have that sport nearly every evening.

☞ Miss S. H. Hussey after a pleasant sojourn among friends has returned to Quincy with improved health, and will be glad to see her friends and customers.

☞ The Weymouth News says R. J. Cook, formerly of Quincy, has commenced the wheelwright business in Turner's building on Broad street, in that place.

☞ We understand the Apalachian Club of Boston, composed of gentlemen and ladies, is to visit Quincy today, and ascend Rattlesnake hill in the west part of the town.

☞ The stable at the residence of Col. W. B. White is to be moved to face Elm street and altered into a house, and a new house is to be built on the lot facing Hancock street.

☞ John R. Graham has sold four hauses this week; one at the corner of Washington and Arnold streets to John E. Drake, and three on Arnold street to Michael McCuine, John Mundy and John Sheppard.

☞ Patrick Shea and William Duffy, two young lads, have been arrested for the disturbances on Granite street recently. They were before the court Thursday, but their cases were continued to next Thursday.

☞ Arthur E. Sproul of the Herald stole a march on the other daily reporters Sunday, and published the full text of the report of the Charter Committee on the city question. Souther now has several extra copies for sale.

☞ The Tirrell Polo Club is well named, for we noticed five of the six members are Tirrells, viz.: Edgar, Fred, Henry, Harry and Charles. The Wild team were too much for them Tuesday evening, however, and took them into camp in "three straight."

☞ Last Saturday, James E. Maxim and Charles F. Pettengill enjoyed rich sport at Black's Creek and succeeded in capturing a seal. Mr. Maxim having been very skilful in throwing the lasso. The animal has been on exhibition at Mr. Maxim's this week.

☞ On Tuesday afternoon G. I. Aldrich, superintendent of schools, left his horse standing in front of Robertson's Block, but he took it into his head to run away. He capsized the buggy, scattered books, etc. along the road, but was stopped before serious damage resulted.

☞ I. Freeman Hall, formerly principal of the Washington school at Quincy Point, has resigned his position as Superintendent of the schools of Dedham, to accept a similar position at Leominster. In the few years that Mr. Hall has been at Dedham he has brought the schools of that town to the highest point of excellence. His resignation will take place May 15.

☞ There were five entries in the two-mile race at the Coliseum on Tuesday evening: Frank Burrell, D. Vinton Pierce, Eddie Glover, J. W. Gilman and W. Nightingale. It was well contested and quite interesting. Eddie Glover won in seven minutes, thirty-two seconds, and was awarded the gold medal. Frank Burrell took the silver medal, D. Vinton Pierce the silver cup and W. Nightingale the silver fruit knife.

☞ The work of demolishing the coal sheds on Granite street has commenced.

☞ The Associated Charities met Tuesday afternoon at the School Committee's room.

☞ Several G. A. R., men attended the memorial services in Boston last Sunday, but were obliged to leave early to get the train.

☞ There was not a very large attendance at the concert by the Hungarian Gypsies last Sunday evening, but it is said to have been very good.

☞ The first three degrees of Masonry are to be exemplified at Masonic Hall, Brockton, on the afternoon and evening of next Thursday. Rural Louge of Quincy, works the second.

☞ Our readers would do well to read the advertisement of Frank A. Locke, the tuner. He is highly recommended by the best citizens of Boston. He has established a branch office at Quincy.

☞ Auctioneer Adams will sell on Thursday next on Hancock street, opposite Col. A. B. Packard's hot house, furniture, sewing and button-hole machines, crockery, glass and earthen ware, and a variety of useful articles.

☞ At the Probate Court in Dedham, on Wednesday, Omar Loring of Boston and John L. Loring of Duxbury were appointed trustees of estate bequeathed by the will of Charles Loring of this town, for the benefit of Lizzie, Sarah B. and Mary W. Loring; bonds $75,000.

☞ Charles A. Howland has been chosen President of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company. No gentleman is better qualified to fill this honorable and lucrative office than Mr. Howland; for his long and careful training as secretary, since the death of Mr. Stephen Bates, has fitted him in a most thorough manner. There is no reason why this company shall not continue to be one of the best mutual companies in New England.

Wollaston.

The Spauldings gave a fine entertainment last Saturday evening.

In our Wollaston news last week we spoke of the serious illness of Charles W. Slack, and scarcely was the PATRIOT out before we learned of his death, at his residence on Columbus avenue, Boston. He was well known in Quincy, having resided at South Quincy, and also at Wollaston, several seasons. He leaves a widow, son and daughter; the last, Mrs. Walter M. Hatch, residing at Wollaston.

The New England Conference has decided this week that the Methodist Church shall be supplied by Rev. F. H. Knights.

The Wollaston Laundry has opened a Boston office on Lincoln street, opposite the Boston and Albany depot.

Henry D. Wheeler, who has been disabled a couple of weeks by having his hands burned at the Wollaston Laundry, has about recovered. He was fortunate in having joined the Mutual Accident Association, but a few months before.

Water has been let on at the fountain this week.

During the month of March 843 single tickets were sold at the Wollaston depot to Quincy. This is more than in any previous month, and is owing to the attendance at the rink.

The Surveyors of Highways are devoting considerable attention to the streets of Wollaston; Newport and Winthrop avenues and Arlington, and Brook streets, have been repaired.

H. L. Deming is to build a nice house next to E. Hewitson's.

The Baptist Church held its annual meeting last Monday evening and elected the same board of officers.

On Tuesday evening, at the Baptist Church, there was an interesting lecture by Pahtay, a Burman. He had a collection of utensils peculiar to his country, and appeared in his native costume. There was a good attendance.

A society has been formed in connection with the Baptist Church, which meets monthly, and is known as the Young People's Outlook Society. Mrs. F. E. Dewhurst is president. "Mormonism" was the subject at the last meeting, and consisted of a discussion and essays, interspersed with music. "Alaska" will be the subject for the next meeting.

The Elliot Club met Wednesday evening with A. A. Lincoln, and selected Scott for its theme. Mrs. A. A. Lincoln read an essay on Scott's life; E. Hewitson spoke of him as a historian; Rev. B. B. Sherman as a novelist; Rev. W. R. Lord read extracts from Marjorie Flemming, Mrs. George F. Pinkham read a paper on Scott as a poet, and Mrs. W. R. Lord read selections from his poems.

SOCIETY OF PHYSICIANS. A meeting of the physicians of the Union Medical and Surgical Association, and such others as are members of the Mass. Medical Society, residing in the towns of Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Randolph and Holbrook, was held at the Cushing House, Hingham, on the 15th inst., to organize a new district Medical Society, a branch of the Massachusetts Medicine, and to be known as the Norfolk South District Medical Society. The following officers were elected:

President,—Dr. F. F. Forsaith of Weymouth.

Vice President.—Dr. T. Haven Dearing of Braintree.

Secretary and Treasurer,—Dr. John F. Welch of Quincy.

Librarian,—Dr. F. C. Granger of Randolph.

Commissioner of Trials,—Dr. C. E. Prior of Holbrook.

Censors,—Dr. J. W. Spooner of Hingham, Dr. C. E. Prior of Holbrook, Dr. J. C. Fraser of E. Weymouth, Dr. S. M. Donovan of Quincy, Dr. F. C. Granger of Randolph.

Councillors,—Dr. G. W. Fay of E. Weymouth, Dr. T. H. Dearing of Braintree, Dr. C. C. Tower of S. Weymouth.

For the Patriot.

PIE SUPPER.

On Thursday evening the Ladies' Aid Society connected with the Congregational Church gave an entertainment and pie supper in the vestry. Some thirty or forty different kinds graced the table, including both meat pies and sweet pies, and it was the vote of those who were present, that it was the supper of the season.

The entertainment commenced at 8 o'clock with—the presentation of Mrs. Jarley's wax works—who were extremely life like looking figures, and when wound up by "John" really performed wonderfully well. Mrs. Jarley as usual took great pleasure in pointing out the beauties of the collection, in giving their life history in a highly interesting manner. Some of the most costly, were Mrs. Winslow administering soothing syrup to an already stupified baby—not quiet from the quantity of medicine it had taken, as Mrs. Jarley informed the audience but because its cries was out of working order.

Jack-sprat and his wife who lived so amiably together was an interesting group—also the Bachelor who went to London to buy him a wife and returned wheeling her in a wheel barrow.

The Siamese twins, one born in Borneo and the other on Cape Cod was a really wonderful representation.

Jenny Lind the singer, the most costly work of all, when wound up refused to sing but after being well oiled by "John" seemed better natured and showed the great compass of her voice.

These and many others engaged the attention of the audience for an hour when Mrs. Jarley much fatigued withdrew with an invitation to all to come often to this wonderful show.

The remainder of the programme was a solo by Mrs. Chas. Wrisley, reading by Miss Eva Hall, song by Miss Mertie Phillips and reading by Mr. J. Federhen 3d.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Sabbath School was held Sunday, April 12th, 1885. The officers elected were as follows:

Supt.—M. A. Marks.
Asst. Supt.—Rev. Chas. W. Williams.
Treas.—Mrs. C. E. Whiton.
Sec.—Ada Driscoll.
Lib.—Samuel Hayden.

A sociable was held on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. Hiram Phillips.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Linnie Gordon and son returned home on Saturday from a fortnight's visit in Fitchburg.

Mr. Luther M. Hersey has moved from Washington street to Washington court. Rev. J. L. Harris we are pleased to say, is able to attend to his duties once more, having almost wholly recovered from last week's illness, which is the first he has had for twenty-five years.

Rev. Mr. Leland of No. Weymouth, filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church acceptably on Sunday morning last and Dea. John Federhen, 3d, addressed the evening meeting in an interesting manner.

Miss Emma Shaw has returned home after a month's visit in Hyde Park.

Miss Elizabeth McLellan is enjoying the spring vacation of Bridgewater Normal school at home.

The Quincy Stone Division of the S. of T. visited the Corner Stone Division of Weymouth Landing on Wednesday evening.

W. S. A.

The Washington School Association will give a public entertainment on Wednesday the 29th inst. The committee who have the same in charge are making every effort to have the entertainment a success. E. M. F.

Atlantic News.

Thomas Kennon, Nathan G. Glover and John C. Adams have been appointed special police officers to serve without pay.

The alarm for fire from Box 62 Wednesday evening was caused by a slight fire in the hay and lumber shed of Eliab Ramsdell, near the store formerly occupied by Redman Luce. It was easily extinguished by buckets of water.

The Sewing Circle met with Mrs. Leonard, Wednesday. Mrs. S. M. Bennett has been elected president.

Horatio N. Glover's estate has been leased for three years to Boston parties.

Horatio Nelson broke ground Thursday for the cellar for a new house on Prospect street.

The carpenters expect to have the Congregational Chapel completed by next Saturday night.

Loring D. Brown has nearly recovered from his long illness, and on Monday went to work.

C. A. Richards is having his summer residence at Squantum painted and improved.

The fair in aid of the new church will commence Tuesday, May 5th, and continue three or four days.

Frank W. Hatch has been to Providence this week.

A Live Granite Manufacturer.

We are always pleased to call attention to the push, energy and success of our business men, especially manufacturers, who, by there energy and perseverance, contribute largely to the growth of a city, in wealth and population.

Having heard of the immense buildings erected by Mr. Wm. C. Townsend in the fall of 1883, and largely increased in 1884, in this place, we made his yard a visit and were agreeably surprised at the extent of his works, which cover over an acre of ground, with all the latest tools and machinery for cutting and handling granite. We found about sixty men employed and some of the finest granite work we ever saw. The foreman in charge of the works being an excellent mechanic, accepts no work without it is first class in every respect.

We are informed as soon as spring fairly opens Mr. Townsend expects to double his present force, and will be compelled to further increase his present works.

The Old Colony Railroad, whose main track runs within fifty feet of his works, in order to freight the large amount of work produced at his yard, at their own expense laid a track into his place of business, which enables him to ship direct from his works to any part of the United States or Canada.

We are reliably informed that Mr. Townsend's yards here is only a portion of his immense business. We understand he has a large steam marble mill in New York, 516 to 536 West 20th street; an extensive studio in Carrara, Italy, employing eighty sculptors; an office in Aberdeen, Scotland, with large interests in Zanesville, Ohio; and that he does the largest granite, marble and statuary business of any firm in the United States.

We welcome Mr. Townsend among us, and though his other large interests only allows him to be with us about one-third of the time, we shall always feel pleased to hear of his continued success.

☞ Hancock street from the Square to Adams street is being made more passable than through the winter; and, when fixed, we believe it will be better than for the last few years.

West Quincy.

George W. Barry has withdrawn from the Farnum Granite Company.

Rev. F. Furber has been appointed pastor of the Methodist Church at Highlandville.

An unusually large amount of freight has been shipped from West Quincy this week.

J. Keast has been elected superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School.

Eliot Sprague, son of John Sprague, is on his way home from Africa.

St. Mary's C. T. A. Society are to present the drama "Kathleen Mavourneen" at the Temperance Hall next week.

Charles H. Fuller of this village supplied the pulpit of the M. E. Church very creditably last Sunday. His sermon was admired by many.

George Davis, an employe of Miller & Luce, was injured on Wednesday morning by a stone which slipped from a chain while being moved by a derrick. He was hit on the head, arm and chest. Dr. Welch, his physician, thinks he will be all right in a few days.

Mrs. James Kelly, who was so seriously burned while extinguishing the grass fire last week, died on Wednesday morning. She has been a great sufferer since the unfortunate affair.

Richard Banim, of East Milton, an employe at the Quincy Granite Company, while talking with his fellow workmen during the noon hour of Monday, died suddenly of apoplexy. He was thirty-five years old, and leaves a widow and five children. His funeral took place Wednesday morning, services being held at the Dorchester Catholic Church. Mr. Fuller closed his yards on that day, out of respect for the deceased.

INSTALLATION. The following officers of Beacon Light Division, Sons of Temperance, of Quincy, were installed on Monday evening by D. G. W. P. Walsh of Boston:

W. P.—Peter Kerr.
W. A.—H. L. Harden.
R. S.—Fannie E. Phillips.
A. R. S.—Luella E. Hunt.
F. S.—Ellen H. Cobb.
T.—Henry Chubbuck.
Chap.—Calvin C. Jordan.
Con.—Humphrey Moynihan.
A. C.—Carrie Hollis.
I. S.—H. D. Hayden.
O. S.—Austin Newcomb.
Organist—Herbert Hayden.

THE SPAULDINGS. The ever popular Spauldings gave one of their enjoyable musical entertainments at the Town Hall on Monday evening, to a well filled house. C. W. Johnson in his comic songs was a favorite. The recitations by Esther R. Stratton, especially "Spoopendyke's fishing excursion," were much enjoyed. The way Dudley H. Prescott "ejected the tenants" pleased all. Georgia Dean Spaulding's playing on the harp, cornet and staff bells were as usual very good. It was a very satisfactory entertainment

SPRINKLING. Our roads are quite dusty, and soon we shall be pleased to witness the water cart in our streets. We learn that Mr. Tisdale is getting his carts ready and we hope our citizens will welcome him liberally, as it is a great blessing to all; not only to those who reside on the street, but to those who have occasion to ride or walk.

☞ The Coliseum polo team has been reorganized, and on Thursday evening played with a team from Co. B. 5th Regiment, of Cambridge. After playing an hour, during which time each had scored a goal, the game was declared drawn that the players might take the train. The new team is composed entirely of out-of-town boys. It was a well contested and interesting game.

Among the Yachts.

Many yeaas our yachtsmen have put their crafts into the water by Fast Day, but this season has been so backward and cold that scarcely anything has yet been done.

James McFarland's Pet has been painted and improved and will be ready for the water in a few days.

The Elf, owned by William P. Barker; the Mosquito by E. W. Codman, of Nahant, and the celebrated Anag, belonging to Edwin W. Baxter, are being refitted at Maybury's.

During the winter George Crane and Henry Bumpus have built a fine yacht, twenty-two feet long with a nine feet beam, which they expect will win the championship of the class she enters.

A boat twenty-three feet long has been built for Joseph P. Loud at Maybury's.

The steam yacht Florence is to make her trial trip to-morrow, if pleasant. Last summer her speed was about eight miles an hour, but it is expected that the improvement which she has undergone, will increase it to ten under favorable circumstances this season. All her machinery has been nickled and her owner, Captain Kemp, feels very proud of her.

W. F. Maybury has some very fine models of cat rig, English cutter, and centre board yachts which he has made at leisure moments.

Capt. Doggett's yacht, the Billow, has been painted and put into the water.

Two fine yachts have been built during the winter at Maybury's—one twenty-three, and the other twenty-one feet, six inches.

There is more life at A. B. Lelois' wharf than elsewhere along the shore, and that gentleman is very busy getting the following boats ready for the briny deep:

The Trackless, owned by Joseph Fenno, has been newly painted and launched, and is soon to be fitted up.

Dr. Dearing's Fido has been painted and will be put into the water in a few days.

The Page brothers are to have the Ivy thoroughly overhauled.

Work on refitting the Maise has commenced. She is to have a new sail.

The Alice, owned by John Clark, has been painted.

The Elmer, formerly owned by Perez Chubbuck, but now the property of Capt. Lincoln, of Weymouth Landing, has been extensively refitted and is to have air tanks.

REGULATIONS

OF THE

Board of Health

OF THE

TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

"The Model Charter."

The report of the charter committee, which was published in full in Sunday's Herald, has again brought the question of a change from a town to a city form of government to the attention of the citizens of Quincy. The report was made at a meeting of the general committee, held at the School Committee's Room on Saturday evening last, at which Theophilus King, Jr., presided. It deals with its branch of the subject at great length, and in a thorough and convincing manner. It is doubtless a very good outline for such a charter as the city of Quincy would desire, and the question naturally arises, are we ready for it? But it is not our province to discuss that well worn subject now, only simply to say that the time is not many years away when we shall be a city. Our town meetings are fast setting aside the old conventional ones which formerly governed us, and now exist in smaller towns, and becoming year by year more city like. Quincy has a population in excess of 12,000 and is growing rapidly, and the government must keep abreast or ahead of the growth.

As the committee say, the first question is: "Are the extravagance, inefficiency and corruption which are familiar sights in our municipal governments necessary results?" It thinks not and that the fundamental trouble is the failure to make a proper separation of the legislative and executive functions of the government.

We agree with its arguments in favor of giving the mayor more extended powers than is now most generally the case in large cities, and also in the abolishment of the common council. The mayor should have absolute power of appointment and removal of those officials who superintend departments for which the people expect he shall be responsible. The common council oftentimes checks improper appointments, but it also prevents proper appointments, especially when the majority of the council differ in politics from the mayor. The committee suggests a single board of twenty or thirty members, similar to Waltham and Brookline, that they receive pay whenever they attend meetings, and that two-thirds of the body be elected by districts and the other at large. All these recommendations should be adopted. Perhaps twenty would be a sufficient number now. The pay of the members would stimulate them to attend regularly, and the choice by districts and at large would in a measure continue the two bodies in one.

The committee believe the charter should limit the indebtedness that may be incurred to one per cent. This is two per cent. less than the State law requires, and shows that the agitators are honest in their belief that the city can be run economically.

The project to give the heads of the various departments seats at the meeting of the board of aldermen, is also a good one. It does not provide that they shall have the privilege to vote, but they can take part in debate, and be ready to answer questions and give information in their departments. The same provision, the committee think, should be applied to the mayor, also; that he should be simply a member, and not preside at the meetings, but we think this would be an injustice to him, and rob him of much of his power and glory. We say, let him preside.

Under the proposed charter the people would be privileged to vote only for a mayor, city treasurer, city clerk, and members of the school committee; the terms of the first three officers to expire at the same time, while the school committee could be chosen as now. The mayor would appoint a commissioner of public works, a city solicitor, a collector of taxes, a superintendent of police, a superintendent of the fire department, a health officer, a board of license commissioners (if needed), a board of assessors, trustees of public library, overseers of poor, managers of academy, commissioners of sinking fund, etc.

The committee do not think a police department should be created without a vote of the town, and that in the present state of affairs it would be distinctly in the nature of a luxury, and an expensive one too.

Under the charter, the streets, side-walks, bridges, water, street lights, etc., would be placed in charge of a commissioner of public works. This would virtually be about the same as a superintendent of streets. Perhaps some of the voters would not like that, they having abolished such an office last year, but it is in practical operation in larger cities and why not here. Perhaps some of the agitators of a city have changed their minds in this respect.

The power that would be given to the mayor to veto particular items in an appropriation bill is one of the best features. We have lately seen the folly of not having such a provision in our National as well as city governments.

Women Plumbers and Doctors.

EDITORS PATRIOT:

Among the new books added to our Public Library is one to which, in the present state of opinion in Quincy upon the subject of sewerage, it seems proper to call attention. It was written by a woman, Mrs. Plunkett of Pittsfield, especially for the instruction of women in sanitary matters, and is entitled "Women Plumbers and Doctors." But it is perfectly suitable for the reading of any intelligent person, and I am not aware of the existence of any other book which, in so small a space, and so clear and trustworthy a manner, conveys the information which many of our townspeople would probably be glad to receive, upon the relation of drainage to the public health. It is written also in a bright and pleasant style, and illustrated with woodcuts which add much to its value.

CHARLES WESLEY SLACK.

Hon. C. W. Slack, of Boston, departed this life at twenty minutes before ten o'clock, Saturday morning, April 11th. On Friday, April 3d, he went to his office in Post-Office building, and entering with his usual cheerful, hearty greeting, enlivening all around him, performed his official duties in his methodical, business manner, but complained of tired limbs, the fatal sign "too late" of a neglected, deep-seated pneumonia; and right in his prime of life, three-score, was taken to his house to die. With his noted, indomitable will he daily arose, put on his clothes, intending to force himself to his many pressing duties, at his offices The Commonwealth and the Collector of Internal Revenue, where for fifteen years the Internal taxes have been collected promptly and accounted for to the U. S. Government to the last cent. Although not considered dangerously sick, yet the dreaded disease quickly grasped its victim, and he was unconscious hours before his death.

As he left the office on Friday, it seemed as though he realized it was to be the last farewell. Taking Mr. Holway and Mr. Downing, his near and trusted deputies, by the arm, said in his cheerful way, although then suffering intense pain, "Well, boys, we've had many a good time in this old office, haven't we?" and then, "Good bye, all. Come, Holway, help me down stairs:" and out of this office passed one of the best and most unselfish and large-hearted men ever living, and doing in his humble way good and noble deeds.

He was born in Garland Lane, Boston, Feb. 21, 1825, and was therefore in his 61st year. Attending Boston public schools, he graduated at the Elliot Grammar School in 1840, as a Franklin Medal scholar. He then served eight years in the Boston Journal office, acquiring a thoroughly practical knowledge of the printing business; always noted for his industry, intelligence and interest in matters pertaining to the craft. As editor and publisher of his noted paper, The Commonwealth, he advocated freedom of speech, liberal thought and abolition of slavery, equality and universal suffrage to man and woman. One of the moving, earnest spirits in the Mechanic Apprentices' Library Association, being twice elected President. For many years he was Vice President and President of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association, and to his indefatigable efforts is largely due the erection of their magnificent building on Huntington avenue. A lover and critic of art matters, he became a member of the Boston Art Club. In politics he had bold decided convictions, and was earnest in working for them, as our townspeople can well testify.

In 1852 he was Assistant Clerk of the Massachusetts Senate. In 1855, Speaker pro tem of the Massachusetts Legislature. In 1861, Assistant Cashier of the Boston Custom House. From 1861 to 1865, he was on the Sanitary Committee; being one of the leading men in caring for the returned soldiers. In 1866, he was a member of the Board of Aldermen; and the same year declined a nomination for the State Senate. In 1867, chairman of Board of Aldermen.

In May, 1869, President Grant appointed Mr. Slack Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third Massachusetts District, which position he held until his death. His administration of the duties of this office, for method, promptness and ability, was most highly commended in 1881 report to the Treasury Department, by Revenue Agent Plummer, who is a practical accountant.

He enjoyed the close friendship of Vice President Wilson, Senator Sumner, Ex-Governors Andrews, Boutwell and Claflin; Hon. F. W. Bird and a score of leading Democrats, whose political opinions were opposed to his own.

His mind, ever active, was abreast of the times, and could never stand still. Early embracing the teachings of Theodore Parker, he was a broad and liberal Unitarian. One of his eloquent speeches was an address delivered at the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument in Mount Hope Cemetery, where his body now lies. One incident it might be well to speak of here: Some few years since, during a discussion in relation to the Cemetery, it was charged that Mr. Slack's lot in this Cemetery was being taken care of with the City money, and quite an amount had been spent upon it. A short time after a friend driving through the grounds, came to his lot and remarked: "Why, Mr. Slack, your lot is not kept up to your usual standard of excellence." "No," he said, with evident pain, "should I fix it up, it would be said, 'O, yes, the city paid for it,' so I shall leave it as it is." This shows his sensitive nature. He was always doing good deeds for others, and the idle slurs of thoughtless tongues pained him to the heart. A nobler man, or one more self-sacrificing, does not live.

The funeral of Mr. Slack in Parker Memorial Hall, Tuesday at 2 P. M., was attended by a crowded gathering of sorrowing relatives and friends. It was conducted by the Rev. James K. Applebee who opened the services with, "O, Death, where is thy victory! O, Grave, where is thy sting!" followed by the Ruggles Street Male Quartette beautifully and sadly chanting "Nearer my God to thee," bringing tears to all within its hearing.

Then followed Gen. John L. Swift, in a short address, full of pathos and tender feeling for his near and dear friends. "Not here can I speak," he said, "not here, before these weeping eyes, can any word of mine comfort you. His noble life is written and molded into every good cause of the present generation." Touchingly he spoke of old associations, until all bowed in sorrow, saying: "God's will, not ours, be done."

Judge George L. Ruffin spoke calmly of the colored man's true friend, ever ready with pen and means to fight their battle to a successful end.

Rev. Mr. Applebee then closed with an eloquent address covering the whole of his dear friend's life, whom he mourned, and also reading some touching words from Mr. Slack's employes and Revenue Officers as follows:

"On the part of the employes of the Revenue Office, to whom he ever acted merely in the relationship of an employer but in the higher relationship of a brother, we wish to express during the last sad offices paid to his memory the high estimation in which we held him. Each one of us feels impelled to contribute some words toward the expression of our appreciation which could not possibly be excelled. We would speak of the great heart he had, which not only prompted him to do all in his power materially to benefit all those who made known their difficulties to him, but also of the tireless affection with which he interested himself in the welfare of each one, rejoicing in each one's joy, sorrowing in each one's sorrow, sustaining each one as a firm friend under whatever circumstances might arise. We who have known him daily and hourly for many years past can testify, we think, as none others can, how little of his life was lived for himself alone. Day after day have serious calls been made upon his advice, his sympathy, his purse, business men have confided to him their weightiest affairs; all who have come to him have received his encouraging words and his ungrudging help. The deserving poor seeking his help never went empty away; the old, middle-aged and the young coming to him for aid found him willing to do the right thing for them, and always ready to do the right thing in the right way. In a conversation of recent date he said to us: 'My relations to you have not been those of an employer, but those of a brother.' Indeed and indeed it was so. Now that his official chair stands vacant and the sense of loneliness we feel is beyond all description, we mourn for him as for a kind and loving brother, and as such his memory will ever remain in our hearts. Truly it may be said that he lived for us, and died for us."

Mr. Applebee concluded as follows:

To live so as to deservedly win such a testimonial as that is truly not to have lived in vain; and we may be certain of this, that the world is somewhat the better and somewhat the brighter for the fact that Charles Wesley Slack has been in it. But, after all, devoted as was his patriotism, pure and upright as he was in his public service, after all the depth and steadfastness and beauty of the man's character were seen most within the sacred privacy of his home. He was a loyal and a tender husband; he was a wise and a loving and an upright father. Virtues like the odor of that ointment with which Mary anointed the feet of Jesus will long linger about his name to bless it and to hallow it. His mortal life has passed away from us as a veil that is torn, but the excellences which distinguished his life on earth will never pass away; they will live again in other forms, and they will dignify and soften lives which are yet to be. He belongs now to those who are immortal.

Not at this time, nor indeed at any other time, would we for one moment depreciate aught "the life beyond life," but we cannot forget that the building in which we are now assembled is peculiarly consecrated to thoughts of immortality and thoughts of God. We cannot look upon death as a curse; we cannot look upon death as a punishment; we can only look upon it as a fulfilment. The law of death is beneficent as the law which gives the day its dawn, or the flower its bloom, or the fruit its ripeness. We know that in any case the dead are safe; they cannot go where the divine law will not protect them; they cannot go where the divine love will not encircle them, to help them and to bless them. By means of death, room is made on this limited earth of ours for the newer generation of men to enter into the glories and the delights and the grandeur of this mortal life; by means of death enfranchised spirits enter into wider sphere of usefulness and taste grander sources of delight. Those who knew him whose body lies before us mourn his loss, but with that mourning gratitude and hope may fitly mingle—gratitude to that Infinite Beneficence who gladdens earth with the presence of such a life. And hope mingles with our sorrow; the upright citizen, the loyal husband, the wise and tender is not here; it is only the empty shell that contained the man that will be carried to the grave. He has gone to the great and gracious and ever-loving God. We have to take up the burden which he laid down; we have to enter upon those grand movements for which he labored, for which he stood. "Comfort ye, O comfort ye my people," saith your God; "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him."

The quartette having sung "Gathering Home," Mr. Applebee offered prayer and pronounced the benediction, after which all were given and availed themselves of an opportunity to look upon the well-known and deeply loved face. The subsequent interment was in the family lot at Mount Hope, Hon. M. P. Kennard, Hon. Jonathan A. Lane, Joseph F. Paul, L. Shaw Standish, H. L. Burrill, W. W. Clapp, John L. Whiting and Gen. Samuel C. Lawrence bearing the pall.

The flowers donated by the different associations were exceedingly choice and appropriate: from the Revenue Officers an arm-chair, the back of which was covered with pink and white azaleas, the seat with exquisite calla lilies and toned with various colored leaves and blossoms; from the Distillers Association a reclining anchor of large size of camellias, azaleas, carnations, roses and ivy leaves with three whole links, (denoting three-score years,) and a fourth link broken; from the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic's Association their seal; upon the scale beam the words "Be just and fear not, how true indeed in his life;" also broken columns, crowns, wreaths of roses, Easter lilies; back of them all grouped palms and growing palms, an open book from his society,—all fitly representing the love and esteem in which they held their friend. Thus passed away a man, whose life and place it will be hard to fill.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 13, 1885.

There has been no political action of consequence during the past week. The Administration is at present making up its mind concerning some rather important appointments, among which are several that will change very decidedly the personal of the Treasury Department Bureaus.

In view of the constant pressure upon his time the President has determined to discontinue his daily receptions to the public in the East Room of the White House. He has been in the habit of receiving business callers from 10 until 12.30 o'clock, and then enduring a hand shaking ordeal. He had hoped that the crowds of callers would decrease as the fourth of March receded, but finding himself mistaken in this idea, he feels compelled to put an end to this encroachment upon his time.

On Saturday Postmaster Pearson called at the White House to express his gratitude for the confidence which the President had shown in re-appointing him. He was followed by a delegation of colored people, who called to invite Mr. Cleveland to review their procession on Thursday, Emancipation day, and to be present at other exercises for which preparations have been in progress for several weeks. They presented an address welcoming the President to the Capitol, in the name of 70,000 colored people, and asking equal rights throughout the United States. Mr. Cleveland listened attentively to their address, promised to review their procession, and, if possible, attend their entertainment in the evening, when Frederic Douglas will be the orator, and ex-Senator Bruce (colored) the presiding officer. ADAMS.

Neponset.

The thirtieth annual meeting of the Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance Company was held at their office in Neponset on Tuesday last, and the following named gentlemen were elected as Directors for the year 1885:

Edmund J. Baker, Hiram W. Blanchard, George A. Fisher, Henry O. Hildreth, Richard C. Humphreys, Nathan Holbrook, Oliver Hall, Seth Mann, 2d, William Pope, John W. Porter, Laban Pratt, Elias A. Perkins, Edward H. E. Ruggles, Wm. Henry Swan, M. P. Sumner, James Torrey, Thos. F. Temple, Jas. H. Upham, Wm. Henry West.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Mr. E. J. Baker was elected President and Treasurer, Thomas F. Temple as Secretary, and W. D. C. Curtis as Assistant Secretary. This Company, according to its financial report, is in a flourishing condition and takes its place as one of the best Mutuals in the state. It was voted that on and after May 1st, 1885, the dividend on all expiring policies should be increased to 60 per cent. on five-year, 40 per cent. on three-year, and 20 per cent. on one year policies.

The Unitarian Society has engaged Rev. H. H. Wonde as pastor for one year. The Trinity Church (Congregationalist) has secured the services of Rev. J. L. Harris for one year. Rev. Mr. Perkins of the Appleton M. E. Church has been appointed for another year's service with this Society. The Baptist are without any settled pastor at present.

Arrangements are made, we are informed, to have the Sunday Herald delivered in this village about two hours earlier than formerly. This will have a tendency, we think, to largely increase the attendance of the forenoon church services.

Work on the new school house is now rapidly progressing. This edifice is to be over eighty feet in height, and will probably be ready for occupancy soon after the summer vacation.

Navigation has commenced again in good earnest on the Neponset river, and several schooners with coal have passed up to the Lower Mills. S.

Children's Carnival.

The second fancy dress carnival, of the little folks of Quincy, took place at the Coliseum last Saturday afternoon. There was a very good-sized audience present, but the skaters in costume were few indeed, and the judges experienced difficulty in finding enough to whom to give the prizes, especially was it so among the young gentlemen. The result was:

Miss Eleanor Gleason received the solid silver gold lined cup for the handsomest dress, and Miss Carrie E. Willis the second prize, a morocco photograph album; Miss Maude Eaton, the alligator hand bag, for the most comical suit and Miss Alice Gleason, the second prize, a silver and plush autograph album; Miss Polly Wilkinson, the plate glass hand mirror, for the most original dress, and Miss Hattie Pierce, the second prize, a scrap book.

Among the young gentlemen, Jesse Litchfield took the silver cup for the handsomest suit, and Edgar Tirrell, the second prize, a morocco photograph album; Fred Nightingale, the pearl handled knife, for the most comical suit; Gardner Willey, the broom case, for original suit, and Guy Willey, the second prize, a scrap book. In place of awarding the autograph album for a second prize for a comical suit, it was given to Miss Sadie West, as a special prize. George Kendrick also received a special prize of half a dozen tickets.

Births.

In Quincy, April 14th, a son to Mr. and Mrs. James P. Griffin.

In Atlantic, April 2d, a son to Mr. and Mrs. John A. Duggan.

Deaths.

Milton Gleanings.

A new wheelwright shop is being built for Richard M'Kay at the corner of Pierce street and Granite avenue.

The "Blue Bell" property is in the market, and we learn that several parties have lately been to see it with a prospect of purchasing.

Edward Lane has been sentenced by the Grand Jury to the House of Correction for one year, for the larceny of thirty dollars from Edward A. Adams of East Milton.

The death of Richard Banim at West Quincy, Monday, was very sudden. His funeral took place on Wednesday morning and a large number of the members of the Hydrant Engine Company, of which the deceased was a member, escorted the body to its final resting place at West Quincy.

William Strong & Sons have leased the wheelwright and blacksmith shop at the corner of Mechanic street and Granite avenue, and will continue the business.

PENSION OFFICE. Very few persons have any idea of the magnitude or extent of the Pension Office business of the United States. Upwards of 600,000 claims have already been filed and it is estimated that nearly 300,000 more remain to be filed. The number of employes from commissioner to watchman is 1555, and their salaries range from $5000 to $400 per annum, yet this army of employes is unable to perform the labors imposed upon it. Hundreds of claims cannot be completed because the applicants fail to furnish the evidence called for, and these are pigeon-holed until some inquiry is made concerning them, or the proper evidence is furnished.

A CHAIN PUZZLE. The following puzzle originated in a blacksmith shop. A man took five pieces of chain to a blacksmith for the purpose of having them united in one continuous length. The parts were disconnected as in the following illustration:

When the man called for his chain and asked for his bill he was told that the charge was 80 cents, four welds being made at 20 cents each. The man demurred and said that only three welds were necessary to join the five pieces of chain. The question is how could it be done with three welds.

VETERANS. There are eighteen thousand veterans going through the world on wooden legs who lost their limbs in the great war of the Rebellion.

HE FELL IN THE STREETS

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and disease. Both sexes, and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you. Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered in the medicine, the symptoms gradually abated, and I have had no trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others. If you desire to do so has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1885.

The early Bird catches the Worm.

Poor foolish worm! if he had lain
Snug in his earthly bed,
That early fowl had never made
A breakfast of his head.

At noon, no doubt, the bird had sought
Some distant forest bough;
And if the worm had slept till then,
He might have lived till now.

Take warning, early risers, all,
And heed the lesson taught;
The worm that lies in bed is safe—
The early worm is caught.

Farm and Garden.

An Arbor Day Proclamation.

James Draper, Master of Massachusetts State Grange, issues the following proclamation:

To the Patrons of Massachusetts:

The Order of Patrons and Husbandry, having for its aim and purpose the common interest and welfare of the state, through the development of its agricultural resources and the higher improvement of those engaged in that calling, are reminded that the constant disappearance of our trees and forests is becoming a matter of serious importance. The presence of trees and forests, it is conceded, exerts a direct and controlling influence on the moisture of the air increasing the amount of rain fall, as well as serving to lessen the extremes of temperature and modify the severity of climate and season. For shade, shelter and ornament alike, the value of trees cannot be over estimated. The attractiveness in the decorations of our home grounds, the improvement of our road-sides, and the embellishment of school house and public grounds, commend them not only to the traveller but to all who "study their graceful forms and beautiful colors."

Therefore,—That this object may be better maintained and greatly increased throughout this commonwealth, by advice and with the consent of the executive committee, I do hereby name Thursday, the 30th day of April, 1885, to be observed as Arbor Day.

And I would earnestly recommend that our members, and all others whom they can interest in this work, and who are willing to co-operate with us, devote that day to the improvement of home grounds, by planting trees, shrubs and vines, each for fruit, shelter and ornament, and that the road-sides on which our lands border be improved in like manner, with trees adapted to that purpose. Let especial attention be given to the embellishment of school-house and public grounds, with suitable trees and shrubs, making them also to appear more beautiful and attractive.

MATERIAL FOR EGG PRODUCTION. At this season fowls may be induced to lay many more eggs by providing food containing the materials from which eggs are formed. Feeding with wheat screenings and giving milk to drink will furnish the best diet. Once a day give soft feed, which may consist of wheat bran or middlings mixed with milk and fed warm. This should be given early in the morning. Do not omit to furnish lime for the shells, else if crowded too rapidly eggs will be eaten and the fowls soon made worse than worthless.

☞ Now is the time to put the printer's ink on the trees to stop the canker-worm moths, as they are beginning to crawl.

☞ George Hurst, proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner, owns 48,000 acres of land in California.

Anecdotes.

"What do you want to set such a tough chicken before me for?" indignantly exclaimed a fair damsel in a restaurant the other day.

"'Age before beauty,' always, you know, ma'am," replied the polite attendant.

"Ah, Bings, where are you going for the winter?"

"Oh, I shall take a run to Italy and do Mt. Vesuvius."

"I see—going to a foreign climb."

"Are you sure you are converted?" asked Mr. Spurgeon of a devout housemaid.

"Deed, sir, I think I am, for I sweeps under the beds, and in dark corners."

"You didn't pay very close attention this morning, Tommy, when the minister was making the long prayer."

"Oh, yes, I did, mamma. I guess you didn't notice me. I was the very first one to say amen."

"Was Rome founded by Romeo?" inquired a pupil of the teacher.

"No, my son," replied the wise man; "it was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."

Conundrums.

Why do men about to fight a duel generally choose a field for the place of action? For the purpose of allowing the ball to graze.

What animal has the most brains? The hog, because he has a hog's head full of them.

Why don't horses wear hats? Because it would give them a hos-tile appearance.

What is the worth of a letter which contains ten jokes? A ten-pun' note.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.

Is Alcohol a Food.

"The alcohol thus eliminated is entirely unchanged. Nature apparently makes no effort to appropriate it. It courses everywhere through the circulation, and into the great organs, with all its properties unmodified.

Alcohol, then, is not like bread or beef, taken hold of, broken up by the mysterious process of digestion, and used by the body. "It cannot therefore be regarded as an aliment or food. —Flint. "Beer, wine, and spirits," says Leibig, "contain no element capable of entering into the composition of the blood or the muscular fiber." "That alcohol is incapable of forming any part of the body," remarks Cameron, "is admitted by all physiologists. It cannot be converted into brain, nerve, muscle or blood."

EFFECT UPON THE DIGESTION.

Experiments tend to prove that alcohol coagulates and percipitates the pepsin from the gastric juice, and so puts a stop to its great work in the process of digestion. The greed of alcohol for water causes it to imbibe moisture from the tissues and juices, and to inflame the delicate mucous membrane. It shows the power of nature to adapt herself to circumstances; that the soft velvety lining of the throat and stomach should come at length to endure the presence of a fiery liquid, which undiluted, would soon shrivel and destroy it. In self-defence, the juices pour in to weaken the alcohol, and it is soon hurried into the circulation. Before this can be done, "it must absorb about three times its bulk of water," hence, very strong liquor may be retained in the stomach long enough to interfere seriously with the digestion, and to injure the lining coat. Habitual use of alcohol permanently dilates the blood-vessels; thickens and hardens the membranes; in some cases ulcerates the surface; and, finally, "so weakens the assimilation that the proper supply of food cannot be appropriated.—Flint.

Miscellany.

EMERGENCY CARS. The Old Colony railroad management has begun to equip its freight and construction trains and long distance passenger trains with "emergency boxes." These boxes are light, japanned tin cases, appropriately and plainly lettered, and placed in positions where they will be readily available in case of accidents which may involve injury to either passengers or employes. These boxes contain surgeons' adhesive plaster, isinglass plaster, adhesive bandage, roller bandages, rubber bandages, styptic cotton, ligatures and needles, scissors, safety pins, etc. When the lid of the case is thrown upward, a small pamphlet is the first thing revealed; and this contains full directions for proceeding to stop bleeding, how to apply the bandages and implements found within the case, and what should be done in case of crushed feet, burning or scalding, broken bones, wounds by cutting, bruises, etc. These boxes will be kept at hand on all trains, and upon every part of the Old Colony system where their use may be required.

☞ The President has made a change in the days of holding cabinet meetings, so that hereafter they will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week, instead of on Tuesdays and Fridays as heretofore.

PRECINCT VOTING. The House has engrossed the Senate resolve concerning an amendment to the constitution to provide for precinct voting in towns. If it becomes a law polling places will be opened in several districts in the town.

☞ An unclaimed postal card is not returned to the writer, even though his address is given upon it, but is sent to the Dead-Letter office.

This and That.

☞ A noble and attractive everyday bearing comes of goodness, of sincerity, of refinement; and these are bred in years, not in moments.—F. D. Huntington.

☞ A rural gentleman, standing over a register in a city store, attracted some attention to himself by observing to his wife: "Mariar, I guess I'm goin' to have a fever; I feel such hot air a-runnin' up my legs."

☞ "A good wife is Heaven's greatest blessing," remarked Mr. Wilson to Mr. Badger. "Yes," replied Badger, "but you know I am not orthodox in my belief."

☞ "Woman is a delusion," said a crusty old bachelor in our sanctum, recently. Snodgrass retorted: "Well, man is always hugging some delusion or another."

☞ In Litchfield, Conn., is an old tomb-stone with the inscription: "Sacred to the memory of inestimable worth of unrivaled excellence and virtue, Mrs. Rachel, wife of Jerome B. Woodruff and daughter of Norman Barber, whose ethereal parts became a seraph, May 24, 1835, in the 22d year of her age.

☞ At the close of the sermon, the minister became impressive. Raising his voice he said: "Judgment!" and a small boy near the vestibule shouted: "Out on first!"

☞ The importance of the comma was well shown by a notice recently read in a church in Michigan, which ran as follows: "Dr. —— will deliver a lecture on Saturday evening of this week. Subject: The Circulation of Blood in the Baptist Church."

A CHEAP FERTILIZER IS POOR ECONOMY. Last Spring I ploughed a piece of land which did not yield half a ton of hay per acre. On the fifteenth of May I planted it to potatoes, using no manure but Bradley's, and another well-known Phosphate, side by side, the same quantity of each, and the yield was in favor of Bradley's. Where I used the two fertilizers on corn, there was a marked difference in favor of Bradley's, and I shall use it exclusively hereafter. I bought the other brand because it was a little cheaper. Bradley's proved cheapest in the end.

Ammonia in Baking Powder More Injurious to Health than Alum.

DR. WITTHAUS,

The Celebrated Chemist and Professor, on the Subject.

I have made careful qualitative analyses of CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER and of the Royal Baking Powder, and have also determined the amount of available gas yielded by each. I find that the substances which enter into the composition of the two powders are the same, with one important exception: the Royal contains Carbonate of Ammonia, whereas CLEVELAND'S BAKING POWDER does not.

In my opinion a baking powder containing Ammonia is much more liable to produce disturbances of digestion than one containing Alum, concerning whose deleterious qualities so much has been said; particularly as it has been shown by direct experiment that Carbonate of Ammonia, if present in a baking powder, is not expelled during baking, but remains in the bread.

I consider CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER as greatly preferable to the Royal Baking Powder, because:

1. It is free from the Ammonia which contaminates the Royal;
2. It yields during baking a greater proportion of the only gas, carbonic acid, which should be produced by a baking powder.

Board of Health.

We have waited a few weeks to see what effect, or rather, to see how the Regulations of the Board of Health would be received by the people. Quincy had previously dealt loosely with her citizens regarding nuisances to public health, and precaution against them. Consequently it was not surprising that the stringent regulations recently adopted should meet with disfavor from some quarters. It has been claimed that the death rate is higher in this town than in the city of Boston. If this be the case, certainly something should be done as a preventive, and we believe the regulations adopted if well enforced will be a decided step in that direction. A public sewer will be the next step necessary, and it has already been brought to the attention of the citizens in town meeting assembled. If the law was a little more plain regarding the establishment of sewers we believe the initial movement would be taken sooner. It seems the intention of the Board of Health to endeavor to enforce their regulation, for we know of their having visited places that were not considered conducive to public health. One or two, we have heard, say that they would not comply with the regulations, but we fear they are those who have their own interests simply at heart and not the public benefit.

Some of the regulations will require attention in the next few weeks. Number two says "all privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth of May." After that time until the first of October it will be unlawful to empty them except between the hours of ten in the evening and six in the morning. Regulation seven says "all putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage, and every kind of filth must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June." We wonder if Regulation six will apply to our town house with its well and vaults underneath, or if Regulation ten will apply to the town pump, the water of which members of the present board have said was one of the impurest in town. Regulations nine and eleven, which forbidding piggeries and offensive trades and manufactures without consent, meet with the approval of nearly all. All the other regulations are necessary and should be carried out as far as possible.

Street Sprinkling.

The past week has given us the first touch of warm weather, and spring overcoats even were at a discount on some days. Nature itself is awakening to its just responsibilities; the grass is growing green, the pussy willows have put in an appearance, the lilac is putting forth its buds and leaves, and the early crocus and spring flowers their fragrance and beauty. Those of our residents who are fortunate in having a supply of water from the water works have brought forth their hose and sprinkled their grounds and the streets in front often times, which is always appreciated by the passers by whether walking or riding. The regular street sprinkling cart has not yet commenced its rounds but its need is felt, and in this connection we would speak of a rumor which has reached us this week, that a special town meeting was to be called to see if the town would make an appropriation for watering Hancock and Washington streets for their entire length. If any such movement is to be made, the sooner the better, and it seems as though it should receive favorable consideration. All know how dusty and disagreeable the Neponset turnpike and the Point road are during the summer. The question gains ground in the belief that it is as economical to water the streets as to repair with gravel which only dries up and blows about, and certainly it is much more pleasant and cooler when sprinkled. If the matter should be brought before the town, let the voters look at it in that light, and we shall have an improvement and blessing at a small outlay.

Musical and Dramatic.

The first Sheriff's sale of property under our new Deputy, Geo. H. Field, Esq., occurred at Quincy, on Thursday of this week. James E. Tirrell, Esq., at the request of the Globe Newspaper Company furnished the music, consisting of an oratorio entitled "Caveat Emptor." Sheriff Field wielded the baton and our popular auctioneer, J. W. Lombard, Esq., did the singing.

Those present were favored with an excellent entertainment, besides making some fine bargains. Brother Langley bought several pounds of rare confectionery for the use of the lock-up at a very low price; but goods as a rule under Mr. Lombard's executive talents brought fabulous prices, and all present pronounced Sheriff Field's first appearance a grand success.

Too much praise cannot be given for the modulation of Mr. Lombard's artistic voice when a dollar ten was bid. This is a new feature, the sole property of Mr. L. himself, and in an interview with our reporter, Lawyer Tirrell said, with marked emphasis, that to this new feature the whole affair had been made a success.

The day for the next concert has not been fixed but the public will receive due notice.

☞ While the DeComa Brothers, who were recently at the Quincy Coliseum, were giving an aerial bicycle feat at Rockland, Me., on Wednesday they met with a serious accident by the pulling out of a bolt which held one end of the elevated wire. The one in the saddle was unhurt but of the other two, one had his head terribly cut and the other was hurt internally.—Bedham Transcript.

QUINCY'S INDUSTRY.

The Condition and Prospects of the Granite Business.

McDonnell Bros. have a fair amount of work on hand, but are not rushed.

McFarlane & Smith are doing the usual amount of work for this time of year.

Joseph H. Vogel has repainted his office. His summer work has not commenced yet.

Frederick & Field are not working with full force, but expect to be busy in about a month.

McDonnell & McLennon have hired the power at McFarlane & Smith's and are to polish granite.

McDonnell & Cook are not as busy as through the winter, but expect business to brisk up next month.

McGrath Bros. consider business dull. They have a large stock of finished work manufactured for the trade at their yards.

Field & Wild report business very good, and talk of putting on an additional gang. They have three months' orders on hand.

Mitchell Granite Works have been crippled this week by accidents to derrick and engine. They have been doing a very good business.

F. Hardwick & Son are now employing thirty-six men. Among other work, they have a soldiers' monument for Springfield. They report plenty of work but at ruinous prices.

Churchill & Hitchcock report business dull. They continue to enlarge their quarry which is one of the very best in town. The illustration on the heading of the PATRIOT is from their quarries.

Barker & Sons are doing but little, and have not the usual gang at work. Work has been suspended the last two weeks at the quarry and engine house which have been worked the past years, and the old quarry which was reopened last year is to be worked more extensively.

C. H. Hardwick & Co. have recently started a large sheet of handsome dark blue granite at their quarry, and they have a large amount of orders for light and dark stock. It is the intention to soon increase the quarrymen to thirty-five. Among the hammered work is the unique design of a tree stump, which is going to Chicago. They are also at work on the base for the Garfield monument in Washington.

McKenzie & Paterson have built a large blacksmith shop, 27x51, with chances for eight fires at their works on Canal street. They are also making preparations to extend both their sheds about one hundred feet to the rear, making the tramway two hundred and forty feet long. The firm have besides the Vanderbilt tomb a large amount of work on hand. A large stone weighing fifteen tons arrived at the Quincy Adams station the first of the week, and is to be manufactured into a large statue of Hope, eleven feet high, which F. Muer is now modeling.

Minor Improvements.

The house of James T. Penniman near the Quincy depot has recently had four-light windows put in place of the twelve-light and received other improvements, and is now being painted.

Elbridge Clapp's house on Granite street is fresh from the painter's brush.

George F. Wilson's house on Hancock street has been re-shingled.

The barn which was moved from High School avenue to Canal street has made a neat appearing double house.

The house of the late Thomas Dolan on Brackett street is having a large L added.

George W. Morton has re-shingled his barn and parts of his house.

The houses of Warren W. Adams and R. F. Claflin have been improved this week by the painter's brush.

John Page, Jr., has reshingled his house.

The residence of Rev. D. M. Wilson is no longer a white house, having been painted this week after a modern style.

OBITUARY. Capt. Cephas C. Bumpus, a resident for many years of Quincy, passed away on Friday evening of last week; just 24 years, to an hour, from the time he left Boston with his Company for the war. He had been quite feeble for some time, and for a few months past confined to his house.

He was born in Plympton, July 9, 1811. He represented that town in the Legislature, and was also a member of the last state constitutional convention. At the outbreak of the civil war he was living in South Braintree, and he headed the Braintree company as captain when it reported for duty at Faneuil Hall, Boston. He was subsequently captain of the 32d Massachusetts regiment. He was an ardent Grand Army man, being a member of Post 113 of Boston.

Since the war he has held a situation at the Boston Custom House, with much honor and credit, being always attentive to duties. He leaves a widow, four daughters and a son. His funeral took place on Monday last, from his late residence on Washington street, and was quite largely attended. Eight or ten old veterans who were with him in the war were present; also a delegation from the Custom House, who brought a beautiful floral tribute; and also a delegation from Post 113, of Boston, bringing choice flowers.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES. The Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture (at whose instance legislative action has been taken) desires to call the attention of farmers and others of this State to the recent act of the Legislature, "to aid in the suppression of Contagious Diseases among Domestic Animals," and to inform them that by said act any one having knowledge that disease exists, and who withholds such information from the proper city or town officers, thereby becomes liable to very severe punishment.

In view of the serious prevalence of hog cholera it is proper the public should realize that the penalties for the concealment of this and all other animal diseases are very severe.

Copies of the legislative bill can be obtained on application to F. H. Appleton, librarian, 23 Court street, Boston.

HICKS vs. ORDWAY. The third race of two miles between A. W. Hicks and George A. Ordway, both of Quincy, took place place at the Coliseum Wednesday evening. The two previous races had each resulted in easy victories for little Hicks, but the order was reversed on this occasion. Ordway steadily gained on his rival from the first, skating at a very good speed, and won the race by two laps. There was a large attendance present, but little opportunity was offered for much enthusiasm. A five-mile race is now talked of between the two parties to take place either in Quincy or at Weymouth.

☞ Mrs. George Blanchard, 82 years of age, who lives with her daughter in Malden, but formerly resided in Quincy, and in the capacity of nurse was well known, has been visiting among old friends in this town the present week. Although having reached an advanced age she is in good health and has but few infirmities of age. Since entering her 81st year she has knit seven large and handsome quilts, besides other knitting work. We defy our contemporaries to find a parallel case.

HEALTH. Deacon Abner P. Nash, of North Weymouth, now 82 years of age, says he has not had a pain or an ache for forty years, eats his regular meals with good appetite and sleeps soundly every night.

Ten shares of Dedham Water Co. stock were sold by the Real Estate Agency last week for $97 per share, including interest to April 1st. It pays a dividend of five per cent. per annum.—Bedham Transcript.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 20, 1885.

This week has been a busy one for President Cleveland. Since his occupancy of the White House, each day has been filled with demands upon his time and patience, but the last few days have been marked by an unusual variety of duties, official, social and otherwise, that fall to the lot of the President of the United States. He has received about one hundred and fifty business callers each day; he has performed his part at the regular cabinet meetings; he has made thirty appointments to office; he reviewed the parade of the colored people on emancipation day, and has given attention to the various delegations that have thronged to the White House. Friday afternoon was one of the most animated and eventful occasions that has been witnessed at the old mansion during the new Administration. Delegation after delegation poured into the East Room, and many striking incidents occurred. The colored bishops and clergymen of the A. M. E. conference, the representatives of the Knights of Pythias, a large Virginia delegation, and the ballet girls and other female members of an operatic troupe, shared Mr. Cleveland's attention and hospitality within the space of one short afternoon.

When the President came down to the East Room to meet the colored preachers, he found a group of twenty-five young ladies from a Virginia Academy and about seventy-five other people waiting to shake hands with him. Before he could begin his work of handshaking he was asked to listen to an address by a colored bishop, which by far excelled the average addresses the Presidents are compelled to listen to. Then, before shaking hands with the ministers, Mr. Cleveland stepped quietly over and shook the hands of the ladies. After daily practice of an hour for six weeks, Mr. Cleveland has this part of his duties down to a science. He does all the shaking himself, and thus prevents over enthusiastic people from wringing his arm out of joint.

In replying to the clergymen's address, the President dwelt upon the importance of the ministerial position. His admonition to the colored politicians, who visited him on the day previous, was that they be not blindly led or cunningly deceived.

In the procession of freedmen celebrating the anniversary of emancipation in the District, there were many ludicrous scenes and incidents. A telegraph wire hanging low caused a great deal of trouble by sweeping the decoration off the top of chariots filled with girls in white, queens of beauty, goddesses, etc. The President stood in the centre of the White House portico while the procession passed, and Secretaries Lamar, Endicott, and Postmaster General Vilas stood behind him. Whenever the national colors came past Mr. Cleveland raised his hat, but the salutes of organizations in line were recognized only by a nod. He smiled broadly when several old women in an omnibus called out to him, and the glances of the queen of beauty seated on a high throne, elicited a slight nod and another smile from the Executive. At the oratorical exercises, with which the festivities closed, Frederick Douglas was profuse in compliments to the Democratic party, though he said he has not joined that party yet. Republican he was, had been, and expected to be. In regard to the President, he remarked that no better words had been heard from the east portico of the Capitol since the inaugural addresses of Lincoln and Grant than fell from the lips of Mr. Cleveland on the fourth of last March. The speaker had done all in his power to elect Mr. Blaine, but he was now prepared to trust Mr. Cleveland.

The President and his Cabinet expect to spend the summer in Washington at work. They have given no thought to vacations for recreation. Mr. Cleveland says he has so much to do before Congress reconvenes that he cannot afford to lose a moment's time.

Chemical Engine No. 1.

A strong movement is on foot against the removal of Chemical Engine No. 1, to Hough's Neck or any other locality. The reason of the opposition is very plain.—Wollaston has valuable manufacturing property; a large hotel in close connection with the stores, post office and depot; there will also be twenty more dwelling houses built the coming season; and again there are a great many buildings that cannot be reached by hose attached to a hydrant. The Chemical weighs when charged, including the tender, over a ton. It takes a company of twenty men to haul it. The Neck folks would find it rather a cumbersome machine to haul around, especially during the winter when men are scarce. It is not doubted for an instant but what the Neck needs protection against fire, but would it not be much better for the town to station a light, single tank machine there, that could be handled by a smaller company than one weighing over a ton.

CHEMICAL.

☞ The attention of all needing Paints, Painters' Supplies, or Artists' Materials is called to the advertisement of Wadsworth, Howland & Co. in another column. They claim to carry the largest stock of paints in Boston at the lowest prices, and it would be well for intending purchasers to give them a call.

REGULATIONS
OF THE
Board of Health
OF THE
TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 21.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. F. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY

Cures a Terrible Case of Gravel When Other Help Failed.

What is Gravel? what causes it, and who are most liable to it? It is frequently attended with acute pain, and unless relief can be found, produces inflammation and death. Both sexes and all ages are liable to it, although men who have reached or passed middle age are its most common victims. Nothing is more urgently needed than a reliable medicine for Gravel, as the disease seems on the increase, and we are glad to say that such a specific is now before the public in the form of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y. We put in evidence the following letter, selected from many similar communications:

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy.

DEAR SIR:—You have a right to know, and I desire the public to know my experience with Gravel and my remarkable recovery through the use of your "FAVORITE REMEDY." I am a carpenter living in this place, and there are plenty of witnesses to the truth of what I say. My first comparatively slight attack of Gravel was in the year 1878. It passed away, and I had little more trouble until last July, 1883. One day when at work in my shop I was suddenly seized with a keen and terrible pain in my left side. I consulted two physicians at once. One said: "I can do nothing for you, Your case is incurable!" I was frightened and went to the second, who said little, but gave me a prescription. It did no good.

Then began a series of experiences the agony and horror of which words cannot depict. Think of it! I was sometimes taken in the street, and would fall, writhing with agony, upon the sidewalk. It was death in life. Thank Heaven, I then heard of "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY," through Mr. P. P. Cooley. I had not used half a bottle when I passed three stones in succession, one of which was nearly one-half an inch long. I persevered with the medicine, the symptoms gradually abated, and I have had no trouble since. I am well, thanks to you and "FAVORITE REMEDY." Yours most gratefully, JAMES D. KENNEDY.

What "FAVORITE REMEDY" did in this case it has done in many others. If you desire to do so has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ### SILENCE.

In silence mighty things are wrought;
Silently builded thought on thought,
Truth's temple greets the sky,
And like a citadel with towers,
The soul with her subservient powers,
Is strengthened silently.

Soundless as chariots on the snow,
The saplings of the forest grow
To trees of mighty growth;
Each mighty star in silence burns
And every day in silence turns
The axle of the earth.

The silent frost with mighty hand
Fetters the rivers of the land
With universal chain;
And smitten by the silent sun,
The chain is loosed, the rivers run,
The lands are free again.

Farm and Garden.

Grafting.

If scions needed for spring grafting have not been already cut, no time should be lost in securing a full supply. Scions will be good cut any time now before the buds begin to swell, and it will be easier to keep them in good order till wanted than if they had been cut in early winter. But do not wait too long, for it requires a skilful workman to graft with scions cut the same day they are set, and after growth has begun. For ourselves, we prefer to graft rather late in the season, after the weather becomes warm enough so the work can be done with comfort to the operator. We have had apple trees grafted after the fruit was as large as robins' eggs, and with most excellent results. Cherries should be grafted very early in the spring, before the buds begin to swell. It is a good deal of work to graft a tree and do it well. To cut the limbs all off down near the trunk, and attempt to renew the tree by a half dozen grafts only, is a savage way to treat a tree. It gives the tree too severe a shock. It is far better to graft many small limbs nearer the extremity. Then there should be a reasonable number of ungrafted limbs left to keep the tree growing while the scions are forming a union. If a large tree is grafted low down, with a few scions only, it is well to dig about the tree, and cut off a portion of the roots. There must be a balance between the top and root to keep the tree healthy

SMALL POTATOES. A correspondent of a leading publication writes that he made an experiment the past season which he thinks fully explodes the theory that small seed potatoes will only return a small crop of small potatoes. Any theory of that kind was exploded, the Germantown Telegraph supposes, before that writer was born, and the whole letter is an admirable illustration of a class who are continually fancying they are exploding something when there is really nothing to explode.

Still there is some misapprehension as to this small potato seed business, and it may be worth while to set it right. It is not the size of the potato, but the vigor and strength of the eyes on the potato, that make up the case. These are often as large on a potato of moderate size as on a very large one. If the eyes are of the same strength—of equal vigor—it is the same as if they were cut from the same tuber. A strong eye starts to grow and almost immediately sends out roots of its own, and has no farther dependence on the old piece. It gets its food wholly from the earth. If it is a weak puny sprout, of course it takes a whole season to get strong, and in the meantime can only send out very weak threads that must be able to form nothing but very small potatoes.

☞ No grain is better for horses than oats; for farm horses a mixture of corn and oats, ground and fed on moist cut feed is the best ration for animals while they are working.

☞ As many as 69 bushels of wheat have been grown upon a measured acre.

☞ Much barnyard manure in this country is wasted.

Anecdotes.

A citizen who had been playing poker the night before, dropped a blue chip into the contribution box by mistake. After service he went to the deacon who had passed the plate and told him of the mistake. "So I'll just give you a dollar in its place," he said, and we'll keep the matter quiet."

"No, you don't," replied the deacon, ignoring the money offered; "that's a blue chip; it's worth five dollars."

An inspector, who had been explaining to a class that the land of the world was not continuous, said to the boy who happened to be standing nearest to him: "Now, could your father walk around the world?"

"No, sir," was promptly answered.

"Why not?"

"Because he is dead," was the altogether unlooked for response.

A new form of Anglomania: Miss Georgia—"I want some banjo strings, and I must have the very best. You'd better give me some English."

Shopman—"I'd like to know if American cats don't have as good—ahem—! internal arrangements as English cats."

"I never saw such a woman in all my life," said Bass; "you are never satisfied with anything."

"People who know the man I took for a husband," replied Mrs. B., "think, on the contrary, that I am very easily satisfied."

"He tried to kiss me and I just told him to behave," said an irate young lady after a sleighride last night.

"Well, did he kiss you?" asked her friend.

"No, the idiot, he behaved."

Conundrums.

When is the best time for sowing tares? When you go around and collect your rents.

When would a bed make the best hunting ground? When it is made anew for rest (a new forest).

Why is a newspaper like an army? Because it has leaders, columns, and reviews.

Why is a whirlpool like a donkey? Because it has an eddy (a Neddy).

IN THE VICINITY.

—The Dedham roller skating rink is closed.

—The Norfolk County tax for 1885-86 will be $60,000.

—A pony bicycle is one of the novel turnouts in Milford.

—There is a lively building boom in operation in Needham.

—Marblehead is to have a novelty in the way of a May breakfast at a public hall.

—Work on laying the pipes of the Weymouth Water Works commenced last week.

—The town of Needham will this month appoint her first board of fire engineers.

—Middleboro is to have a new depot built this summer on the east side of the track.

—Pretty heavy bond at the Probate court in Dedham last week—a total of $1,276,000.

—The paper box business of Canton has become one of the largest industries of the place.

—Brockton's aldermen have voted to grant licenses of the first class for $500 and charge druggists $250.

—The total number of deaths in Boston last week was 201, against 189 for the corresponding week last year.

—At Lexington last Monday, the 110th anniversary of the battle of Lexington received appropriate recognition.

—A Milford physician says he has treated successfully seventy-five cases of pneumonia within the past few weeks.

—The Norfolk County Gazette is stirring up the people of Hyde Park to the necessity of making the town attractive.

—Nearly two hundred pupils are out of the public schools in Milford from the amount of sickness which is prevailing there.

—The new branch railroad from North Abington to Brockton is well patronized. It carried 4000 passengers the first week.

—Four convicts escaped from the State Prison in Charlestown about nine o'clock last Saturday morning. Two were subsequently recaptured.

—Rev. F. B. Chapin, pastor of the Old North Church of Weymouth for the past twelve years, has tendered his resignation to take effect October 1st.

—Mrs. Cyrus Raymond, of East Weymouth, 84 years old, took up a carpet, beat and put it down again, and cleaned all the paint in her room in one day.

—Forest Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Hyde Park, are to celebrate the 66th anniversary of Odd Fellowship Monday evening, by an entertainment and dance.

—A novel advertising enterprise is on the road at Milford and surrounding towns. A four horse team with a platform on the wagon, contains a chamber suite and ranges, all placarded with the price. The horses each wear a blanket properly lettered, a cornetist sounds the bugle calls, while assistants in livery distribute handbills at the houses.

—A straw hat factory has just manufactured one dozen mammoth hats for a Boston firm. The brims measure nine and one-half inches in width, the crowns seven and one-half inches in height and nine and one-half by ten and one-half inches across the top. The head size was thirty-four and one half inches, about twenty-two sizes larger than an average hat.

WATER SUPPLY. In the Senate last week the committee on water supply reported a bill to supply Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook with water from Great Pond in Braintree and Randolph; and allowing Braintree to issue $100,000 water bonds; Randolph, $100,000, and Holbrook $100,000, to run not more than thirty years at not more than six per cent.

NEW LAW. The new skating rink law in New York levels its prohibitions only against females "apparently or actually under the age of sixteen years." The most dangerous are commonly understood to be those apparently or actually just a little older than that. —Boston Advertiser.

THE ICE BRIDGE. A heavy gale at Niagara Falls, recently, raised the water so high in Niagara river, that the ice-bridge which has spanned the gorge during the past winter was carried out, crushing and grinding its way through the rapids and out into Lake Ontario.

AMENDMENT. This is a proposed 16th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution:—Neither distilled or fermented liquors shall be made, imported, transported, sold or used for drinking purposes within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

AUTOGRAPH. A bookseller in Liverpool offers a collection of autographs, and among them the autograph of "Adams (C. Francis), late President of the U. S. A., letter of three pages signed and dated London, June 20, 1868, 3s 6d."

WIRE LINE. The champion clothes line man of Plymouth County resides at Fall Brook in Middleboro, and has put up recently twenty thousand feet of wire line.

EXEMPTED. The New York Assembly has passed a bill exempting honorably discharged soldiers and sailors from examination under the civil service act. These veterans passed their examinations when they started for the battle field.

GOLDEN WEDDINGS. Nine golden weddings have been celebrated in Castleton, Vt., in the last ten years and all but one of the parties are now living.

YEARLY CONSUMPTION. The yearly consumption of meat in the United States is 120 pounds per capita, and in England 104 pounds, in France 74 pounds and in Germany 69 pounds.

"Gentle Spring."

Among spring preparations, do not neglect that which is most important of all—your own body. During the winter the blood absorbs many impurities, which, if not expelled, are liable to break out in scrofula or other disease. The best spring medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It expels every impurity from the blood, and gives strength to every function of the body. Sold by all druggists.

Dr. R. C. Flower's Scientific Remedies, now being advertised by the Flower Medicine Co., seems to meet the demand for something reliable in the way of a medicine which shall be within the reach of all. Feb. 7.—4w

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

SMALL MEN BEWARE.

Full of doleful possibilities for the men is the coming season; especially for those who lack stature. Such an one, after months of happy reflection that he is taller by an inch than his inamorata, is now liable to find any day, that the inch is replaced by a foot, and a foot on the wrong side. It is her twelve-inch sugar-loaf hat that has done it, and when we add that her brim may be of such dimensions that he can no longer whisper, but speak out in loud tones to be heard, no heart can deny him sympathy. Men of all degrees, indeed, are in a precarious situation, for even the tall man may discover the little creature whom he used loftily to patronize, now almost his equal, and protected by a very defiant expanse of brim. Even with a crown flat unto pancakeness there is no safety, since in many such cases the brim soars aloft to the most unseasonable and unreasonable heights. There is a crown and brim fever abroad. These cited are the most malignant cases, but any one might be seized, and short men about to propose would do well to consider risks.

TRIMMINGS.

With scarfs likewise, which measure in length two and a half yards by eighteen inches in breadth, he who runs may read that the hat of 1885 can become a notable affair. Totally unmanageable but for regiments of little pins. Long scarfs are bunched and twisted by their aid into reasonable shape, and their gilt heads glitter fashionably among soft, gauzy folds to the number, as an extreme example of fifty on one bonnet. Heraldic handkerchiefs are likewise held in position, and more than one capote is made of a handkerchief deftly pinned on, the centre forming a crown. Intermixtures of velvet greet us constantly; combined with any thing it comes in acceptably, not only as trimming but for strings, while in a new departure we observe velvet flowers—jonquils, daffodils and other garden glories—to say nothing of delicate muslin flowers attended by rich velvet foliage.

MATERIALS.

Velvet in millinery affords, in like manner an answering touch to costumes where velvet or its substitute, Nonpareil velveteen, with fast pile and rich shadowings, forms a component part or often the entire dress, with finish of lace. Black lace is in especial demand for these very attractive outfits; reaching even to entire lace dresses, but in this case, the foundation is silk or satin. Very pretty costumes will be made of camel's hair with sampler stitch borders for vest, collar, cuffs and partial skirt adornment. For evening, white wools are being made with trimmings of gold cord put on richly or in touches and pale colored wools are relieved by self colored silken cordings. The idea, indeed, of imparting character to a dress by the trimming, is a feature this season.

NOTES.

Black silk stockings are stylish, but this season will not be much worn with white dresses, while, for colored costumes, a stocking to match is greatly liked, or in case two or more colors appear in the dress, the leading one can be in solid hosiery, or choice might be made of stripes where the two are combined.—Having previously recommended Button's Raven Gloss as the only shoe dressing which does not injure leather, it is gratifying to find, on inquiry, that ladies now concede it to be the best in the market. A little higher priced, but cheaper in the end, as it really improves the boot or slipper.—A short wrap, of brocaded material, trimmed sometimes with chenille fringe, but oftener with lace, is the favorite street garment for spring. Colored brocade is more stylish than black, the latter, however, being worn to a great extent. LUCY CARTER.

Household Receipts.

To make a hasty-cup pudding beat four spoonfuls of flour with a pint of milk and four eggs to a good batter, nutmeg and sugar to taste; butter teacups, fill them three parts full, and send them to the oven. Will bake in a quarter of an hour.

An appetizing sauce to serve with roast beef is made of one table-spoonful of grated horse-radish, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Mix them thoroughly together.

A delicious sauce for plain rice pudding is made by stewing some apples and grapes until perfectly soft, then rub them through a sieve, sweeten, put a lump of butter in, and if too thin, stir with a little corn-starch.

Delicious filling for a pie is made by stewing some prunes until they are very soft, and remove the stones, sweeten to your taste, and add, for one pie, the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Beat with the prunes until thoroughly mixed. Bake with two crusts, or if you can get it, use whipped cream in place of the upper crust.

Beef fritters are nice for breakfast. Chop pieces of steak or cold roast beef very fine. Make a batter of milk, flour and an egg, and mix the meat with it. Put a lump of butter into a saucepan, let it melt, then drop the batter into it from a large spoon. Fry until brown; season with pepper and salt and a little parsley.

Clear boiling water will remove tea stains. Pour the water through the stains and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union.

Alcohol. Its Effect upon the Liver.

Alcohol is carried by the portal vein directly to the liver. This organ after the brain holds the largest share. The influence of the poison is here easily traced. "The color of the bile is soon changed from yellow to green, and even black." The connective tissues between the lobules become inflamed, and in the case of a confirmed drunkard, hardened and shrunk, the surface often resuming a nodulated appearance known as the "hob-nailed liver." Morbid matter is sometimes deposited, causing what is called "fatty degeneration," so that the liver is increased to twice or thrice its natural size.

EFFECT UPON THE KIDNEYS.

The kidneys, like the liver, are liable in time to undergo, through the influence of alcohol, a "fatty degeneration," in which the cells becomes filled with particles of fat,* the vessels lose their contractility; and, worst of all, the membranes may be so modified as to allow the albuminous part of the blood to filter through them, and so rob the body of one of its most valuable constituents.

*"Disabled by fatty deposits, the kidneys are unable to separate the waste matter coming to them for elimination from the system. The poisonous material is poured back into the circulation, and often delirium ensues.—Hubbard.

Miscellany.

Magazines and Papers.

THE TEMPLE STAR. This excellent monthly publication, devoted to the interest of the Order known as the Temple of Honor, has been purchased by A. H. Lewis, Esq., of East Boston, who has moved the office of publication to that city. All members of the Order will find this a most excellent and valuable journal. The price is so reasonable that every member in Quincy should have a copy.

Tid-bits is the name of a bright, original and humorous weekly published in New York by John W. Lovell Co., now in its second volume. There are poetical tid-bits, artistic scientific tid-bits, musical and dramatic tid-bits; also comic, foreign and miscellaneous tid-bits, all for three cents.

The April number begins the third volume of that very popular magazine the Bay State Monthly. It is adorned with steel plate portraits of Charles Carleton Coffin, the well-known newspaper correspondent, and Colonel John B. Clark, editor and proprietor of the Manchester, N. H., Mirror. An historical sketch of Old Dorchester by Charles M. Barrows and other interesting articles which space will not permit us to enumerate, make up a collection of literary excellence it would be hard to equal. The Bay State Monthly is published by John N. McClintock & Co., 31 Milk St., Boston, Mass.

The editions of The Century Magazine are now so large that it has become necessary either to go to press at an earlier date or to postpone the day of issue. The latter alternative has been accepted. The April number, the edition of which was 225,000, was delayed until the 25th of March. The May number—edition, 250,000—will be issued on the 1st day of May, thus inaugurating with the first number of the thirtieth volume a change which has long been considered desirable by the publishers, and which it is believed will be heartily commended by the public. Future numbers of The Century Magazine will be issued on the 1st day of the month of which each bears date.

The Musical Herald for April contains the usual amount of interesting reading, including a paper on "A knowledge of the art of pianoforte tuning essential to a general musical education." There are three vocal numbers and one instrumental. Publi-hed in Boston by the Musical Herald Co.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the

Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

What Baking Powder Shall We Buy?

The presence of lime in the cheap, low grade baking powders is no longer questioned. Analysts have found it in large quantities in all the baking powders sold in this market, except the "Royal."

Some of the baking powders so prominently certified to the public as pure have been found by Profs. Chandler, Habirshaw, and other chemists, to contain nearly 12 per cent of this deleterious substance. This accounts for their lack of leavening power, and for the salt, bitter, and soapy taste frequently found in biscuits or cake where they are used.

But, aside from the great inferiority otherwise of baking powders so largely adulterated, it has been found that lime taken into the system in such quantities as this is injurious. It cannot be decomposed by heat, and is not dissolved in mixing or baking. The whole of this enormous amount, therefore, as found in these baking powders, passes with the food into the stomach. Its physiological effects upon the system are indigestion, dyspepsia, or worse evils.

Lime is a caustic so powerful that it is used by tanners to eat hair from hides of animals, and in dissecting-rooms to rot the flesh from the bones of dead subjects. The presence of this adulterant in these powders results from the use of impure, cheap cream of tartar.

Royal Baking Powder Absolutely Pure.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated.

This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor, and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery, and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured directly from the wine districts of Europe and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care, and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance, and chemically pure in all respects.

The following report of Prof. McMurtrie, late Chief Chemist of the Department of Agriculture, United States Government, was made after a thorough test of the cream of tartar of commerce. The position in which this report establishes Royal as absolutely pure and wholesome is unattainable by any other baking powder in the world:

"I have examined the cream of tartar manufactured by the New York Tartar Company and used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of their baking powder, and find it to be perfectly pure, and FREE FROM LIME IN ANY FORM.

A CRUCIAL TEST.

The severe analytical tests to which the various baking powders have from time to time been placed have demonstrated clearly to the public the relative merits of the different brands from a scientific point of view. Eminent chemists, for instance, in their analyses, have found the comparative strength of several kinds as follows:

| Name. | Cubic inches Gas Evolved. |
|---|---|
| "Royal" (absolutely pure) | 127.04 |
| "Hanford's None Such," fresh | 121.6 |
| "Hanford's None Such," old | 84.35 |
| "Cleveland's (contains lime), fresh | 110.8 |
| "Cleveland's," when not fresh | 61.2 |
| "Sea Foam" | 107.9 |
| "Hecker's" | 92.5 |

The Royal Baking Powder was found, besides being of absolute purity, to evolve the highest amount of leavening gas of any of the powders tested, and hence it was placed at the head of the list and recommended for Government use.

But the crucial test of the kitchen is, after all, the most satisfactory to the housekeeper. A baking powder that never fails to make light, sweet, wholesome, and palatable bread, biscuit, cake, etc., upon all occasions, is the one that will be placed at the head of the list by the practical housewife, and received into her kitchen for continuous use. This test the Royal Baking Powder has stood for over twenty years without a single failure, and hence its reputation as the best baking powder made has spread from house to house, until its use has become as universal as its merits are unrivaled.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Spring Thoughts.

A brisk little breeze went flitting by
That kissed my cheek on its way;
And I thought it must come from some spicy bower,
For its perfume was of "new mown hay"
Like the great bunches the workmen pile up
At the close of the bright June day.

A shower of spring rain-drops had been falling fast
For the grass-roots needed some drink;
So they came all together just as happy and bright
To fulfil their mission, I think.
Then the thought—Oh, how glorious! if all done their best,
Like the little cool rain-drops in their willingness.

The soft pussy-willows peeped out long ago
To catch the spring sunshine aglow;
While the crimson-tipped maples with a nod and bow
Make me think of good people I know
Whose hearts are so genial, and kind helpful words
They bestow upon all, rich and low.

There are little green leaves pushing up through the earth
Reaching out for the sunshine and light,—
Are we struggling as hard to push earth-stains away
As these little spring leaflets so bright?
Not minding the pricks of the briars a bit,
Or the brambles that hedge up our sight.

O! this glorious spring sunshine,—how it broadens and fills
All the little dark corners of earth,
Till dancing so lightly, and tripping so brightly,
Seems bubbling over with mirth.
And I guess if the birdies should whisper to you
They would tell you I'm as happy as—I can't think what.

MAY LOVEJOY.

Miscellany.

PHŒBE'S TRICK.

"An invitation to the picnic—and Burt Williams will be there. How splendid!" Phœbe looked in the glass as she spoke, and thought to herself that she was really very pretty, and that she was just the person to grace the Williams mansion as its mistress. "And if I can only have Burt to myself for the day," she thought, "he will surely offer himself. He doesn't know which he likes best, Lizzie or me. If I could only keep Lizzie from going."

But to keep Lizzie from going would not be so easy. What excuse was there for her to make her cousin for wishing her to absent herself from the merry-making? A sudden thought occurred to Phœbe. It was a fearfully mean one. She could hide Lizzie's shoes. At that moment Lizzie had just one pair besides her slippers, and her foot was so small that she could not wear those of any other member of the family.

There would not be time to buy a pair, for they were miles from town, and the general store only dealt in rough boots that Lizzie could not wear.

"Yes," Phœbe said to herself, "that would keep her at home."

She crept into Lizzie's room and saw the shoes, with their toes turned over, set upon the window-sill. Nothing could have favored Phœbe's plan better. Some tramp would be supposed to have stolen them. She whisked them away in an instant and, hiding them under her apron, carried them to her room and hid them at the bottom of her trunk.

"All is fair in love as in war," she said to herself; but, after all, it was not love for the man, though she thought him handsome, as much as love for his estates. Phœbe was very ambitious, and she was poor, living with her aunt and obliged to take everything from her hands. There was, perhaps, some excuse for her wishing to marry well.

Down in the dining-room Lizzie was laughing over the picnic. She, too, hoped to have Burt Williams at her side all day, and she had really given her heart to him. It would have made no difference to her if he had been a poor mechanic, instead of Burt Williams with the greatest fortune in the country. She thought he loved her sometimes; still Phœbe tried hard to cut her out, and Phœbe was prettier than she was; she knew it.

"He would show his preference today," she said, as he behaved on this occasion she would judge of his heart. "If he likes Phœbe best, I will stop thinking of him," she said to herself.

"Come girls," said her mother, "dress yourselves, and pa can drive you over; and take wraps, for it is sure to be chilly after dark; and don't sit down by the river—I misdoubt it's dangerous. And don't stand in the sun."

But the girls were off before she had done speaking, and in a few moments Lizzie was heard to cry in a melancholy way, from the head of the stairs:

"Oh, ma! I can't find my shoes."

Phœbe heard it, and laughed. The mother ran up stairs. As Phœbe placed the black lace scarf about her throat with her most becoming turquoise pin she heard them decide that the shoes had been stolen by a tramp.

"The idea of putting them on the sill!" said the mother.

"I thought they seemed damp," said Lizzie. "Oh, dear, how foolish I was. Now I must stay at home." And she began to cry a little.

They came and told Phœbe, who was all astonishment and commiseration, and who asked if she should stay at home, also.

"Of what use would that be?" asked Lizzie. "Oh, no; go. I declare I am the unluckiest girl! I wanted to go so much."

"Of course, you did," said Phœbe to herself. Her uncle drove her over to the picnic grounds, talking all the way about Lizzie's shoes, and Phœbe felt very mean and contemptible. Somehow she could not enjoy herself, and as the time wore on and Burt Williams did not present himself she became utterly wretched.

"Where is Burt?" asked everybody. But Burt came not.

Evening drew on. People began to go home. It had been the stupidest, the most wretched day for Phœbe.

Meanwhile, Lizzie, sitting with her crochet work on the piazza, heard a voice at the gate saying:

"Good morning, Miss Miller!"

She looked up. There stood Burt Williams.

"I met your father on the road," he said, "and he told me you were not going to the picnic."

"Yes, think of the funny reason! I haven't any shoes," said Lizzie. "Nothing but this slippers; a tramp has stolen mine."

All the world looked bright to her now, and she could laugh.

"Well, I am not going if you are not," said Burt; "may I come up and sit down?"

"Of course," said Lizzie.

The mother was busy up stairs; nobody was near. Burt sat down very close to Lizzie and played with the ball of blue worsted she was knitting into a match-receiver.

She felt her cheeks glow, and she was glad that she had not gone to the picnic.

The bees hummed in the garden; the scent of the new-mown hay came up from the pasture.

They sat silent for many moments.

In all her life Lizzie would not forget that happy time.

"Lizzie," said Burt, after awhile, "I suppose you know I love you. I haven't told you so out and out, but I think you must have seen it."

"No, I didn't know; I was not sure," said Lizzie.

"And I'm not at all sure about you, Lizzie," said Burt; "do you care a little for me? Will you marry me, darling? I shall be very wretched if you will not."

What Lizzie said did not make Burt wretched.

When Phœbe came home that night she looked cross and dispirited.

"Had a nice time?" asked her aunt.

"No, it was stupid. Lizzie didn't miss much," said Phœbe.

"Why, there now, I rather think she didn't," said Mrs. Miller; "I can't keep it to myself, Phœbe. Pa met Burt Williams and told him she wasn't going, and he called, and they are engaged, Phœbe. Why, it's like a story, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Phœbe; she could not say any more; her anger was too great, and Mrs. Miller shrewdly suspected why.

The next morning Lizzie's shoes were found just under the window.

"Not a bit damp with dew or anything," said Mrs. Miller to herself. But though she jumped at a pretty correct conclusion as to their disappearance, all had turned out so well for Lizzie that she was generous enough to say nothing to any one.

His Aunt's Teeth.

"Please, sir, give me an emetic, and quick, please."

The uptown druggist peered over his counter at the customer and saw a small 9-year-old boy and a big Newfoundland dog. The boy's face was dirty and tear-stained; the dog's face was weary and lugubrious.

"An emetic?" exclaimed the druggist, and then, seeing that the boy's hands clutched his gastric region in agony, he hastily compounded the draught and handed it over the counter.

Hastily the little hands clutched the glass and lifted it, not to the mouth associated with them, but to the dog's. Too much surprised to interfere, the druggist breathed a mental prayer and watched proceedings. The dog scented the nauseous stuff, touched it with the tip of his tongue, shook his head in disgust and squatted down on his haunches.

"He won't take it," sobbed the boy, bursting into tears, "and there's no other way to get them out of him."

"Get what?" stammered the druggist.

"Why, sir," was the agonized reply, "He has gone and swallowed Aunt Julia's teeth, and she's going round the house like mad because she can't find them, and I want to get them out of his body before she finds out where they are. Oh, sir, do help me, or I'll be whipped to death if Aunt Julia finds it out. Besides she can't eat a mouthful of dinner until she gets them."

The druggist took pity on the child and as Tom Hood would say, conciliated the dog into permitting his internal regions to be revolutionized, and in a short time a smile came over the boy's face and he hurried homeward with his deluded relative's dental apparatus in his pocket and the Newfoundland following sadly at his heels.

Very Awkward Indeed.

It was horribly awkward. Yes, they were staying at a "winter resort," and it was rather disagreeable to have everybody so painfully aware of the fact that it was their wedding tour. So he made a desperate appeal to their confidential waiter. And Peter took it, and smiled confidently, and said that he'd see to it, yes sir. And the next day at dinner the people in the hotel behaved in the strangest manner—it was positively insulting, you know, and she said she had never been looked at in such a way in all her life before. And so, when they were leaving the table, he said to Peter, privately: "Peter, did you attend to that little matter I spoke to you about yesterday?" "Oh, yes sir," said Peter, smiling confidentially; "Oh, dear, yes sir. I done it, sir—I see to it. I told 'em you wasn't no bridal couple, sir—hadn't never been married, sir. Oh, yes sir, it's all right, sir."—German Paper.

Worth Recommending.

We have been favored with samples of the celebrated Spencerian Double Elastic Steel Pens, and after trying them feel justified in highly commending them to our readers. They are made of the best steel, and by the most expert workmen, and have a national reputation for certain desirable qualities which no other pens seem to possess in so great perfection. Among these are uniform evenness of point, durability, flexibility, and quill action. So popular have they become, that of the "Number One" alone, as many as fourteen millions are sold annually.

Complaints are constantly made of the difficulty in getting good ink. Probably, in some cases, the durability of the ink is of little consequence—the writing has done its work in an hour or two; but, it should be remembered, occasions constantly arise which give great importance to writings, or perhaps to the mere signature of a name. The usual inkstand is, of course, resorted to, and if an inferior ink is commonly used, the result possibly may be disastrous.

The Spencerian Writing Fluid combines, in a high degree, three essential qualities, fluidity, color, and durability, and is absolutely reliable for all business purposes.

The proprietors of these well-known pens and inks, Messrs. IVISON, BLAKEMAN, TAYLOR, & CO., 753 & 755 Broadway, New York, Educational Publishers, will send free, on application, their Spencerian Specialties Sales-book, which gives a full descriptive list of these and many other standard articles of interest to stationers and booksellers.

A Book of Poems.

The fine book, entitled "A New England Sleighing Frolic and other poems," written by the late F. M. Adlington of Weymouth, and compiled by his daughter, Mrs. Amey M. Hillyer, of Washington, D. C., is highly prized and sought after. Some of the poems are of superior merit, but all are excellent. To the lovers of poetry these selections offer beautiful thoughts as they are given in sweet poetical language, suited for all occasions and moods. Mr. Adlington was a welcome contributor to the PATRIOT for more than twenty-five years, and his name was familiar to many of our subscribers, several of whom have secured copies of the book.

Among these gems we have selected as worthy of particular mention:—

"Man has no dwelling place here." This hymn conveys many truthful ideas and each verse is full of beautiful sentiment, "Who'll mourn for me" and "Corn husking in New England," among the miscellaneous selections are particularly readable. Among the personals are his tributes of love to his three boys, who when their country called, went forth to battle for her rights and were among those who died in her defence.

"The Dollar Weekly," a newspaper printed in Racine, Wis., has a very complimentary notice of Mr. Adlington and his poems, from which we make the following extract:

"We remember Mr. Adlington as one of the most genial and kind hearted of men, a most loyal citizen, a zealous reformer and with all a true and honest man. He was full of the spirit of poetry and always willing to put his pen to the service of his friends, and the little town of Weymouth was often a debtor to his genius; no Fourth of July celebration was properly arranged or appropriately carried out without a poem from Mr. Adlington; Thanksgiving and Christmas hymns, birthday greetings, welcomes to returning friends and farewells to pastors, Mr. Adlington had the right word for them all. We knew Weymouth in war time and when the great question of liberty was uppermost, when old Mass. was at the white heat of enthusiasm and everybody was enlisted in reform, then Mr. Adlington found in them topics of the time subjects which tipped his pen with fire. In the volume before us we find poems upon "Freedom," "John Brown," "Emancipation" and other poems of liberty all of which are permeated with the martial spirit of the time, although his religious poems seem to us on the whole to be superior to most others in the collection."

Domestic Diplomacy.

A Waco lady advertised for a servant and a colored woman put in an appearance. Her first question was:

"Have yer got any chillun?"

"No, I've got no children. Why do you ask?"

"Bekase if you haint got no chillun I haint gwinter stay wid yer."

"What have children to do with your work?"

"I don't wanter stay in no house whar dar's no chilluns, becase den whenebber any dishes am broke it am always laid on de servant and tucken outen her wages."

SKATING RINKS. At the regular monthly meeting of the Temperance Social Union in Wesleyan Hall, Boston, on Friday of last week, Henry H. Faxon of this town was among the speakers. The Boston Journal reports him as follows:

"Mr. Faxon said that a skating rink properly conducted was the greatest help in spreading Temperance. The rink at Quincy had about squelched what there was of saloons in that town, including billiard saloons. He did not allude, he said, to a skating rink run on the go-as-you-please plan. A great many irregularities are said to go on in the singing seats at church, but that was no reason why we should abolish singing. He had attended the skating rink at Quincy nearly every night, and had seen there hundreds of persons who, if it hadn't been for the rink, would have been in Boston drunk; but there was nothing contrary to right principles at the rink. There was everywhere a great many young people who have to be watched, but the rink would do no hurt if conducted on right principles."

THE RIGHT SORT OF TESTIMONY. I have used Bradley's Phosphate every year for fifteen years; have also used other fertilizers, but consider Bradley's the best for all kinds of vegetables. By using eight hundred pounds per acre, without other manure, on one and three-eighths acres of corn, I sold $237 worth, and what corn and fodder I fed out I considered equal to $63, making $300 in all as the value of the crop to me. W. H. WALKER. Dighton, Mass., Dec. 24, 1884.

Dr. R. C. Flower's Scientific Remedies, now being advertised by the Flower Medicine Co., seems to meet the demand for something reliable in the way of a medicine which shall be within the reach of all. Feb. 7—4w

ANNALS OF QUINCY.

NUMBER I.

Believing that there are several interesting and historical facts connected with our ancient town, which have not hitherto been published, or which are not known to many of the readers of the PATRIOT to-day, we shall publish from week to week, commencing with the period when Quincy was incorporated a town, the annals. We are indebted to Mr. Eben W. Underwood for the bulk of information which we shall present. It is well known that this gentleman has devoted a considerable time for many years in searching ancient records and diaries, and we believe that his dates and information are very reliable. It was once his intention to have published a history of Quincy, and he has kindly allowed us the use of his books.

Dr. Pattee's excellent history of Quincy tells us that as early as 1728 an effort was made to incorporate the North Precinct of Braintree into a separate town, but the movement proved unsuccessful. Early in 1790 the inhabitants in that precinct made another move in that direction, and caused to be inserted in the warrant for a town meeting, held May 10th of that year, the following article.

"To see if the town will consent or vote that the North Precinct in said town, and the other lands included within the following bounds, be set off into a separate town, viz:—From the head of Hayward's Creek, so called, on a straight line till it strikes the line that divides the North and Middle Precincts on the road leading from the North to the Middle Precinct Meetinghouse, and then to run on said line until it comes into the Blue Hill river, and so on said river as the line now runs between the North and South Precincts."

The territory of Braintree at that time embraced the towns of Quincy, Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook; and had a population of 2,771.

The voters of the Middle and South Precincts rallied to the meeting and "Voted to dismiss the article."

The people of the North Precinct then circulated a petition for signatures, which was signed by 119 persons, inhabitants of said North Precinct; 5 inhabitants of that portion of Dorchester lying on the South side of Neponset river; 9 inhabitants of Milton, and 7 inhabitants of that portion of Braintree called "Knight's Neck," (now Quincy Neck.)

The petition was presented to the General Court, which assigned February 16th, 1791, as the day for a hearing on the subject.

On the seventh day of February a town meeting was called, at which Major Stephen Penniman, Capt. John Vinton, Mr. Azariah Faxon, Lieut. Nathaniel Niles, Mr. Joseph White, Jr., and Capt. Ichabod Holbrook were chosen to appear before the General Court on the 16th inst., "in behalf of the town and prevent if it is in their power the prayer of the petition aforesaid being granted."

This committee was instructed to engage counsel, and the Representative, Col. Ebenezer Thayer, Jr., was instructed to use his influence in the House of Representatives to prevent the separation, and to assist the committee whenever requested. The subject was not tested that winter.

The contest for Representative to the General Court at the next election which was held May 11th, 1791, serves to show how evenly the town was divided in the matter, for Samuel Bass of the North Precinct received 142 votes in a total of 271.

Sept. 27, 1791, another town meeting was held on the subject, when Major Stephen Penniman, Ebenezer Thayer, Jr., Esq., Capt. Ichabod Holbrook and Lieut. Seth Mann were chosen to appear before a committee of the General Court, and again oppose the separation.

The petition of the North Precinct of Braintree can be found on page 58 of Pattee's History, and the General Court seems to have considered the reasons there advanced of sufficient weight, and their argument conclusive, as on the twenty-third of February, 1791, an act was passed by the Legislature and received the official sanction of her illustrious and honored son, John Hancock, then Governor of the State, and the dispute was ended.

Hannibal Hamlin tells that when he was speaker of the Lower House of the Maine Legislature, there was among the members a very dandified old fellow whose chief weakness was in trying to conceal the baldness which was rapidly stealing over his head. He came into the house each morning with his hair so carefully combed that it looked as though each particular hair had been pasted in its place.

Even as it was, there was scarcely enough to cover the bald spot. One morning speaker Hamlin, thinking to have some fun, called this gentleman to him and said: "My dear Blank, I beg your pardon, but one of your hairs is crossed over the others." The member grew angry at once and replied: "You insult me, sir! you insult me!" and walked stiffly back to his seat. He refused to be reconciled, and he became Hamlin's life-long enemy. A few years later, when Hamlin was a candidate for the United States Senate, this man was again in the Legislature, and his vote decided the contest in favor of Hamlin's opponent.

☞ Some teachers in penmanship now teach their pupils to write with both hands. The method of instruction is to make the pupil write his name in pencil, and then go over it with a pen held in his left hand. Constant practice gives efficiency.

Town Improvement.

At this season when nature is exerting herself to make our surroundings attractive, should we not in our humble way do what we can to make our residences, grounds, streets and town attractive? There is much that may be accomplished, and oftentimes at little cost, or by a few hours' work. Well painted houses, in good repair are very essential, and the surrounding grounds should be beautified by shubbery, flowers, grass, walks, driveways, etc. Let each one do what he or she can about their residence and thus stimulate others. Keep your yards free from the thousand and one articles that are almost sure to collect unless care is taken.

While individuals are busy about their own residences let them not forget the good that can be accomplished by organizations like our village improvement societies, and lend them a helping hand. Trees along our highways, which were planted years ago, are now appreciated, and their shade in summer enjoyed. They add much to the appearance of the town. How often while in other towns do we remark on the abundance or absence of trees. Shady sidewalks and streets are a luxury we should enjoy. We cannot possess them in a day, month or year, but we can provide for those who are to follow us, and oftentimes reap the benefit ourselves.

Besides trees and well kept residences, small parks or triangles at the intersection of streets, even if they are only a grass plot, add much more than their cost to the beauty of the locality. They show that towns, like well-dressed individuals, have pride in themselves. Articles in the warrant for the special town meeting next Tuesday evening, ask the town to enclose with stone curbing two such squares at the junction of School, Pleasant and Fort streets, and Elm and Washington streets, and elsewhere that they think advisable.

The grounds of Thomas Crane Public Library are an ornament to any locality, and we are glad to see the trustees devote so much attention to them. Then there are many private residences that show that the owners love the beautiful in nature. Noticeably those on Adams and Greenleaf streets.

The State Census.

The work of taking the census of Massachusetts commenced yesterday. Charles H. Bellows and William B. Worster are the enumerators for this town, and their numbers are respectively 315 and 316. The Old Colony railroad has been adopted as the division line between the two districts. Mr. Bellows, whose duties are on the south and west side of the railroad, commenced work yesterday in South Quincy. Mr. Worster will not commence in his district until Monday. Each man has been supplied with three schedules, and there are more to come later. Schedule No. 1 is for the population and social statistics, and each of our enumerators have received about 7,000. Schedule No. 1, special, relates to prisoners and convicts, homeless children and paupers, and physical condition. Schedule No. 4 calls for statistics regarding domestic manufactures, agricultural products and property. The following are the queries relating to males in Schedule No 1, the first four to be filled by the enumerators.

1. House number.
2. Family number.
3. Number in family.
4. Population number.
5. Surname.
6. Christian name and initial.
7. Residence.
8. Town or city.
9. Ward.
10. Precinct.
11. County.
12. Relation to head of family.
13. Color and race.
14. Age.
15. Conjugal condition.
16. Place of birth.
17. Place of birth of father.
18. Place of birth of mother.
19. Occupation.
20. Months unemployed in above occupation.
21. Months employed in all kinds of work.
22. Read.
23. Write.
24. Attended school twenty weeks during census year.
25. Physical condition.
26. Special schedule number.
27. Ratable poll.
28. Legal voter.
29. Naturalized voter.
30. Alien.

The only difference in the above schedule and the one for females is the omission of the last four questions and the substitution of the following:

31. Mother of how many children.
32. Number of these children now living.

The enumerators are authorized and empowered by Carroll D. Wright, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor, and they are bound under a heavy penalty to perform their duties honestly and correctly. The people are also required to give correct information, for Section 12 of Chapter 181 of the Acts of 1884 says "If any person shall refuse to give the information required by this Act to a person authorized to collect the same, he shall pay a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for every such refusal.

The census of Quincy will be watched with much interest by the agitators of city questions, and it is hoped the enumerators will do their work faithfully, thoroughly and speedily. Political representation depends largely on the population, and in fact the taking of the census is important in many ways, and should be correct.

MAY FESTIVAL. The fair and sale at the Universalist Vestry next Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings will be seen to promise a very enjoyable occasion. Mr. W. T. Baker assumes the part of the original "Roy" in the drama "Comrades," and with Mr. Snow in the exacting character of Matt Winsor, Mrs. Burrell as Roy's wife, and Miss Robinson as Nancy Nipper, all may be certain of an excellent rendition of this popular play. Mothers will be in preparation for the baby show and its four handsome prizes. It is known that the competition will be shared by many. This is sure to prove a unique and most pleasing exhibit. The second evening has for a grand miscellaneous entertainment such an extent and variety as we have no recollection of ever before seeing announced. Extensive preparation for the sale tables and abundant provision for supper each evening invite all who appreciate the beautiful and delicious. Full particulars will be found in our advertising columns.

ENGINEERS. At a meeting of the Selectmen Wednesday evening the following gentlemen were appointed Engineers of the Fire Department:

Joseph M. Glover, Franklin Curtis, John W. Hall, William C. Seelye, Joseph Warren Hayden, William B. Barry and Fred Jenkins.

The last gentleman is a new man on the board, and takes the place of Charles N. Dilson. All parts of the town are now represented.

☞ The Selectmen have appointed Joseph Warren Hayden, William C. Seelye and Mark E. Hanson, police on by-laws for the centre of the town. They are to be paid seventy dollars for the season, which commenced yesterday and will continue until cool weather.

☞ On Tuesday last the enterprising auctioneer, Mr. B. N. Adams, sold a large estate at Quincy Neck, belonging to E. C. Sargent, consisting of the homestead, woodland and wharf. Henry H. Faxon, Esq., bought the lot of woodland and the wharf for $400 each. The homestead was sold to James Murdock for $9,025.

☞ James Morris who resides with his mother on Wild Place, was quite severely injured on Wednesday while working at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. He was at work digging and a man who was working with him was using a pickaxe and accidentally struck young Morris on the head inflicting a severe wound.

☞ The Board of Health has appointed Peter McConarty as scavanger, and we learn that he is preparing himself to do the labor in a neater and more satisfactory manner than it has been done in years gone by. He is having a pump made, at considerable expense, to pump the contents of cesspools and vaults directly into his wagon, which will give him a chance to do the work in a much neater and healthier way, than under the old custom of buckets and scoops.

☞ George S. Bass and wife are in New Hampshire.

☞ Patrick McDonnell is to build one or two houses on Brackett street.

☞ Mr. Edwin B. Pratt's handsome lawn has received its first clean shave with the lawn mower.

Quincy Point Items.

LADIES AID SOCIETY.

On Thursday evening the Ladies Aid Society and others of the parish gave a tea party in honor of Rev. J. L. Harris and family, which proved the most enjoyable affair of the season. The large vestry, used as a supper room, was arranged with three long tables loaded with the most appetizing viands and decorated with bouquets of flowers. At 7.15 supper was served to 120 and everything proved as good as it had promised. At 9 o'clock Mrs. A. A. Harlow as president of the Ladies' Aid Society and in behalf of the same, presented Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Harris with a beautiful French clock and Mrs. Harris with an elegant bouquet. Although completely taken by surprise, Mr. Harris responded in a few appropriate remarks thanking the donors for their gifts and for the courtesy and kindness extended to him and his family. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social and pleasant manner.

THIS AND THAT.

Hose Co. 4 hold a special meeting tonight and the regular monthly meeting Monday night.

Polo teams have been formed in each of the following named schools. Coddington, Wollaston, Adams and Washington. The captains of the several teams called on manager Trask of the Coliseum this week, and asked permission to practice in the rink, which was kindly granted them.

The alarm from box 72 last Saturday was caused by burning grass on South street.

See another column for house advertised to let at the Point.

Rev. J. L. Harris preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last, from Gal. 4: 4 and 5 verses, which proved a strong and forcible discourse.

Mr. H. M. Federhen has been confined to the house a few days this week by illness, and this is the first time his seat in the House of Representatives has been empty this session.

W. S. A.

The Washington School Association gave a public entertainment on Thursday night and considering the severe storm it was well attended. On Wednesday the Association will have a supper. Tickets are now on sale at Post Office.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. Henry Dean started on Thursday night for a three months' business trip in the South.

Miss Mary Bosworth is spending the spring vacation of the Pawtucket, R. I., schools at her home.

Mr. Walter Redding and family have returned to their summer home at the Point. With the alterations Mr. Redding has made during the winter and spring in his estate, he has one of the handsomest places in town.

Mr. Fred H. Smith has sold a portion of land containing about 6 1-2 acres bordering on Weymouth river to Mr. Walter H. Redding.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Alvah Johnson of Pawtucket, R. I., are the guests of Mr. Clift Crane.

Mr. James Murdock of Water street bought at auction the Sargent estate, and four tenement houses at the Neck; and Mr. Henry H. Faxon the wharf property. It is rumored that Mr. Murdock is negotiating for the purchase or lease of the latter for the purpose of carrying on polishing works. If this should prove a fact, business may again be lively at the Neck, as the firm of Murdock & Smith is one of the most enterprising in town.

SHIPPING

Arrived, April 25, Sch. Mary G. Collins, Capt. Somers, from Philadelphia, with 514 tons coal for Joel Sheppard & Sons.

April 29, Sch. Kendoskeag, Capt. Whitney, from Port Johnson, with 235 tons coal for Joel Sheppard & Sons.

April 30, Sch. Lucy Collins, Capt. Bartlett, from New York, with 268 tons coal for Joel Sheppard & Sons.

Wollaston.

The "march of improvements" goes steadily onward in our village. With the new houses going up, repairing of streets, and shade trees being set out, one has to look sharp in order to keep posted on all that is going on. The Village Improvement Society have set out 116 trees and have contracted for more. The Selectmen are deserving of praise for the manner they are fixing the streets.

Rev. C. W. Woods, of Boston, will take charge of the services at the M. E. church next Sunday. Preaching in the morning at 10.45, and in the evening at 7 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Knight is attending the Vermont conference, of which he is a member.

Miss Alverna J. Noa sails for Europe in the "Bothnia" on Saturday—she expects to be absent several months.

Secure your tickets for the mock trial.

The M. E. Society was completely surprised Sunday before last, to find that a very fine pulpit, had—during the night previous—been substituted for the "apology," which has been used for a number of years. The pulpit is solid black walnut, with raised panels and carvings on the front. The desk is adjustable and covered with cloth to match the furniture. Rev. Mr. Knight publicly thanked the donor of the pulpit for the noble gift, and also the one who so generously gave the new carpet for the enlarged pulpit-platform. The value of the two gifts is nearly or quite one hundred dollars.

The gypsies arrived this week and are encamped at the usual place. They have a large number of horses with them.

At Wollaston-by-the-Sea a new street is being built from Beach street to Elm avenue, and water pipes are to be laid to Captain Huntington's new house. Mrs. E. Page has bought a lot of land adjoining her residence. The grounds about her house have been graded and the finishing touches put on. It is a very attractive residence, and a credit to the architect and builders. H. T. Whitman has also bought a lot, and there have been several inquiries concerning others.

Henry O. Fairbanks has sold a house lot of 11,000 square feet on Belmont street to Mr. Chase, and it is rumored he is to build soon.

The subject of changing the name of Wollaston School to the Safford School is to be brought before the School Committee at the next regular meeting. When the school was built the land was given by Mr. Nathaniel F. Safford of Milton, for many years County Commissioner, and the name is thought more appropriate.

Samuel Cummings has regraded his grounds on Belmont street, and it is a great improvement to the residence of Mr. Hatch.

Boynton & Russell have sold "Nobby Morrill" and are now looking for a fast horse.

Mr. Emerson is giving good satisfaction as principal of the Wollaston School. All are glad to see Miss Alice Wight back as a teacher.

The ladies connected with the Methodist Society will give a pound party at the residence of Mrs. Israel Waterhouse next Wednesday evening. Every one is invited to bring their "pound." The autograph quilt which they have been making is completed, and may be offered for sale then.

The Musical Association meet next Monday evening with Rev. W. R. Lord. Weaver will be discussed.

To-morrow evening there is to be an address at the Congregational Church on Village Improvement by the pastor, Rev. B. B. Sherman.

The storm of last Sunday evening interfered with the church services.

There is some talk of an out-of-door meeting by the Village Improvement Society on Memorial Day.

I. W. Faunce commenced on the cellar for a new house on Arlington street this week.

The cantata of the "Flower Queen" is to be given at the Methodist Church, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, May 13 and 14.

There was but a small attendance at the meeting of the Wollaston Literary Society on Wednesday evening, at Rev. F. E. Dewhurst's, and the subject was postponed to the next meeting.

Atlantic News.

The Selectmen adopted the suggestion of your correspondent in the PATRIOT last week; and Atlantic will be represented on the Board of Engineers of the Fire Department this year by Fred Jenkins.

Mr. E. M. Pope has returned from his business trip abroad. He has been to Paris the last fourteen months in the interests of the Tubular Rivet Company of Wollaston.

The tides were very high on Wednesday.

Matthew Henderson's house has been painted this week, Special Police Officer Glover doing the job. He says the new color is orange and the trimmings are a maroon.

The fair of the Ladies' Benevolent Society in aid of the new Congregational Chapel will take place next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and evenings, the doors being open from three to half-past ten. A supper and entertainment will be provided each evening. The ladies of the village have been actively engaged for a month or more in making fancy articles, and there will be a large array. A good time may be expected. Fuller particulars in our advertising columns.

Rev. F. L. Bristol, the new pastor of the Congregational Society, is expected next week. He comes from East Tawas, Michigan. His society there adopted unanimously a set of resolutions, from which we copy the following:

"We reluctantly accept our pastor's resignation; and we would recommend him to any people among whom he may in the future dwell, as an earnest, faithful minister of the Gospel of Christ."

Peter Martin, who resides on Walnut street, while at work on the highways at Wollaston on Thursday morning, was taken with hemorrhage. He was attended by Dr. Eastman, and afterwards conveyed to his home.

ACQUITTED. E. J. Costello of Neponset, who was brought before the District Court in Quincy some months since on complaint of Officer Faxon, on two indictments and found guilty, appealed to the Superior Court, and his cases were disposed of last week. He was acquitted, not because there was no evidence of his selling intoxicating liquors, but we learn from some technicality in the law.

☞ Auctioneer Lombard has a large sale of desirable property in Weymouth next Friday. The property is centrally located and offers many fine attractions. It fronts on Commercial, Webb and Broad streets and comprises about forty acres of highly cultivated land and is to be sold in houselots. A large house with all the modern improvements is on the estate. Read advertisement.

West Quincy.

The citizens of West Quincy interested in tree planting and rural improvement in that section of the town, will meet in Forrester Hall, on Wednesday evening at half past seven o'clock.

William B. Barry has been appointed a special police for duty at and around the St. Mary's Church.

Delegations were present from Quincy, Quincy Point, Wollaston, East Milton and elsewhere at the regular meeting of America Division, S. of T., on Monday evening, and crowded the hall. The entertainment, consisting of the farce, "We're All Teetotalers," and readings were much enjoyed.

Sam Lucas Concert Company did not put in an appearance Wednesday evening as advertised, and those who braved the weather were greatly disappointed.

C. T. Cole, formerly of West Quincy, is here on a visit.

Crowded houses greeted the performance of "Kathleen Mavoureen" by the St. Mary's C. T. A. Society on both Thursday and Friday evenings of last week. It was a very satisfactory entertainment, and the actors, who of course were amateurs, did finely. We learn that sixty to seventy dollars were netted, and that arrangements are being made to reproduce the play at Rockland.

Last Sunday a clarinet, in addition to the organ, furnished instrumental music at the M. E. Church. We learn its use will be continued each Sunday.

Antine Beaulieu has started a new house off Copeland street.

D. J. McLean is building a house for John Evans on Town Hill.

Special Town Meeting.

NORFOLK, ss. To either of the Constables of the Town of Quincy, in said County, - - Greeting:

In the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, you are hereby required to notify and warn the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified to vote in town affairs, to meet at the Town Hall, in said Quincy, on at half-past Seven o'clock P. M., to act upon the following articles, viz.:

TUESDAY, May 5th, 1885,

ART. 1. To choose a Moderator.

ART. 2. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to sprinkle Washington street, from the Point bridge to Hancock street, and Hancock street from its junction with Granite street to Neponset bridge, and appropriate money therefor.

ART. 3. To see if the town will widen Copeland street.

ART. 4. To see if the town will accept the Betterment Act. Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 of Chap. 51, Public Statutes.

ART. 5. To see if the town will appropriate five hundred dollars for the use of the Board of Health.

ART. 6 To see if the town will take steps to enclose with rounded granite curbing the small waste places at the intersections of streets, fill the same with loam and plant to grass, and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 7. To see if the town will make level with the enclosing streets, properly curb, and plant to grass the lot of land bounded by School, Pleasant and Fort streets, and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 8. To see if the town will enclose with stone curbing a circular plot of ground at the junction of Elm and Washington streets; place the lamp post with names of streets on lights of lantern in the centre, and appropriate money for the same.

Hereof fail not, but make return of this warrant with your doings thereon, unto the Town Clerk, on or before the day appointed for said meeting.

Given under our hands at Quincy, this twenty-fifth day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

GEORGE H. FIELD,
ELIAS A. PERKINS,
CHRISTOPHER A. SPEAR,
} Selectmen of Quincy.

A true copy,—ATTEST:
GEORGE H. LOCKE,
Constable of Quincy.

NORFOLK, ss. QUINCY, April 25, 1885.

Pursuant to the foregoing Warrant, I hereby notify and warn the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified as therein expressed, to meet at the time and place, and for the purposes therein named.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE Assessors of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4 1-2 o'clock P. M. and from May 26th until June 2d, every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sections 14, 15 and 16, of Chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Returns of Property held for Literary, Benevolent, Charitable or Scientific Purposes.

[Chap. 217, Acts 1882.]

"All persons and corporations are required to bring in to the assessors, not later than the first day of July, 1885, true lists of all real and personal estate held by such persons and corporations respectively for literary, benevolent, charitable or scientific purposes on the first day of May, 1885, together with statements of the amounts of all receipts and expenditures by such persons or corporations for said purposes during the year next preceding said first day of May, 1885, such lists and statements to be in such detail as may be required by the TAX COMMISSIONER." Blank forms for the above returns can be had of the assessors.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice, he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the assessors at their office, on or before the 2d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

The Twenty-Four Hour Race.

A new attraction for Quincy was the twenty-four hour race on rollers, at the Coliseum, which commenced on Tuesday evening at 9.27. Eight entries had been advertised, and the following seven put in an appearance, taking numbers in the order given: J. W. Snowden, of East Boston; John O'Melia, of South Boston; James Turner, of Boston; Fred W. White, of Chelsea; E. L. Maddocks, of Boston; Essex (Quincy's unknown), and Daniel Sexton of Boston.

Four or five hundred persons witnessed the start, and most of them staid in the building until midnight. Snowden took the lead and was followed closely in the following order by White, O'Melia, Turner, Sexton, Maddocks and Essex. White took the lead on the second mile and Sexton on the fifth. Until this time the contestants followed each other in close order, with the possible exception of Essex who lost a lap or two. On the fifth mile a lively spurt commenced, Snowden taking the lead and forging ahead until he had several laps the lead. His nearest competitor was Sexton, and following him was Maddocks and White. Essex withdrew after completing 7 miles, 9 laps. White retired a few minutes on the tenth lap of the twelfth mile, and when he returned he gained rapidly some of the laps he had lost, and from that moment became the favorite of the house, although not in the van.

At the end of the first hour Snowden had just completed fifteen miles, O'Melia, Turner, Maddocks and Sexton fourteen each and White thirteen. O'Melia withdrew before eleven o'clock with thirty miles and ten laps to his credit. About one o'clock Sexton also withdrew having completed forty-nine miles, nine laps.

At twelve o'clock the spectators with the exception of about fifty went to their homes, but the men continued on, Snowden increasing his lead, White and Maddocks keeping close together and Turner by frequent rest was left in the rear.

The score at nine A. M. was Snowden 158 miles, 14 laps; White 153 miles, 7 laps; Maddocks 153 miles, 14 laps, and Turner 123 miles, 11 laps.

At twelve o'clock the score was Snowden 196 miles, 14 laps; White 190 miles, 11 laps; Maddocks 189 miles; Turner 150 miles, 2 laps. From this time the relative position of the men was the same to the finish, although White increased the distance between himself and Maddocks, and reduced the lead of Snowden. Turner was frequently off the track.

The audience during the afternoon numbered two or three hundred, but the men being all very tired there were only occasional spurts. At five o'clock all the racers left the track at once, having agreed among themselves to take a two hours' rest. The score at that time was Snowden 248 miles, 10 laps; White 246 miles, 4 laps; Maddocks 241 miles, Turner 190 miles, 12 laps.

At seven o'clock the contestants returned not much rested however. Snowden, White and Turner kept along at about the same pace, Maddocks losing several laps.

At eight o'clock the audience had swelled to about 800 and the score was: Snowden 261 miles, 6 laps; White 258 miles, 10 laps: Maddocks 253 miles, 8 laps and Turner 203 miles, 13 laps.

The racers continued along pretty close together, with hardly any change for the next half hour. Maddocks made a specialty of his 260th mile and accomplished it in four minutes, thirty seconds, and after one more lap he withdrew; White followed in a few moments, and then Snowden and Turner at 8.35 and the grand total was:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Snowden, | 268 miles, | 2 laps. | |
| White, | 265 | " | 5 " |
| Maddocks, | 268 | " | 1 " |
| Turner, | 210 | " | 14 " |

" 29, Samosets at Quincy.
" 29, Neponsets at East Weymouth.

To defray the expenses of the clubs a hat will be passed around at the games, and it is hoped the audiences in this town will contribute generously that the local team may not lack for funds. Encourage them and they will work hard and probably win the championship.

Among the Yachts.

May has arrived and the regatta season is but a few weeks distant. The Quincy Yacht Club will doubtless be more flourishing this summer than for the past few years. Many of the new officers are energetic young men, who love the sport, and they will try and make it interesting for others.

The regatta committee have held one or two meeting lately, but have not as yet decided on the dates or courses. We understand it is their wish to lay out courses which will be in sight of the Quincy shore, so that people there may witness the races. The trouble the previous seasons has been that the boats often go out of sight to the naked eye. The courses should be brought nearer the shore, even if it is necessary to go over them twice to make a satisfactory distance. There is also a talk of increasing the amount of the prizes, that the races may be more of an object to yachtsmen.

A. B. Lelois is very busy at his wharf at the foot of River street, in repairing, altering and launching boats that have been placed in his charge. He has already put about a dozen into the water.

Th Vesta, owned by Shaw & Tilton, has been painted and launched. Her spars have been scraped, and she will soon be ready for sea.

The Glodys, belonging to Captain Wentworth of Stoughton, is being overhauled. Her cabin has been raised, and a new sail put on.

James H. Slade's yacht, the Maise, has been painted and launched. She is to have a new sail and an iron keel of 700 pounds.

The Spray, Elite, Josephine, Gleam, Ruby and Zephyr are still in winter quarters.

The Julia, Captain Hillard's, has been painted and launched.

James McFarland has had the Pet repainted a maroon color, with a gilt stripe around her.

Vice Commodore Sheen has had the Menalie repainted, and she is in the water.

The Ripple, owned by William Hodgkinson, was launched Tuesday. She has been repainted.

Crane & Bumpus' new yacht is receiving the finishing touches.

The Undine is for sale.

George Monk and E. R. Wheble have launched their boats, and are fitting them up.

A Wicked Deed.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

On the last issue of your paper it was reported that the dog owned by me had bitten a daughter of Mr. John Curtin, and was subsequently poisoned.

Will you allow me to say by the statement of those who saw Mr. Curtin's daughter teasing the dog while he was watching a loaded team, and by other evidence, that the dog did not bite her.

He was a most affectionate dog, had been brought up from a small pup almost as one of the family, and was greatly loved by all who knew him. Many hearts were touched when it was learned that he had been poisoned, as one gentleman in the place said, "he will be missed as much as if a child had died." One girl at Neponset, when it was told her, cried nearly all day, and the next morning her mother heard her praying that the Lord might let poor Carlo live again.

As to the poisoning, the matter is left with an officer of the Commonwealth and the District Attorney, but for lack of sufficient evidence the perpetrator of the crime has not yet been brought to justice. J. R.

Copeland Street.

DEAR PATRIOT: It is very evident that the "item man" from West Quincy, did not have much occasion to come down to the village during the winter. If he travelled over Copeland street, he need not ask information on the subject. That portion of the road on both sides of the ferry, wants to be made wider, and the ferry itself should be filled up, so that the item man need not go round by Milton to get down town. That promontory near Cemetery street should be removed, and a decent sidewalk made on one side of the street, until the town can afford to build up both sides.

Copeland street is one of the main thoroughfares of the town, and should be kept in good repair. If the money which was appropriated last year, and returned to the treasury unexpended, was spent on Copeland street, it would go a great way in improving the condition of the street. But West Quincy, is not Wollaston; very few if any, of its citizens, sit in the intellectual corner in the Town Hall, nor do they talk so loud or so long as some other of our fellow citizens, consequently their interests are in great degree neglected. O. P. Q.

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE. Puritan Lodge of Braintree observed the sixty-sixth anniversary of the order, by a complimentary entertainment and dance at the Town Hall in that town last week Friday. The Columbia Dramatic Club presented the popular drama, "Among the Breakers," and dancing followed until two o'clock, being interrupted only for a supper, which was furnished by W. A. Kaue. B. P. Byder was chairman of the committee of arrangements, E. F. Watkins of the reception committee, and the floor was under the direction of F. F. Tupper and efficient aids. It was an enjoyable occasion.

— The Braintree school committee has engaged for a superintendent of schools Mr. J. T. Clarke, now of Walpole, N. H. He graduated at Dartmouth College and Phillips Exeter Academy, and has been engaged in educational work for more than twenty years.

Milton Gleanings.

Is your dog licensed?

T. L. Pearce has repainted his house, store and barn.

Robert, a son of James Mitchell, is very sick with pneumonia.

There will be no services at the Congregational church to-morrow.

The regular monthly meeting of the School Committee will be held Monday afternoon.

The village mourns the loss of Mrs. H. E. Sheldon, who died on Thursday evening of last week.

The Granite Hook and Ladder Company held a special meeting Thursday evening, and the Hydrant Engine Co., last evening.

Mrs. Abigail Wellington, who we mentioned last week as being very sick, died on Saturday last.

The reading room over Josiah Babcock's store is very attractive, light, airy and well kept, and with an abundance of choice reading. Miss Emerson is in charge.

But little business was transacted at the adjourned parish meeting of the Congregational society Monday evening; the meeting being unable to find a committee who would serve. Adjourned to next Monday evening.

Elliot Perkins, son of E. C. Perkins of Milton Hill, met with a painful and fatal accident Tuesday afternoon, by being thrown from a carriage, a short distance from his home. He had one or two companions in with him, but they escaped unhurt. He was a lad of thirteen or fourteen years of age. The accident happened we are told, by coming in contact with a telephone pole, the reins having become crossed, and the pony unmanageable. He struck on his head, and lingered three or four hours after.

Letter from New York City.

NEW YORK, APRIL 29, 1885.

General Grant's sixty-third birthday was celebrated last Monday by the family in a quiet way. The General received a large number of gifts; also flowers, cards and telegrams. The General's health has improved greatly during the past few days, and he is looking forward hopefully to the future. Rev. Dr. Newman and wife presented General Grant with a handsome Bible, elegantly mounted with gold clasps. One other gift, highly prized, was a large cross made of Mayflowers, and sent from Plymouth, Mass., by Collingwood Post, G. A. R.

The firm of H. Wallach's Sons employ a large number of sewing girls to make white shirts. Recently a reduction of six per cent. in the prices paid for the work was made, the result of which is that the entire force has quit work, and organized a Sewing Girls' Protective Union. H. Wallach's Sons remain firm in their determination not to restore the former wages, although this is the third reduction within a short time.

The heaviest mackerel haul that has been known here for years was brought in on Monday last. It is estimated that there were 14,000,000 fish captured by 93 fishing boats. This big catch of mackerel reduced the prices of other fish enormously, while the mackerel sold at very low prices, being in fact given away before noon. The entire lot was caught about 100 miles off Barnegat, and all within 24 hours.

Poor working women needing rest and recreation can find both at the Seaside Sanitarium at Rockaway Beach. The price of weekly board is from three to five dollars for adults and two dollars for children. This includes car fare to and from the sea shore, bathing, board and lodging from Monday morning to Saturday night. Tickets will be ready May 1st.

Last Tuesday evening over two hundred and fifty leading men assembled at Delmonico's to do honor to Minister George H. Pendleton. Representatives of all parties were present, and George William Curtis presided. Speeches were made by Mr. Pendleton, William M. Evarts, Wayne MacVeagh, and Ex-Congressman Dorsheimer. W. L. M.

Odd Fellows Celebrate.

It was a gala day for the encampment branch of Odd Fellows at Brockton last Saturday, when Nemasket Encampment of that city, assisted by encampments from Boston, New Bedford, Fall River, Taunton and East Weymouth, participated in a parade and banquet, and in the evening witnessed the Nemo minstrels of the Boston Encampment at the City Theatre. Charles B. Newton of Quincy, Grand Patriarch of Massachusetts, and several of the Grand Officers graced the occasion. Col. J. J. Whipple was president of the day, and he had arranged all the details to the perfect satisfaction of all. There were nearly 500 men in line, and the attractive regalias and military precision made a beautiful sight. The day was one of the very best, the streets had been sprinkled, and the route was not long. Several business places and residences were decorated with Odd Fellows' emblems and flags and bunting, and the whole city entered into the spirit of the occasion. The banquet was all that could be asked for, the menu presenting many tempting dishes. Speeches followed the dinner. The entertainment by the Nemo minstrels was worthy of professionals. A grand good time.

OBSTRUCTION ON THE TRACK. On Thursday evening a sleeper was laid across the outward track of the Old Colony Railroad, a short distance north of the Presidents bridge, with the evident intention of wrecking the ten o'clock train from Boston. The engine struck the sleeper and carried it along some distance until the train could be stopped, and then it was found to be so tightly wedged in that an axe was required to remove it. The obstruction was not noticed by the inward train which had passed but a few moments before, and was probably put on after it passed. This is twice within a week that the Old Colony has had serious trouble near this bridge, and it is hoped the perpetrators of the crimes will be brought to justice, that those who are obliged to travel may do so in safety and without fear.

Births.

In Quincy, April 20th, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Babcock.

April 15th, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Veazie.

April 24th, a son to Mr. Geo. F., and Mrs. Rachel Curtis.

Marringes.

In Danvers, April 29th, by Rev. E. B. Willson of Salem, Mr. Fred C. Merrill, of Quincy, to Miss Hattie H. Summers, of Danvers.

In Neponset, April 28th, by Rev. Henry W. Wonderu, Mr. Sidney F. Willard, of Neponset, to Miss Emily S. Wight, of Quincy.

Our friends will please accept our best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity.

Deaths.

In Quincy April 25th, Mrs. Bridget, widow of the late William Dooner, aged 73 years.

April 26th, Mr. Samuel Sherman, aged 83 years.

April 30th, Mr. Patrick Haley, aged 78 years and 3 months.

April 30th, Jeannie, daughter of Mr. Alexander and Mrs. Agnes Edwards, aged 1 year and 10 months.

April 30th, Mr. Angelo Comi, aged 35 years.

In Boston, April 22d, Mrs. Eliza D. Whiting, daughter of Mr. James Bradford, formerly of Quincy, aged 33 years.

In East Milton, April 23d, Mrs. Ella F., wife of Mr. Henry E. Sheldon, aged 32 years, 3 months and 11 days.

April 25th, Mrs. Abigail, widow of the late Jonathan F. Wellington, aged 83 years, 10 months and 10 days.

Special Notices.

NOTICE. There will be a meeting of L. A. 2427, Knights of Labor, at G. A. R. Hall, Dinegan's Block, at 7.30 o'clock, every Monday evening, commencing March 16, 1885, until further notice. Per order of L. A.
Quincy, March 14. tf

SUNFLOWER CONCERT. A concert was given at the Congregational Chapel, on Thursday evening, which from the flowery nature of its name drew out a large crowd. The entertainment consisted of instrumental and vocal music and a supper, the latter being served in good style previous to the concert. The style of singing was quite novel. A large white curtain with Oscar's favorite flowers painted on it was stretched across the stage; the brown centre of the flowers was cut out, and through this hole the faces of the singers peered. This was quite a new feature and to Mrs. A. H. Gilson belongs the credit of introducing it. It was certainly well got up and was amusing as well as entertaining.

DOG LICENSES.

The Town Clerk hereby calls attention to the law in relation to the licensing of dogs, and notifies all parties concerned to take heed to its requirments. Licenses are now ready for delivery.

SEC. 80. Every owner or keeper of a dog of three months old or over, shall annually, on or before the 30th day of April, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed, for one year from the ensuing May, in the office of the Clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept.

SEC. 81. A person becoming the owner or keeper of a dog after the first of May, not duly licensed, shall cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed, as provided in the preceding section.

SEC. 82. The fee for every license shall be two dollars for a male dog, and five dollars for a female dog.—Chap. 102, Pub. Statutes.

REGULATIONS
OF THE
Board of Health
OF THE
TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons, Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." E. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

KEEP IT PURE,

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their nature. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of diseases subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.,

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best remedy to do this, your "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended to my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY" which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am cure of that. Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW FARRELL.

24 Adams Street.

In all cases when a consultation is deemed desirable,

Address:—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. But, if you have not done so, adopt "FAVORITE REMEDY" as a household friend.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

The Silver Lining.

There's never a day so sunny
But a little cloud appears;
There's never a life so happy
But has had its time of tears;
Yet the sun shines out the brighter,
When the stormy tempest clears.

There's never a garden growing
With roses in every plot;
There's never a heart so hardened
But it has one tender spot;
We have only to prune the border
To find the forget-me-not.

There's never a cup so pleasant
But has the bitter with the sweet
There's never a path so rugged
That bears not the prints of feet;
And we have a helper promised
For the trials we may meet.

There's never a sun that rises
But we know 'twill set at night;
The tints that gleam in the morning
At evening are just as bright;
And the hour that is the sweetest
Is between the dark and light.

There's never a dream that's happy
But the waking makes us sad;
There's never a dream of sorrow
But the waking makes us glad;
We shall look some day with wonder
At the troubles we have had.

Farm and Garden.

Setting out Currant Bushes.

The most important point in setting out currant bushes is to set them out. Set them where you can cultivate on each side of them, and not against the fence or wall. As often treated, currants are a nuisance. The bushes soon become stunted and covered with moss, the caterpillars destroy the leaves, and what few currants we get are small, unripe and nearly worthless. Why should they be otherwise? They are never manured, never cultivated or hoed, rarely pruned, and no efforts are made to destroy the caterpillars until half the leaves are stripped from the branches. If any of our readers have such bushes, the first thing to do is to set out new ones on new land. Let the old ones remain until the new ones come into bearing, and in the meantime give the old ones a dressing of manure, cultivate or fork and hoe the ground around them and keep down the weeds, afterwards cut out all dead branches and all that are so far gone as to be hopeless. As a field crop, when you have access to a railroad station or near market, and can secure pickers, currants can be grown with considerable profit. But you must plant on rich land, or make it rich with manure and keep the soil all through the growing season well cultivated and free from weeds. Were we about to set out several acres of currants, we should set them out in rows not less than six feet apart, and three feet apart in the rows. This would give twenty-four hundred and twenty bushes per acre. Seven or eight feet apart would be better. The most popular red variety is the Cherry. This is owing to its large size and handsome appearance. But with us it is not as productive as the common Red Dutch, or Victoria. The Versailles is also a productive and good currant of large size. Size, however, is largely a question of rich land, good cultivation and judicious pruning.—American Agriculturist for April.

GOOD ROADS. Machines for road work are being offered for use which not only give better roads than the old methods, but do the work at a great saving of time, labor and money. There are very few towns in New England that will not sooner or later own one or more of these machines. True, there are some men who prefer to work out their highway tax in the old way rather than pay a small amount and see a machine make a mile or two of good road every day. Roads thoroughly made or repaired with these modern road graders are not only better than when worked with the plough, shovel, etc., but remain good very much longer. —Massachusetts Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

"Will the angels come down for me with a chariot and horses when I die?" asked a little boy of his Sunday school teacher.

"I guess so, if you are a good boy," said the teacher. The little fellow's eyes sparkled with anticipation as he eagerly exclaimed:

"And, Oh! do you think they'll let me sit on the front seat and drive."

The following is told of a young gentleman who was passing an examination in physics. He was asked: "What planets were known to the ancients?" He responded:

"Well, sir, there were Venus and Jupiter, and"—after a pause—"I think the Earth, but I am not quite certain."

"Pat, are there any prairies in Ireland like we have in Illinois?"

"To be sure. Didn't yez iver hear of Tipperary?"

Small boy—Mamma I wish I had the moon.

Mamma—Why what would you do with it?

Small boy (who has just demolished a toy balloon)—Oh, I'd blow it up and bust it.

"Come along with me and have a fine time," remarked a policeman to a man he arrested.

"I'm afraid you are trying to cell me," replied the prisoner.

"If you don't keep out of this yard you'll catch it," said a woman to a boy in West Quincy.

"All right," answered the gamin, "I wouldn't have come in if I'd known your folks had it."

"Ah! you flatter me," lisped a dude to a pretty girl with whom he was conversing.

"No, I don't," was the reply. "You couldn't be any flatter than you are."

Conundrums.

Why is a boy doing his sums like a serpent erect? He is an adder up.

What is that which is the centre of joy and the principal mover of sorrow? The letter O.

If a little thin man were to dress himself in a tall, fat man's clothes, what two cities of France would he resemble? Toulon, and Toulouse (too long and too loose.)

Why are the poker, tongs, and shovel, like titles of nobility? They belong to the grate (great).

IN THE VICINITY.

—Cohasset has purchased a new road machine.

—Stoughton expects to have a new skating rink soon.

—Walpole is to have a new Methodist Church. Work has been commenced.

—Hon. Samuel B. Noyes of Canton entered his 69th year on the 9th of April.

—Milford has a business men's association with a membership of over one hundred.

—The superintendent of the Weymouth schools has established a visitor's day.

—The editor of the South Shore Herald, has been presented with a nosegay of daffodils.

—An old lady in Scituate Centre has an old Latin grammar which bears the date of 1731.

—Dedham's selectmen have prohibited the posting of notices on shade trees on town ways.

—Rev. F. A. Walch of Tufts College preached in the Universalist Church in Weymouth last Sunday.

—Mr. S. B. Pratt, editor of the Marlboro Mirror, has thus early secured his summer residence at Scituate.

—Norwood has voted to construct water works immediately, the water to be taken from Buckminster pond.

—The trustees of the Hingham Public Library now allow teachers in the public schools to take out ten books at a time.

—Dedham became a temperance town yesterday; licenses having expired, and "no" being the vote of the town.

—A resident of East Weymouth recently put four hundred and fifty eggs in his incubator and batched out twenty-five chickens.

—The Count Prince Magrie and wife, Mrs. Tom Thumb, are to spend three weeks in Middleboro. They are to sail May 20th for Europe.

—Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Webb of Dorchester Lower Mills, celebrated in a pleasant manner their golden wedding last Monday evening.

—The Middlesex Townsman of Arlington is one of the neatest appearing newspapers, typographically speaking, among our exchanges.

—Property owners in Dorchester, Roxbury and West Roxbury have evinced a decided opposition to being taxed for betterments on account of the new West Roxbury park.

—The Boston Water Gas Company have purchased a tract of land on the "Cow Pasture," Dorchester, running down to the pumping station, and propose to build in a few days.

—Mr. Warren Veazie sustained a very heavy loss by the recent burning of his sash and blind factory. He has compromised with his creditors and will continue his business at Harrison Square.

—There's nothing small about the town of Brookline. The people there want things in proper shape, and are ready to apply the injunction that "those who dance must pay the fiddler." The appropriations so far this year aggregate over $367,000.

—Quite a number of Boston ministers have severely denounced skating-rinks. It seems to be the prevailing opinion throughout the country that very few persons of good character are frequenters of these dubious places of amusement.

Household Receipts.

LEMON RICE PUDDING. To two-thirds of a cup of rice, boiled and cooled, add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs, salt, a teaspoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and the grated rind of two lemons, with milk enough to make very moist. Bake forty-five minutes. Use whites of eggs and juice of lemons for frosting, and brown.

PLUM CAKES. Take one cup of butter, two cups of brown sugar, yolks of three eggs, white of two eggs, half a cup of milk, half a cup of dark molasses, half a teaspoonful of soda, half pound raisins, stoned and chopped, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half pound currants, two tablespoonfuls of any fruit syrup, four cups flour, two teaspoonfuls mixed spices. If not dark enough, add a little melted chocolate. Bake in small tins, and frost part of them with the remaining white of egg.

INDIAN PUDDING. Pour over 4 tablespoonfuls (heaped) Indian meal, 1 quart boiling milk. When cool add 1 tablespoonful butter, 1 cup molasses, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoonful soda, 1 tablespoonful ginger, and cinnamon, also a little clove. Bake 3-4 of an hour.

To make meat pie, slice roast meat in thin slices, and put in a saucepan with a little water, and the gravy left over. Add a little butter, pepper and salt, and cook slowly till tender. Slice in a few raw potatoes, cover and cook till soft. Line a deep dish with nice crust, as for a chicken pie, pour in your meat and potatoes, bake just long enough to cook the pastry, and serve. Leave an opening in the top for the steam to escape.

Does Alcohol Impart Heat?

During the first flush after drinking wine, for example, a sense of warmth is felt. This is due to the tides of warm blood that are being sent to the surface of the body, owing to the "vascular enlargement" and the rapid pumping of the heart. There is, however no fresh heat developed. On the contrary, the bringing of the blood to the surface, causes it to cool faster, reaction sets in a chilliness is experienced as one becomes sober, and a delicate thermometer placed under the tongue of the inebriate may show a fall of even two degrees below the standard temperature of the body. Several hours are required to restore the usual heat. It naturally follows that, contrary to the accepted opinion, liquor does not fortify against cold. The experience of travellers at the North coincides with that of Dr. Hayes, the Arctic explorer, who says: "While fat is absolutely essential to the inhabitants and travellers in Arctic countries, alcohol is in almost any shape, not only completely useless, but positively injurious. I have known strong able-bodied men, to become utterly incapable of resisting cold in consequence of the long continued use of alcoholic drink.

DOES ALCOHOL IMPART STRENGTH?

Experience shows that alcohol weakens the power of undergoing severe bodily exertion. Men who are in training for running, towing, and other contests where great strength are required, deny themselves all liquors, even when they are ordinarily accustomed to their use.

Miscellany.

PERSONAL. The following interesting article concerning our townsman, we copy from the Sunday Budget of April 5th:

Mr. Peter Butler, whose name is mentioned in connection with the Boston collectorship, is intimately known to a majority of our older business men. He served his time in the once well-known hardware house of Proctor, Palmer & Peel, in Merchants Row, and was subsequently a partner with Deacon Proctor, the firm being Proctor & Butler, at 89 State street. He married a daughter of Mr. Proctor. He was afterwards at the head of those prominent houses, Butler, Son & Co. and Butler, Johnson & Co. They were burned out in the great fire of 1872 and lost immensely by the failure of the insurance companies to meet their losses. Mr. Butler was a Webster Whig, and a great admirer of the "godlike" Daniel. He was also very intimate with Mr. Peter Harvey, Mr. Webster's sincere admirer and constant friend. During the last sickness of the great statesman he gave Mr. Harvey as a keepsake the splendid gold watch and chain presented him by Mr. Moses H. Grinnell and other New York merchants some forty years ago. Mr. Harvey, in his last sickness, presented Mr. Butler with the same keepsake, which he daily wears.

☞ The true spirit of honesty was shown by an employe of one of our granite firms a few days ago. He had received his pay in an envelope, and after leaving the office had counted it over, when he ascertained that he had received seventy-five dollars too much. He afterwards returned it to the clerk. Such a man is worthy of his employer's confidence and respect.

OUT OF DEBT. San Jose is the only city in California with a population exceeding 10,000 that is not in debt. There are but five such in the United States.—Exchange.

Quincy is not a city although it has a population of over 12,000; yet it has practically no debt, as the town has more money due, than what it owes.

☞ Lady Burdette-Coutts gave to two hundred and sixty-two persons holiday gifts of joints of beef, tea, sugars, raisins, spices and flour. As the Baroness made a tour of the market where the gifts were being distributed, the sixty or seventy young women employed there sang hymns in her honor.

☞ The Old Colony management have completed arrangements for excursions and other trips along the line of its connections, for the benefit of its patrons.

LOBSTERS. The decrease of lobsters is a lamentable fact. Smaller in size than formerly, they are found only in deep water, and at the present rate of extinction, it is prophesied that in a short time they will be curiosities found only in museums.

Chicago's water works have a pumping capacity of 150,000,000 gallons each day.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BUCHER writes from Kirby, O., Jan 3, 1885: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1885: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to minstrels, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

INJURIOUS TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

I have this day made a chemical examination of samples of baking powder purchased by me in the open market and marked CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER, and ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

These powders contain:

Cleveland's.
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Flour

Royal.
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Carbonate of Ammonia
Tartaric Acid
Starch

The relative amount of pure Carbonic Acid Gas produced by 10 grams of each of these powders is as follows:

Cleveland's, 658 cubic centimetres.
Royal, 577 cubic centimetres.

In view of these facts I regard Cleveland's as superior to the Royal because:

I. CLEVELAND'S contains only pure and unobjectionable materials, while the ROYAL contains Ammonia, a drug derived from disgusting sources, powerful in its action upon the system. The adulteration of baking powder with Ammonia is in my opinion an injury to the public health. It deserves the severest condemnation, and should be brought to the attention of physicians and boards of health throughout the country.

II. The quantity of pure Carbonic Acid Gas yielded by CLEVELAND'S is greater than that produced under like conditions by the ROYAL.

CLEVELAND'S BAKING POWDER being pure and free from Ammonia, Lime, Alum, Terra Alba, or any adulteration whatever, and having great leavening power, I do not hesitate to recommend as worthy of public confidence for producing light, digestible, and wholesome bread.

The Quincy Granite Co.,

F. J. FULLER, PROP.,

West Quincy, Mass.

ONE of the oldest and most reliable firms in New England, would respectfully inform the public that they are better than ever prepared to furnish the finest quality of Granite work that can be produced. Our facilities are such that we can furnish all work in this line at the lowest prices. Being the entire owner of one of the oldest Dark Blue Granite Quarries in Quincy, Mass., our Quarry has a reputation far above any other of its kind, and the stone being procured from so great a depth (having been worked down about one hundred and fifty feet) that we obtain a richness and purity of color that cannot be excelled. We guarantee that this stock will retain its rich color and polish longer than any other Dark Blue granite that is now produced. We have also control of a superior White Granite Quarry in New England, and with our constantly improving machinery, are doing the best quality of work.

All our stock is carefully selected from the quarries, and as the most skilled workmen are employed to oversee the work, we are willing to guarantee entire satisfaction in all cases before the work is accepted. Persons wishing to purchase any Granite Memorial Work, such as will find it decidedly in their interest to communicate with us for any information desired, as we keep on hand a large supply of designs, which we will furnish for the inspection of our patrons.

Parties can order work of us at much less expense than of dealers in their own vicinity, many whom buy their stock and work of us. We will gladly answer all communications and submit designs if required, with confidence that our prices and workmanship will secure for us an extended patronage.

We make a specialty of all kinds of

and can supply any demand at short notice. Also Polished Columns of all sizes for building and other architectural purposes.

We furnish large quantities of Granite Pavements, and are prepared to contract with cities or corporations to supply the same or to construct and pave streets.

Thankful for the liberal patronage which we have received during the last ten years, we expect a continuance of the same and respectfully solicit your orders.

ONLY while in health, it is said, the Chinese pay their physicians. When sickness begins the pay stops. Whether true or not, that is not a bad idea. It rests on the principle that prevention is very much better than cure, and that is the principle in following out which modern medical science has won its most brilliant results. Not much progress has been made in the methods of cure. To be sure the amulets, the philters and the elixirs of superstition have been banished, but the total effect of accepted drugs is as yet unknown. Pain has been subdued marvellously, but the diagnosis of the source of it is not yet perfect. In the knowledge of how to prevent diseases, however, the achievements are beyond praise. The chances for life have been doubled by them. Now it is precisely in accordance with this principle that our Board of Health was established. It is a wise enterprise, unselfishly planned, and should be cordially supported. It is to be feared, however, that some do not value as highly as they ought the services of such a board. Although the special town meeting by an overwhelming majority appropriated the five hundred dollars asked for by its members, yet it was apparent that this was done, not from an intelligent understanding of the actual situation, but out of regard for the high character and abilities of the men who compose the board. A fair appreciation of the laws and conditions of health is still rare among the people at large. The germs of disease, too minute to be seen, are not dreaded. Men will run from a mad dog, but in the bliss of ignorance they will live with the seeds of typhoid and diphtheria which are just as perilous. To any one who has made a study of sanitary matters the amount of ignorance displayed in regard to them must be quite appalling. So it may be considered a fortunate thing that confidence in fellow citizens carried a measure the wisdom of which could not be generally appreciated.

IN the debate which preceded the vote which appropriated five hundred dollars for the Board of Health some good points were made. Mr. King made one when he said that any right-minded citizen would thank the board for pointing out to him sources of disease on his premises. Of course he would. Who would care to live in ignorance of such dangers? No greater benefit can be bestowed upon a man than to impart to him information that shall save wife and children and himself from sickness and even death. That is not meddling any more than it is meddling to arouse a man who has fallen asleep on the railroad track. Mr. C. A. Foster made another point when he showed that the board stood between tenants and their careless or rapacious landlords. Such a position is certainly often taken by boards of health. They are another of those instrumentalities through which an advancing civilization not only exercises wise care over all, but in an especial degree defends the weak. The latest scientific discoveries are sympathetically applied by them for the improvement of the conditions of life.

ONE of the evils attendant upon the aggregation of men in large masses, as in great cities, is the disregard of human life. Terrible illustrations of this were given last week in the collapse of the Beudenseik built-to-cheat tenement, and this week in the fall of the rickety workshop in Brooklyn. By the latter crime twenty persons were killed and many wounded. The only cure of such evils is in the growth of the sentiment of humanity which, in the first place, will not tolerate the erection or occupancy of such buildings, and which in the second place shall vindicate the dignity of human life by visiting severest penalties upon the wretches who for their own gain sacrifice the lives of their fellow-beings.

THE woman suffrage bill suffered its annual defeat in the House last Tuesday by a vote of 61 to 130. A cause which has been able to survive so many reverses must have some vitality in it. What a jolly time its adherents are having if, like Mark Tapley, they have a genius for "coming out strong" in the severest circumstances. The name of our one representative, Mr. Federhen, was not found among the "yeas."

MAY FESTIVAL. There was a large attendance of the young people at the May festival, given at the Town Hall last Saturday afternoon, by the Sunday School of the First Church. Several attractions were offered for amusement, and all entered heartily into the sport. Charles J. Upham of Boston, a well-known ventriloquist, added much to the entertainment, which mystified the young. His comical character, figures, with movable jaws, head, arms and feet, appeared remarkably lifelike. The bright and witty school boy and the elderly lady were true to nature. His imitations and local hits were appreciated. The May pole dance was participated in by sixteen young ladies dressed in white summer dresses, and with wreaths on their heads. Miss Mabel Hodges, as May Queen, filled the place with dignity. The queen's guards were Allie Claflin, Eugene Hultman, Eaton Pierce, Harry Foster and Willie Worster. The herald was Walter Loud. The young ladies who participated were Misses Helen Slade, Mabel Shaw, Birdie Lane, Lila Ordway, Bessie Pratt, Alice Hersey, Georgie Field, Mamie Worster, Marcia Dickey, Minnie Rodgers, Minnie Eaton, Lizzie Kittredge Florence Faxon, Ida Field, Clara Pitts and Lizzie Newcomb. The figures were not only well executed but were unique, having been originated by Madam Aman who had the dance in charge. The festivities were prolonged into the evening, when the May pole dance was repeated, and a musical genius from Boston produced music from anything that came within his reach. An opportunity was offered to those wishing to dance, music being furnished by Joshua Hanson's orchestra. Ice cream, refreshments, and novelties were offered for sale. The afternoon and evening were passed very enjoyably and will long be remembered by the children.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

$500 Appropriated for the Board of Health.

Indefinite Postponement the order of the Meeting.

Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock, when Town Clerk Gill called the meeting to order, it looked as though it was to be a slimly attended meeting, and many remarked on the folly of holding special meetings, but before eight o'clock the town hall was comfortably filled with nearly 500 voters. Their votes to indefinitely postpone six of the eight articles, however, was somewhat against special meetings.

On a motion of John H. Dee, Edwin W. Marsh, Esq., was chosen moderator.

ART. 2. To see if the town will authorize the Selectmen to sprinkle Washington street, from the Point bridge to Hancock street, and Hancock street from its junction with Granite street to Neponset bridge, and appropriate money therefor.

Dr. W. L. Faxon set the ball in motion by moving that the town do authorize the Selectmen to water the above streets and that $1500 be appropriated.

Henry H. Faxon inquired if the roads were not solely in charge of the Surveyors of Highways.

The Moderator thought they were.

Dr. Faxon sustained his motion, and by comparison with the cost of watering Washington street two years ago, showed that the appropriation he asked would be enough.

John Q. A. Field thought that the town could not appropriate money for the purpose desired, and moved to indefinitely postpone the article.

Benj. F. Curtis favored Mr. Field's motion. While he would like to see the streets watered, he thought it would be an entering wedge to large appropriations.

Dr. Faxon again favored his motion. Said the streets in question, the main thoroughfares to the South Shore, were a disgrace to the town. And the dust which arises must fill the lungs of men and horses and be exceedingly unhealthful.

Theophilus King, Jr., favored indefinite postponement of the article at this time for two reasons: One, that the article should have been brought to the attention of the annual meeting instead of a special, and the other that he did not think the town should pay the whole cost of watering any street.

Mr. Field's motion prevailed and article 2 was indefinitely postponed.

ART. 3. To see if the town will widen Copeland street.

John Q. A. Field did not see how the street could be widened without a report from the Selectmen.

George H. Field, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, explained the absence of the report. He said the petitioners did not give the board time to lay it out, according to law.

Benj. F. Curtis thought the excuse of the selectmen a poor one.

Henry H. Faxon moved to indefinitely postpone the article.

George Cahill opposed. He wanted the street laid out forty feet wide. It was the main thoroughfare from West Quincy to the Centre, and a good road was needed.

Mr. Faxon thought that the petitioners should have known what they wanted and gone to work lawfully.

George Cahill again argued in favor of widening.

J. Q. A. Field thought the preceding gentleman did not understand the article, for as he understood it, no legal action could be taken. He favored indefinite postponement.

H. H. Faxon explained why some people wanted Copeland street widened. It was to gobble up a narrow strip along said street which he owned, so as to open up the land in the rear.

George Cahill did not think Mr. Faxon owned the land desired. He said if the street was filled in on the side to the line it would be wide enough.

Mr. Faxon's motion to indefinitely postpone was put and carried.

ART. 4. To see if the town will accept the Betterment Act. Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 of Chap. 51, Public Statutes.

William G. A. Pattee moved to indefinitely postpone the article. It was a serious question, and one that should be brought before an annual meeting and not a special.

Henry H. Faxon also favored the motion to indefinitely postpone and it was put and prevailed.

ART. 5. To see if the town will appropriate five hundred dollars for the use of the Board of Health.

The excitement of the evening was upon this article.

Dr. J. A. Gordon, chairman of the Board of Health, spoke at length in favor of an appropriation. He said it was not to be devoted to paying the members of the board a salary, but simply to improve the sanitary condition of the town. He then told where money would be required; such as the publication of the rules and regulations, the pay of health officers, stationery, etc., and the printing of a health pamphlet. He moved an appropriation of $500.

Henry H. Faxon believed in having proper sanitary condition. He said that in many cases the Board of Health was a nuisance. Did not see the necessity of an appropriation. Said the Selectmen were empowered to borrow money for public health when required by an emergency. Did not wish to have it so that doctors when they could not cure a patient, could complain of the unhealthy condition of the well, get it disused and water of the Quincy Water Company introduced. He thought the Board of Health and the Water Company were mixed up too much together. He quoted from the report of the sanitary committee of Quincy in the Town Report of 1878, showing that as a general thing the water in the wells of Quincy was purer than the aqueduct water of Boston and other cities.

Dr. Gordon said that the Board of Health were not responsible for the complexion of the Board. He repudiated the charge that he used his authority for the purpose of benefiting the Water Company, of which he was a director. He said there were 1700 cases of diphtheria in this town during the last ten years, of which 236 were fatal. There were also 55 deaths from typhoid fever during the same time, and many others from like diseases caused by filth. He said the percentage of deaths in London and Boston had greatly decreased under improved sanitary conditions.

Theo. King, Jr., favored the appropriation. He did not know of any place where money could be invested where it would pay so large a percentage. He said the work of the Board of Health was disagreeable business for any man, and the members of the Board did not do the work for fun, but for the public good.

Charles A. Foster believed human life above price, and that we should not oppose the paltry appropriation of $500.

Henry H. Faxon again opposed the appropriation. The Board had already caused him unnecessary trouble, and he did not propose to be bulldozed by anyone.

J. Q. A. Field wanted $500 appropriated. He desired the Board of Health to move slowly, however, and not involve the town in law suits. He did not think the rules and regulations as printed could be enforced.

The motion to appropriate $500 was put and declared carried by the Moderator.

Henry H. Faxon doubted the vote and previous to the verification of the same, another debate took place.

Theo. King, Jr., spoke in favor. Thought the rules wise and applied only under circumstances.

J. Q. A. Field wanted to know if the Board of Health thought it could compel him to remove the manure from the cellar of his stable before June 1.

Mr. King interrupted him to inquire if he did not wish it removed by them.

Mr. Field answered "No!"

And Mr. King replied: "Smell it then!"

Dr. Gordon explained the action of the Board in relation to Mr. Faxon's property in the Square. He knew the sanitary conditions was bad, and it should be remedied. He had two patients there now.

Mr. Faxon was aroused by the remarks of the last gentleman, and did not hold back anything he wished to say. He said the complaint made was unwarranted.

The motion to appropriate $500 was decided by a hand vote by a very large majority in favor.

ART. 6 To see if the town will take steps to enclose with rounded granite curbing the small waste places at the intersections of streets, fill the same with loam and plant to grass, and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 7. To see if the town will make level with the enclosing streets, properly curb, and plant to grass the lot of land bounded by School, Pleasant and Fort streets, and appropriate money for the same.

ART. 8. To see if the town will enclose with stone curbing a circular plot of ground at the junction of Elm and Washington streets, place the lamp post with names of streets on lights of lantern in the centre, and appropriate money for the same.

On a motion of J. Q. A. Field each of the above articles were taken up separately and indefinitely postponed without debate, the meeting believing it illegal to make the appropriations.

At 9.10 the meeting dissolved.

Village Improvement Society.

The Quincy Village Improvement Society has set out to accomplish the work of a new year by trying to find officers who are as interested in the work as its founders were, and it is also trying to make a tangible return for money contributed. From the 7th of April to the 7th of May, $99 were sent in from annual dues, and many have promised to help pay for trees along the borders of their estates.

The committee for North Quincy is trying to put the corner, a wild and neglected one, near the entrance of Mr. Quincy's place, in good condition. Members of Mr. Quincy's family cooperate in this work, and if a large boggy place directly across the street in Wollaston Avenue were made passble, good results would follow. The avenue in question although private property, has been opened to the public for sixty years. This should be town work.

In the Centre district, residents of Washington street are uniting to complete the row of maples begun last year, to the Point Bridge. The committee at South Quincy wishes to increase the beauty of the open space on School street; while in West Quincy a triangular space at the junction of Cemetery and Copeland streets is selected for laying out.

In South Weymouth, a society like ours, after working against discouragements, receives the sympathy of all the citizens in all it tries to accomplish. It has improved public places; in one instance expending $100 for stone curbing; it has set out more than 500 trees, and this is only one of numberless similar societies.

If those citizens who are trying to raise the tone of public sentiment in Quincy work patiently and persistently, the best of our townsmen can overcome the spirit that leads a few to exert a counteracting influence. All reforms move slowly. We have established temperance, and put in pure water; and we have a Board of Health that will work unselfishly for our welfare.

The modest little Village Improvement Society hopes, in working in a new line, to please the eye and thereby to increase the refining influence needed in a large community. The officers for 1885 are elected with the exception of two members in West Quincy and are as follows:

President, Hon. E. C. Bumpus.

Vice Presidents, Mrs. E. H. Dewson and Dr. J. A. Gordon.

Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. W. L. Faxon.

Committees,— CENTRE DISTRICT,— Walter T. Babcock, Mrs. W. T. Babcock, Theo. King, Jr., Mrs. Theo. King, Jr., Mrs. D. M. Wilson.

SOUTH DISTRICT,—Rev. H. E. Cotton, Mr. J. H. Dinegan, Mrs. J. H. Dinegan, Col. W. B. White, John H. Dee.

POINT DISTRICT,—T. B. Thomas, B. F. Curtis, Mrs. Dr. Harlow, Miss Flora Vining, Herbert M. Federhen.

WEST DISTRICT,—Dr. G. W. Huse, John G. Woddick, Miss Emeline Newcomb.

BOAT RACE. Great excitement has been caused at Quincy Point and Germantown for several days past on account of a boat race to take place in Quincy Bay on the afternoon of Monday, May 11th, between two ancient patriarchs and noted oarsmen; Deacon Rufus Hapgood, weighing 320 pounds, aged 80 years, and Gunner A. B. Shute, weighing 210 pounds, aged 78, in their two beautiful boats, the Rattler and Dart, and from their peculiar construction great time is expected to be made. Referee, Little Mac.

Fire Department.

The Engineers have organized as last year with Joseph M. Glover chief and Franklin Curtis clerk.

The John W. Hall Hook and Ladder Company, at its regular meeting on Monday evening, elected a partial list of officers, and the remainder will be chosen next Monday.

Foreman. Arthur C. Merritt.
Assistant Foreman. Luther Rogers.
Clerk. Frank E. Rogers.
Steward. John H. Newcomb.

The Granite Hose Company, No. 3, have chosen the following officers:

Foreman. William F. Powers.
First Assistant. James M. Usher.
Second Assistant. George O'Brien.
Clerk. James A. White.
Treasurer. John Barry.
Steward. John O'Brien.
Standing Com. Jeremiah Lyons, Thomas McNeil and Bernard Donaher.

The J. Q. Adams Chemical Company of Atlantic have elected the following officers:

Foreman. Edward H. Richardson.
First Assistant. Daniel Nyhan.
Second Assistant. Henry L. Hallett.
Clerk and Treasurer. W. S. Knowles.
Steward. Henry Cunnigham.

Hose 1, conneoted with the Steamer, have elected the following officers:

Foreman. Thomas Conlon.
First Ass't. Edward Glennon.
Second Ass't. William Gavin.
Clerk. John Conlon.

Wollaston Hose, No. 2, will be officered the ensuing year as follows:

Foreman. A. G. Olney.
Ass't Foreman. J. P. Edgarton.
Clerk and Treas. Fred Litchfield.
Steward. J. P. Edgarton.

Foreman. F. E. Burrell.
First Ass't. R. H. Newcomb.
Second Ass't. Fred Alden.
Clerk. F. G. Mead.
Steward. William Caldwell.

Quincy Yacht Club.

At a meeting of the Regatta Committee of the Quincy Yacht Club, held at the house of Mr. James H. Slade, last Tuesday evening, the following dates were selected for the regattas of this season:

Saturday, June 6, off Quincy Great Hill, start at 3 o'clock. 1st and 2d cash prizes in each class.

Friday, July 3, off Quincy Great Hill, start at 2 P. M. Championship.

Friday, July 31, from Quincy Point, start at 2 P. M. 1st and 2d cash prizes.

Friday, Aug. 14, off Quincy Great Hill, start at 2 P. M. Championship.

Saturday, Aug. 29, from Quincy Point, start at 1 P. M. 1st and 2d cash prizes.

Saturday, Sept. 12, off Quincy Great Hill, start at 1 P. M. Championship.

Wednesday, June 17, there will be a review and other entertainment, the details of which will be announced hereafter.

The courses of the second and third classes have been changed in order to enable the spectators on shore to see the boats from start to finish, thus making the races much more interesting. The old method of starting from anchor has been given up and the flying start adopted. The outlook for the coming year is very gratifying to the friends of the Club. Fourteen new members have already been elected and the Committee has good reason for believing that the membership will be doubled before the end of the season.

PLYMOUTH COUNTY GOOD TEMPLARS. The Sixtieth Quarterly Session of the Plymouth and Norfolk County Good Templars met with Hancock Lodge at Faxon Hall, Quincy, on Tuesday. The meeting was called to order at 10.30 A. M. by the President, Peter Dalton, Esq., of Campello. After singing, prayer was offered by A. B. Cole of Abington. Records of the previous meeting, which was held at Abington in February, were then read by the Secretary and approved. G. Hayward of East Bridgewater, then sang "Hold the Fort," followed by interesting reports from the various Lodges represented. Adjourned at 12.55 to meet at 2 o'clock.

The afternoon session opened with singing and prayer, followed by remarks by Mrs. L. A. Robinson of Cambridge superintendent of Juvenile Temples. The following questions were then presented for debate:

1st, "Would it not be advisable to place candidates on probation before receiving them into our order?" responded to by Nathan Beals of Rockland.

2d, Should Good Templars favor moral or legal suasion? responded to by G. Severance, Esq., of South Abington.

3d, Should advocates of license be admitted into membership in any Lodge? responded to by Mrs. L. A. Robinson.

Said questions were intelligently discussed by nearly all present. The meeting closed at six and was pronounced by all to have been a very pleasant and profitable meeting.

The following Committees' were appointed at the close of the morning session:

Committee on Finance, A. B. Cole of South Abington.

Committee to make arrangements for time and place of next meeting, G. Hayward of East Bridgewater, R. Blanchard of Brookville, and M. E. Snell of East Stoughton.

It was decided to hold their next meeting with Crystal Spring Lodge of Brookville, the first week in August, of which due notice will be given.

A large number remained and attended the regular meeting of Hancock Lodge in the evening, when the officers for the ensuing quarter were installed by Deputy Hathaway of Brockton.

Base Ball.

The Boston College crossed bats with the Adams Academy of Quincy, on Greenleaf street, last Wednesday afternoon.

Game was called at 3.30 and it was interesting throughout, a very noticeable feature being the almost perfect fielding of the College team.

The Academy boys batted well considering the swift and puzzling delivery they had to face.

The honors of the day were carried off by Byron, Murray and Falvey for College team, while Aldrich, Braniard and Wise did the same for the Academy, the latter making two good catches, and on one of them securing a double play. The batting of Aldrich and Morse deserves special mention.

The following is the summary:

| | AB. | R. | B. | TB. | PO. | A. | E |

Beginning May 1, the Blue Hill meteorological observatory will attempt to give warning of rain by displaying a red flag during the day and a red lantern by night. Rain may be expected within twelve hours from the time these signals are displayed. It is an experiment and will be discontinued if unsuccessful.

There was a public hearing given by the Road Commissioners on Monday afternoon at four o'clock, at the East Milton Reading Room, concerning the proposed road from the East Milton depot to Hunt's Corner on Pleasant street. Edward Cunningham, Josiah Babcock, C. L. Copeland, John Badger, Isaac Loud and others spoke of its advantages. Another meeting will be held soon at which a plan will be presented, and it looks very favorable for the new street.

C. F. Tarbox has some excellent new maple sugar.

The parish meeting last Monday evening of the East Milton Congregational Church was again unsuccessful in finding members who would serve as a parish committee. Another meeting will be held Monday evening.

T. L. Pearce is building an addition to his store.

The Assessors are about town.

The Hydrant Engine Company elected officers Monday evening. Foreman, James F. Lord; First Assistant, Thomas Williams; Clerk, James Wigley; Treasurer, Arthur M. Gardner.

There is trouble in camp with the Granite Hook and Ladder, and two companies have petitioned to be put in charge.

Patrick McDermott is taking the census of Milton.

Tuesday noon about 12.30, a barn belonging to Miss Vose, at the corner of Vose's lane and Canton avenue was burned to the ground.

A short time ago, Mr. O. A. Andrews, teacher of the East Grammar School, presented to Mr. and Mrs. William Robertson, parents of the late Victoria Robertson, an elegant plush autograph album, containing the names of the scholars and teachers of the East School, and the Congregational Sunday School, in memory of their beloved schoolmate and pupil; accompanying the album was a costly plush mat, embroidered with the arms of the United States. On the first page of the album were written the following resolutions:—

WHEREAS, It has pleased God to remove from our midst one of our number, bringing profound grief to fond parents, and sorrow to her associates.

Resolved, That the life thus early ended was full of valuable lessons. That she was studious in habit, amiable in disposition, exemplary in character, and possessed of all those grand attributes which make up the perfect woman. That the tenderest sympathies and love of teachers, schoolmates and friends be extended to them in their great bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson hardly know how to thank the kind friends who have extended their sympathy so fully in their great sorrow.

Billiard and Pool Rooms.

During my term of office as policeman, some of the chief difficulties which I have encountered in the enforcement of the law, have been billiard and pool rooms. It is in such resorts that the young men (the principal patrons) are taught their first lessons in gambling, lying, stealing, cheating and drunkenness; also, to shake dice for the drinks, cigars, etc. The cases which I have brought before the courts, have been the means of revealing to me the rascalities of some of the proprietors, who in order to clear themselves, have tried to influence the government witnesses to lie. In several instances sons of perdition visited parents who were witnesses, and, in order to defeat justice and serve their own ends, have urged them to testify that they had given their boys permits to visit these saloons. The men who keep such haunts of vice are not satisfied with ruining the young men, but urge the parents to perjure themselves, and thus assist in destroying their own homes. The judge of our district court well expressed my sentiments when he said that "Billiard-rooms are the nurseries of crime." Tricks of all kinds are resorted to by the keepers of these iniquitous dens, and when they are brought into court, some dirty, unscrupulous lawyer who is employed to defend them, sneaks behind, and prostitutes his profession by insulting every government witness who is inclined to tell the truth. In a visit to one of these saloons I found thirty-one persons present, most of whom were young men, engaged in playing pool, smoking, drinking, and loafing about. What hopes can parents have of their children if they are educated in such dens of vice, where all kinds of crime are engendered and future deviltry is planned? Once in a while parents are found who are so lost to all sense of decency, that permission is given a minor child to visit such places. Shame on such parents!

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, May 7th, 1885.

VISITING AMONG FRIENDS. Mrs. Jane Algoewith her daughter arrived in Quincy last Friday, from Benicia, Cal., after an absence of several years. Her husband, the late Adam Algoe, was a soldier in the war of the rebellion and was wounded in the leg, side and breast near North Anna river, May 28, 1864, and was discharged by reason of his wounds in 1865; he died Oct. 1st, 1866, and his widow with her family soon after moved to California, where they have resided ever since. Mrs. Algoe is visiting with Mrs. James Gallagher on Marsh street, and will return to her home in Benicia, after renewing old friendships and enjoying the pleasure of seeing her former home.

BAY STATE FERTILIZER. C. Y. DeNormandie, of Kingston, Mass., says: "For two years I have used the Bay State Fertilizer with satisfaction. Last year I applied it on corn and potatoes alongside of two other well established fertilizers and with such good results that this year I have used none but the Bay State. Have applied it to corn, carrots, tube roses and tomatoes with excellent success.

Mr. Bryant N. Adams of Pleasant Point Farm is agent for this fertilizer.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Tests that prove its Superiority in Strength, Purity, and Keeping Qualities.

The practical tests by innumerable housekeepers have established the fact that the Royal Baking Powder is always reliable, and never fails to make light, sweet, and palatable bread.

The numerous tests by scientific bodies and eminent chemists have so thoroughly and repeatedly demonstrated the absolute purity, superlative leavening power, and perfect wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder that these facts are no longer questioned by any one.

Further tests have been made by Government Chemists Mott, Love, and others to determine the difference in strength between various baking powders when fresh and when a few weeks old.

A baking powder may have a large amount of raising power and produce light bread when first made, but if it does not retain its strength until wanted for use it is worthless, and the result of its use is heavy, sour, indigestible, unwholesome food. As the housekeeper has no means of knowing when buying baking powder from the shelf of the grocer how long it has been made, these tests will be most valuable in protecting her from the multitude of baking powder swindles of the present day:

| Name. | Cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder. When fresh. | When not fresh. |
|---|---|---|
| Royal Baking Powder (absolutely pure) | 127.4 | 126.9* |
| Patapsco (alum) | 125.2† | 72.3 |
| Horsford's (Phosphate) | 125.5† | 32.7 |
| Hanford's | 121.6 | 84.35 |
| Charm (alum) | 116.9† | 69.05 |
| Cleveland's (contains lime) | 110.8 | 61.2 |
| Sea Foam | 107.9 | 48.9 |
| Dr. Price's | 103.3 | 53.08 |
| Snow Flake (Groff's) | 101.88 | 52. |
| Pearl | 93.2 | 47.5 |
| Andrews & Co's (Alum) | 78.17† | 41.9 |
| Gillet's | 84.2 | 33.4 |
| Bulk | 80.5 | 5. |

* This sample, from the shelf of a retail grocer, was over five years' old.

† Alum and phosphate powders, though apparently of a high strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

The remarkable fact apparent from the above is the perfect keeping quality of Royal Baking Powder, which it was found had lost but one-half of one per cent of its strength (an inappreciable amount in baking) while all others had lost so much of their leavening gas as to be comparatively valueless.

This great superiority of Royal Baking Powder arises from the perfect purity of its ingredients, the extraordinary care in its manufacture, and the scientific principles employed in its combination. The articles used are thoroughly dried by heat before being compounded, and are so prepared and coated as to prevent the action of the acid upon the alkali prematurely, or except under the influence of both water and heat necessarily used in cooking or baking.

All the tests, both scientific and practical, place "Royal" at the head in every respect, the standard baking powder of the world.

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1884.

Dr. . Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.,

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best remedy to do this, your "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended to me hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am cure of that. Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW FARRELL.

24 Adams Street.

In all cases when a consultation is deemed desirable,

Address:—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. But, if you have not done so, adopt "FAVORITE REMEDY" as a household friend.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete without a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventive and remedial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

"JOSIAH."

I never kin forget the day
That we went out a-walkin',
And sot down on the river bank,
And kept on hour's a-talking';
He twisted up my apron string
An' folded it together,
An' said he thought for harvest time
'Twas cur'ous kind o' weather.

The sun went down as we sot there;
Josiar seemed uneasy,
And mother she began to call:
"Loweezy! Oh, Loweezy!"
An' then Josiah spoke right up
As I was just a-startin',
An' said, "Loweezy, what's the use
Of us two ever partin'?"

It kind o' took me by surprise,
An' yet I knew 'twas comin';
I heard it all the summer long
In every wild bee's hummin';
I'd studied out the way I'd act;
But, law! I couldn't do it;
I meant to hide my love from him,
But seems as if he knew it;
In looking down into my eyes
He must have seen the fire;
An' ever since that hour I've loved
An' worshipped my Josiar.

Farm and Garden.

Adorning the Home.

If home is everything, then we cannot do too much to make it attractive. The man who says mere use is enough and beauty is folly, deserves only to be classed with the cattle he feeds, who have as much sentiment as he has. We are past that low line in our civilization where it is tolerated to say that anything that will answer is good enough. We want something more and better.

Mere subsistence is not life. If it is, then what do the promises of immortal existence amount to. A home is, or ought to be, more than a stopping place merely, a place to eat, drink and sleep in. It should be the nursery of all gentle thoughts and loving affections. It should first develop the finer elements in our natures, and then bind them together around a fixed centre. Home is the nucleus of all future growth and goodness. It is the centre of all our affections. It is the abode of contentment and peace. Therefore it is a spot to be adorned, within and without, to the uttermost; to be made pleasant and beautiful; to be embowered in trees and sheltered with verdurous shrubbery; to be made inviting externally with a carpet of green grass, borders of fragrant flowers, and festoons of growing vines. Within, woman's tender care and refined instinct will convert it into an elysium, we do not care how plain it is or how scant the resources for embellishment.

No one possesses so many opportunities for making home an earthly paradise as the man who has it in the country. Sun, air, water, grass, trees, flowers, all are at his hand, and almost without money or price. He has more things to create an ideal home out of than any one else who could be named. Yet he seems as a rule to throw them all away, wasting his life in a covetous impatience at not having his lines cast in pleasanter places. If he could see it, and would make the most of it, he has it in his power to make other men envy him. No man's home can possibly be made more attractive than his. No man can live a life of such beautiful plainness, such sweet and wholesome simplicity, such ideal independence, such nearness to nature our common mother, such domestic integrity and undisturbed repose. As the family is called the unit of the state, so is the home the foundation of organized society and the hope of developing civilization. Can we any of us show too much devotion to it? Can we betray too great fondness for it? Can we expend either effort or means, thought or taste, upon it without being sure of getting an immeasurably larger return? To plant a shrub, a tree, a flower, or a vine is an easy thing; but each of these adds a daily beauty and grace to home that grows with a secret power in the heart and holds us faster by the ties of kindred affection.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

THE GARDEN. The early garden should be planted before the middle of May, while the late garden should not be ploughed until the last of the month. Pease, radishes, and early turnips and beets require frequent hoeing when small; the oftener the top of the soil is stirred around young plants the better they will grow. The wheel hoe run between the rows every few days will keep the weeds down, and keep the soil light. Every heavy rain beats the soil down so hard that it checks the growth of young plants, unless the crust is broken by cultivation. Some farmers think if they hoe often enough to keep the weeds down that they have done all that is necessary; but this is a mistake, especially when there are frequent heavy rains.

SPRING CHICKENS. May is a good month to have chickens come out; they require so much less looking after than in March, and grow so much faster that the farmer had better not try to raise March chickens. Let the business of raising early chicks be followed by those who devote the principal portion of their time to it. Chicks that come out in May require but little attention if they have a good yard to run in.

Anecdotes.

A little girl watching a kite made of a daily paper:

"Mamma, isn't it going very high?"

"Yes, my love, it is."

"Do you think it will get beyond that cloud?"

"It wouldn't surprise me if it did; why do you ask?"

"Well, I thought if it went as far as that the dear Lord might be able to read the news."

They were expecting the minister to dinner. "Is everything all ready, my dear?" asked the head of the house.

"Yes, he can come now as soon as he likes."

"Have you dusted the family Bible?"

"Goodness gracious! I forgot that."

"That joker never need be afflicted with rheumatism."

"Why?"

"Because he always has such a plentiful supply of chestnuts on hand."

"Yes," said Jones, "when my wife gets mad she reminds me of a vessel under weigh."

"How so?" inquired Smith.

"Because she has got her rancor up."

Household Receipts.

RHUBARB PUDDING. Prepare the stalks as for pies; cover the bottom of a buttered pudding dish with slices of bread and butter, cover with the rhubarb cut in short pieces, sprinkle abundantly with sugar; then put on another layer of bread and butter and rhubarb until the dish is full. Have plenty of sugar on the top. Cover so as to steam while baking half an hour. Remove the cover and brown nicely. Eat with any hot sauce.

VEAL CUTLETS. Cover each cutlet with a dressing made of minced veal, bacon, fine bread crumbs, chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste. Mix with an egg well beaten. Put the cutlets in a buttered pan and bake. When done, take the cutlets out of the pan, pour over them some strained gravy in which a little celery has been cooked and serve with slices of lemon.

A DISINFECTANT. An excellent and simple disinfectant for sinks and waste pipes is made by mixing one large tablespoonful of copperas with one quart of boiling water. This solution is odorless and deodorizes instantly. The copperas may be bought at any druggist's for eight or ten cents a pound.

To take rust out of steel, rub the steel with sweet oil; in a day or two rub with finely powdered unslacked lime until all the rust disappears, then oil again, roll in woolen and put in a dry place, especially if it be table cutlery.

Spinach prepared after this method is certain to give satisfaction: Boil the spinach in salt and water until tender. Drain in the colander, and chop fine. Season well with pepper and salt. For each quart of the spinach put two tablespoonfuls of butter and one of flour in a frying pan. When this has cooked smooth, and before it has become brown, add the spinach. Stir for five minutes; then add half a cupful of cream or milk, and stir three minutes longer. Arrange in a mound on a hot dish. Garnish with a wreath of slices of hard-boiled eggs at the base, and finish the top with another wreath. Serve hot.

Conundrums.

Why are dancers like mushrooms? They spring up at night.

Why is a man who has nothing to boast of but his ancestors, like a potato? The best thing belonging to him is under ground.

Why is a hat like a king? It has a crown.

Why is a traveler landing from a steamboat at midnight like an Englishman at a French tavern? He can get no porter.

What burns to keep a secret? Sealing-wax.

Miscellany.

A REMARKABLE RECORD. The Dorchester Beacon of May 2d, in an article on shoes says: "We wonder if there is another pair in this commonwealth, or even in the whole country for that matter, that have a record equal to those now worn by Mr. Charles Breck, the worthy town treasurer of Milton. These shoes were made for Mr. Edwin Breck in 1834, and after his death in 1838 became the property of the present owner, and have been constant in use ever since they came from the last. The fabricator of this wonderful pair of shoes was Mr. Nathan Stanley of Milton, who was long ago gathered to his fathers. These shoes, at long intervals, come to the shop of Mr. H. A. King for a new tap on the soles, but the uppers are still strong and in good condition, as also the wearer of the shoes in spite of his eighty-seven years of age."

☞ A Baltimore oysterman recently fished up a bottle to which a large bunch of bivalves had grown. Inside the bottle was a fish too large to get out of its mouth. It is supposed that the fish went into the bottle and either liked its quarters so well that it tarried too long, or before it could find its way out had grown so large as to nearly fill the bottle. The bottled fish has been sent to the Smithsonian Institute as a curiosity.

☞ A 17-year-old Portland boy, who was supposed by his parents to be diligently attending school, has been arrested for selling rum on the streets from bottles carried in his pockets.

☞ Mrs. C. C. Bicknell of Hartford, Ct., died recently from blood-poisoning caused by getting "diamond dye" into a scratch under her finger nail.

☞ A bride in Ohio, after the conclusion of the marriage ceremony, stepped gracefully forward and requested the clergyman to give out the hymn, "This is the way I long have sought."

☞ A health journal says you ought to take three-quarters of an hour for dinner. It is well, also, to add a few vegetables and a piece of meat.

☞ A naturalist has discovered that one of the curiosities of natural history is that a woman says "shoo" to frighten chickens and "boo" to a goose.

☞ A receipt is going the rounds of the press for tanning hides with salt and alum; but our school-master taught us years ago that oil of birch was better.

"Poets are born," says a writer. So are other men, but when they get old enough they generally reform.

A servant-girl, a year over, was given macaroni to prepare for the table. Noticing her surprise, the lady said, "Didn't you cook macaroni at your last place?"

"Cook it? We used them things to light the gas with."

The indications now are that the Legislature will remain in session until the middle of June.

The Root of the Evil.

To thoroughly cure a scrofula it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid. Thousands who have been cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla, testify to its wonderful blood-purifying qualities. Sold by all druggists.

Temperance.

Temperance Convention.

The National League for the suppression of the liquor traffic will hold a Mass Meeting in Tremont Temple, Boston, Monday, May 11th, at noon. It is "non-partisan and non-sectarian." The first session will be opened by the Ruggles Street Quartette, and will continue to 1.30 o'clock p. m.,; the second from 2 to 5 o'clock. p. m.

The plans and purposes of the League will be set forth by its officers, aided by distinguished speakers from abroad, and the present aspects of the Temperance Reform will be discussed.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, will speak at the noon meeting, Rev. Thomas L. Poulson, D. D., of Baltimore, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Rev. E. E. Hale, D. D., Rev. D. Dorchester, D. D., and others, will address the Convention.

During the few months since the organization of the League, its principles and methods have received the heartiest indorsement from leading friends of temperance of different parties through the country. Words of approval have come from almost every State and Territory in the Union, and co-operative endeavors are already widespread and earnest.

Meanwhile the increasing encroachments of the liquor traffic, and its devastating horrors, are continually arousing new classes of citizens to measures for self-protection, and the various forms of temperance legislation now being urged, furnish fruitful subjects for inquiry and debate.

While the National League advocates and employs non-partisan methods, many who use other methods, also, are cheerfully co-operating with the League, in working along its main lines of effort.

The exigency demands a spirit of hearty co-operation in all friends of temperance, making common cause against a common foe.

A cordial invitation to the Convention is extended to all.

By order of the Directors.

Effect upon the Waste of the Body.

The tendency of alcohol is to cause a formation of an unstable substance resembling fat,* and so the use of liquor for even a short time will increase the weight. But a more marked influence is to check the ordinary weight of the system, so that "the amount of carbonic acid exhaled from the lungs may be reduced as much as thirty to fifty per cent.—(Hinton).

The life-process is one of incessant change. Its rapidity is essential to vigor and strength. When the functions are in full play, each organ is being constantly torn down, and as constantly rebuilt with the materials furnished from our food. Anything that checks this oxidation of the tissues, or hinders the deposition of new matter, disturbs the vital functions. Both these results are the inevitable effects of alcohol; for since the blood contains less oxygen and more carbonic acid, and the power of assimilating the food is decreased, it follows that every process of waste and repair must be correspondingly weakened. The person using liquor consequently needs less bread and beef, and so alcohol seems to him a food—a radical error, as we have shown.

*The molecular deposits equalizing the waste of the system do not go on regularly under the influence of alcohol; the tissues are not kept up to their standard: and, in time their composition is changed by a deposit of an amorphous matter resembling fat. This is an unstable substance and the functions of animal life are all retrograde."—Hubbard on the opium habit and alcoholism.

Why is it more unjust to women to say you may vote, that privilege being granted without the least implied coercion than it is to withhold that privilege, thus refusing choice of action?

—There were eleven petitions to sell intoxicating liquors advertised in the Weymouth Gazette last week.

Care for the Children

Children feel the debility of the changing seasons, even more than adults, and they become cross, peevish, and uncontrollable. The blood should be cleansed and the system invigorated by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them completely; and they have been healthy ever since. I do feel that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my children to me." MRS. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.

Purify the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Liberty Enlightening the World.

This new Wonder of the World, which is now being loaded on the French transport Isere for shipment to this country is the largest statute in the world. Some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the fact that forty persons found standing-room within its head. A six-foot man standing on the level of the lips only just reached the eyebrow. While workmen were employed on the crown of her head they seemed to be making a huge sugar-caldron, and they jumped with ease in and out the tip of the nose. Fifteen people might sit round the flame of the torch, which elevation can be reached by a spiral staircase within the outstretched arm.

The London Daily News, in speaking of it, says: "It is out and away the largest statue of modern times. The Colossus of Rhodes was nothing to it. It could carry the 'Bravaria' or the 'Hermann' in its arms. It towers to the skies from the yard of the Rue de Chazelles, where it has been eight years in construction, and the view from its coronet sweeps clear of the six-story houses and beyond the walls of Paris."

The weight of this stupendous statue is 440,000 pounds, of which 176,000 pounds are copper and the remainder wrought-iron. It is expected to arrive in New York about the twenty-fifth of May, where it will be erected on Bedloe's Island, this being the location selected for it by Gen. W. T. Sherman, who was appointed by the President to make the selection. When placed in position it will loom up 305 feet above tide-water, the height of the statue being 151.2 feet, that of the pedestal 91 feet, and foundation 52.10 feet.

This imposing statue, higher than the enormous towers of the great Brooklyn Bridge or the steeple of Trinity Church, which is the loftiest in the city of New York,—higher, in fact, than any of the colossal statues of antiquity,—by its rare artistic proportions, as well as its stupendous dimensions, will add another to the Wonders of the World. A word should be said of its artistic merit. The pose, stride, and gesture, with its classic face, are pronounced perfect; the drapery is both massive and fine, and in some parts is as delicate and silky in effect as if wrought with a fine chisel on the smallest scale.

The conception and execution of this great work are due to the great French sculptor, M. Bartholdi, who has devoted eight years of his life and most of his fortune to this great work, and whose generous impulses, which must be on a scale commensurate with this noble work, prompted him to make such a gift to the United States. The committee in charge of the construction of the base and pedestal for the reception of this great work are in want of funds for its completion, and have prepared a miniature statuette, an exact counterpart of the original, six inches in height, the figure being made of bronze the pedestal of nickel silver, which they are now delivering to subscribers throughout the United States for the sum of $1 each. Aside from its being a lasting souvenir of this colossal statue, it will ornament our homes and bear testimony that we have contributed to the completion of one of the grandest works of modern times. All remittances should be addressed to Richard Butler, Secretary American Committee of the Statue of Liberty, No. 33 Mercer Street, New York. The committee are also prepared to furnish a model, in same metals, twelve inches in height, at $5 each delivered.

We feel assured our people will be only too eager to testify their grateful sense of the friendliness of this magnanimous offer on the part of the French people, and to reciprocate the kindly and liberal sentiments in which it originated, by thus aiding in an active prosecution of the labors that may be required to give the statue an appropriate base and pedestal. Now is the time to do it. Whoever wishes to have the honor and pleasure of contributing to the erection of the grandest statue of any age, to say nothing of the sentiment that should be welcomed and encouraged, must act promptly, for the money will be raised as sure as the sun rises. Every subscriber sending $1 will be supplied with a miniature counterpart of this great and imperishable statue of "LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD."

Played it on the Doctor.

"But the thing that puzzles me," says a prominent physician, "is to correctly diagnose the ailment of a boy. I was called up the other night by a frantic father, who hurried me from my blankets half dressed to see his dying boy.

"When I arrived at the suffering patient the whole community was about him. I saw that his was a violent attack of diphtheria, and I found it hard to say that it was not a dangerous case. I remained some time and then left, promising to call early in the morning, which I did. I approached the house with more trepidation than is my wont, because I knew if he was worse, as I feared, that I would have in his mother a case of uncontrollable hypochondria. I went to his room. The bed was vacant and my heart sank.

"He is dead, I thought, and they have taken him into the parlor and laid him out, surrounded by the decorations of the room. I approached the parlor with velvet tread, and going to the darkened window opened the blind. As I did so I looked out, and there he was in his bare feet, bare-headed, with his trousers rolled up above his knees, 'playing horse' in the street in a pool of cold slush. He looked up at me, shut one eye and called out, 'Hello, Doc, mamma's gone to the matinee. She said you could leave your stuff on the dressing-case.'"

Japanese Dentistry.

The Japanese dentist does not frighten his patient with an array of steel instruments. All of his operations in tooth drawing are performed by the thumb and forefinger of one hand. The skill necessary to do this is only acquired after long practice, but once it is obtained the operator is able to extract a half-dozen teeth in about thirty seconds without once removing his fingers from the patient's mouth. The dentist's education commences with the pulling out of pegs which have been pressed into soft wood; it ends with the drawing of hard pegs which have been driven into an oak plank with a mallet. A writer in the Union Medicale says that no human jaw can resist the delicate but powerful manipulation of the Japanese dentist.

Robbing the Heart.

Dr. N. B. Richardson, of London, the well-known physician, heard a scholar singing the praises of the "ruddy bumper," and saying he could not get through the day without it. Dr. Richardson said to him: "Will you be good enough to feel my pulse as I stand here?" He did so, and I said: "Count it carefully; what does it say?" "Your pulse says seventy-four." I then sat down in a chair and asked him to count it again. He did so, and said: "Your pulse has gone down to seventy." I then lay down on the lounge, and said: "Will you take it again?" He replied: "Why its only sixty-four; what an extraordinary thing!" I then said: "When you lie down at night, that is the way nature gives your heart rest. You know nothing about it, but that beating organ is resting to that extent; and if you reckon it up it is a great deal of rest, because in lying down the heart is doing ten strokes less a minute. Multiply that by 80, and it is 600; multiply it by eight hours, and within a fraction it is 5,000 strokes different, and as the heart is throwing six ounces of blood at every stroke, it makes a difference of 30,000 ounces of lifting during the night. When I lie down at night without any alcohol, that is the rest my heart gets. But when you take your wine or grog you do not allow that rest, for the influence of alcohol is to increase the number of strokes, and instead of getting this rest you put on something like 15,000 extra strokes, and the result is that you rise up very seedy and unfit for the next day's work till you have taken a little more of the 'ruddy bumper,' which you say is the soul of man below."—Selected.

WANT TO CALL IT QUITS. In the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, N. Y., live E. M. Waltermire and his wife, who have been married over fifty years and own a fine farm. They are both over seventy years of age, and have two sons over forty years old each. And yet, both are anxious to call it quits, and have mutually petitioned for a divorce.

A FORTUNE. Thirty years ago a citizen of Westville, Ct., enlisted in the regular army as a private, and a few days ago he returned to his mother's home, having a fortune of $3,000,000, which he made in California, where he now resides. Although his mother was over 60 years of age when he left, she is still living.

☞ Miss Katie A. Burden of Wellfleet, a graduate of the High School class of 1885, has not been absent or tardy during a whole four years course although she resided a distance of three miles from the school house.

A LADY FARMER. The Rockland Standard says that a West Hanover lady is managing a dairy farm and drives a milk wagon to Rockland every day, personally delivering the lacteal fluid to her customers.

OLD WINDOW PANES. Near Richmond, Va., is a farm house with some of the first window panes brought to America. They are 10 by 12 in size, and were already in the sash when brought here. At the time the use of putty was not known for glazing, and the lights were held in place by strips of wood tacked against them. The cost of each light in England was about $3.

☞ John C. Goodridge, Jr., characterized by the Scientific American as "an engineer of great experience," asserts that the foundation of the Washington monument is weak and unreliable, and that the huge structure is liable at any moment to fall over.

☞ A telegram from Rochester, New York, says that a large patent-medicine house of that city has just made a contract with some glass-works in Philadelphia for 10,000,000 pounds of glass bottles, or 7,200,000 bottles, over 500 car loads—the biggest contract ever made. "The bottles would stretch over 1,800 miles in line."

☞ "The largest town," etc., in the United States will soon cease to exist. By a large majority the voters of Pawtucket, R. I., have declared for a city charter.

☞ The Sikh calvary has now arrived at Suakim. On, ye brave! Sikh'em.

☞ If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.—George McDonald.

☞ A Western bridegroom at an uptown hotel summoned a bell-boy by bawling down six flights of stairs.

"W—what's the matter?" panted the boy as he responded to the unique summons.

"It's that air light," said the bridegroom, indicating the gas. "I've been trying to blow the durned thing out for fifteen minutes. If it costs anything extra to sleep in the dark, jess say so, and I'll foot the bill. Mariar, you get behind the trunk a minnit."

SUPPLEMENT.

THE COUNTRY WEEK. The Special Committee of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union have issued their Tenth Annual Report of the COUNTRY WEEK, which has for its object sending poor children and others from the city during the summer months, for a vacation of ten days or more, to pleasant homes in the country.

The report, which contains many interesting details of the work, will be sent to any one desiring it.

Subscriptions are now being received for the season of 1885, and should be addressed to Wm. H. Baldwin, President Boston Young Men's Christian Union, 18 Boyiston street, Boston.

☞ A groceryman at Keokuk, Iowa, who has an eye to business, in subscribing $1 to a church entertainment, added after his signature, "the only place in Keokuk where you can get sixteen pounds of sugar for $1.

☞ A Bible society agent called on 3,210 families in Concord, N. H., recently, and found only 29 with copies of the Bible. He sold 629 copies and gave away 107.

☞ An Irishman in Lahore, India, renounced Roman Catholicism and became a Mahometan twelve years ago. He has already made two pilgrimages to Mecca.

☞ Scituate boasts of a man of 84 years and his wife of 83 years, who have been married 60 years. They have had 9 children, all of whom have married and have had good-sized families. Only one death has occurred among the grandchildren, and that was ten years ago.

☞ Vermont has a peculiarity in its tax-law by which the cost of its legislative sessions is raised by a special levy. The tax for this purpose for the next session will be $1 on each $1000 of taxable property, and will yield about $170,000. By this method the people know exactly how much their lawmakers cost them.

☞ A Kentucky woman, who began smoking at an early age and continued it up to her 110th year, has just been untimely cut off. This would seem to show conclusively that woman is not fitted to enjoy the privileges which nature intended for man alone.

☞ The McCormick Observatory of the University of Virginia, is one of the most complete buildings of the kind in this country. The telescope cost $46,000, and the building about $30,000, both the gift of Mr. Leander J. McCormick of Chicago. The directorship of the Observatory is endowed with the sum of $50,000. An additional sum of $25,000 was also given by Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt of New York.

☞ A New Hampshire man leads the van in introducing a feature in wills that is certain to establish a precedent. At his decease, his "dear wife" is to receive the sum of $10,000, providing she remains his widow eight weeks.

☞ It seems to be generally supposed that the office of lieutenant governor exists uniformly in all the States; but such is not the fact. There is no such officer in the States of Maryland, Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oregon, and West Virginia.

☞ Texas, once noted as the home of the outlaw, has to-day the largest common school fund in proportion to population of any State of the Union, amounting in round numbers to $100,000,000. With such a climate and soil, and such facilities for future education, there would seem to be no reason for limiting the prosperity of Texas.

☞ The number of vessels built in New England in 1884 was 41 steam vessels valued at $997,000 and 146 sailing crafts and seven large barges valued at $3 315,000, a decrease of $1,000,000 compared with the previous year.

☞ The English chancellor of the exchequer is considering the propriety of placing a thin steel tire on the gold coins of the realm, to prevent loss by detrition. It is alleged that $225,000 is annually rubbed away from the coin in circulation.

IN THE VICINITY.

—The Holbrook Band furnishes music at Braintree, Memorial Day.

—Measles, mumps and scarlet fever are prevalent in North Weymouth.

—Canton has voted to pay the members of the Board of Health $100 each.

—The corner stone of the new Baptist Church at Newton was laid at sunset, May 1.

—The work on the Weymouth water works is progressing rapidly; about 1000 feet of pipe are laid a day.

—J. White Belcher, clerk of the East Norfolk District Court, is president of the Randolph Savings Bank.

—The various schools of Weymouth have formed improvement associations for the beautifying of their school yards.

—Rev. George F. Stanton of South Weymouth has resigned the pastorate of the First Congregational Church, to take effect June 1.

—The telephone subscribers in Weymouth complain because the central office has been removed from East Weymouth to Quincy.

— A wife, armed with a cowhide, took her husband from beside a charmer in a Brockton rink last week and marched him into the air.

— Mrs. Lucy Briggs of Scituate Centre, a lady eighty-six years of age, recently walked some three miles out and back to call on friends.

—The new Town Hall at Scituate was dedicated on the afternoon and evening of May Day. Congressman Long delivered an address.

—The Norfolk County Teachers' Association will meet at the M. E Church, Hyde Park, next Friday and Saturday. Superintendent Hall of Dedham is to address the meeting on "How to keep children busy." All friends of education are invited.

—Public notice was given in the Weymouth Gazette recently requesting every family in North Weymouth to collect debris on their premises into barrels, and a person would come around and take it away. As a result from one to four barrels were taken from nearly every house.

— A lady in East Marshfield has a variety of native birds over which she has perfect control. She also owns a parrot which when let out of her cage will go slyly around to all the cages and unfasten the doors and let out the birds. A cat has been so thoroughly trained that when the birds are hopping about the room the cat never offers to trouble one of them.

— John A. Andrew Post No. 234, G. A. R., of New York city, which is composed exclusively of colored men, will visit Hingham on Decoration Day to decorate the grave of Governor Andrew. The members will be met on their arrival in Hingham by E. Humphrey Post 104 and escorted to the cemetery, and they will be the guests of the Post during their visit to Hingham.

— Hyde Park has decided to take water from the old gravel pits east of the New York & New England railroad about half-way between Hyde Park and Readville stations. Water will be obtained from either dug or driven wells, and will be pumped to the highest point on Fairmount hill. The land has been purchased, and an open reservoir will be constructed at once, with a holding capacity of 1,500,000 gallons.

This and That.

☞ A prominent clergyman calls the face "the playground of the soul." Then a book agent's check must be a prairie.

☞ When you think the world cannot get along without you, pull a hair from your head and see if it leaves you bald-headed.

☞ It is the wife of the man who snores who has plenty of time for midnight reflections.

☞ A subscriber advertises for "a plain girl to cook." He probably was afraid he would be hanged if he cooked a pretty girl.

☞ There scarce can be named one quality that is amiable in a woman which is not becoming in a man, not excepting even modesty and gentleness of nature.

☞ "How can I lay up something for a rainy day?" Borrow an umbrella.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 27, 1885.

It has been said that the President was completely overpowered by the weight of accumulated business and undisposed of appointments, and that he could not see his way out of the ever increasing confusion. This, however, is a mistake. He has not been overcome by the magnitude of his work. He seems to be methodical in everything, and he has laid a programme for the coming summer which he hopes to carry out. His general plan is this: first to dispose of the foreign appointments, and get them out of the way in the next week. Then the Territorial appointments will be cleared up, and next he will give attention to the postoffices. He hopes to accomplish all this by June 1st.

It is now pretty well understood that the President is the head of the Administration. He presides at the Cabinet meetings as if he had never done anything else all his life. Nor does he hesitate to criticise the written or oral suggestions of any of his official advisers. The Secretary of State submitted a paper to him the other day. He glanced over it and said "Mr. Bayard, do you think that quite gets at the marrow of the question?" and he then suggested an improvement in the language.

Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet was selected with the understanding that it was to be a four years' Cabinet. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that from the first term of Washington to the present day, no President, save Pierce, has ever had his entire Cabinet to remain in office for the term co-existent with his own. Some incumbents have died, others have resigned on finding themselves in discord with the administration, and others have used their positions only long enough to enable them to make other arrangements by which their political or monetary interests were advanced. It was President Cleveland's intention, and was known to those whom he selected for heads of Departments and advisers, that they were to accept their several portfolios with the idea of holding them for four years, barring such interposition as humanity cannot prevent.

At the two receptions given by President Cleveland he has shown his impartiality toward officials and the public. The levee held last Tuesday evening was, in every detail, as brilliant as the reception given a few weeks ago when the guests were the Diplomatic corps, judges of the Supreme Court, Senators, and others in high official station. I think it was the first time that the East Room has been elaborately decorated on the evening of a people's gathering. The floral decorations were made at the request of the President. The Botanical gardens, Agricultural grounds and White House conservatory were drawn upon to the extent of twelve wagon loads of plants and flowers. There were many plain men and women at the reception who had never been in the White House before, many of them being strangers in the city. ADAMS.

☞ Charlie Pace of East Braintree covered with his gun on Saturday, in the dusk of the evening, what he thought to be a mink in the pond, and pulling the trigger fired, and lo, there fluttered in death his best drake.

☞ Mr. John Scollard of East Braintree lost lately a handsome buckskin colored horse from two hours' severe colic. Dr. Cutting's great skill could not save him. It is curious that a horse, notwithstanding his great strength, is impotent when disease lays hold of him.

REGULATIONS
OF THE
Board of Health
OF THE
TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

THE large number of persons who set out in their Sunday leisure to see the Gypsy camp were disappointed. The day before these nomads did

"Fold their tents like the Arabs, And as silently steal away."

At least this is the way they would have done in the fourteenth century when the first authentic note of their appearance in Europe was made. The Irish Franciscan friar, Fitz Simeon, then saw them in Crete, living in low black tents like the Arabs. As a fact, the Gypsies who left the town Saturday had no tents to strike. They bundled themselves, men, women and children, into their very modern looking vans and slowly lumbered along to their next stopping place. These folk are the world's most ancient and inveterate tramps. About the Christian era they left India, the place of their origin, and ever since have been tramping about the world. A race of wandering Jews could not be more restless. It is only within recent times that we have surely learned where they originated. When they first appeared in Europe it was thought they came from Egypt and they were most commonly called Egyptians; hence the name Gypsy. But the comparison of languages shows that they are related to the Hindoos, and that centuries ago they wandered forth from India, spread through Persia, Armenia, Greece, and thence over Europe, reaching England about the year 1514. They are an interesting people and it will pay to observe them.

IN the Senate this week the bill concerning obscene publications was further debated. It is an important bill, aiming more particularly at the suppression of papers which devote themselves most exclusively to the publication and indecent illustration of criminal news. Why reputable news dealers should display on their counters and sell such pernicious literature, and why any boy or man can shamelessly buy it, thus advertising his loathsome revelling in impure imaginations, is one of the mysteries of moral insensibility. As such persons have not the decency to let the miserable stuff alone, the law does right to interpose and save such as still have a clear conscience and a clean imagination.

The Board of Health.

Will some of our townsmen who have not seriously considered this work, remember that the Quincy of to-day, is not the Quincy of twenty-five or fifty years ago. While the sparsely settled town of the past was exempt from many troubles, the town of to-day is suffering from actual danger which will not disappear, but which will increase in the future, as the houses are being set closely together now, and there is not room for wells, drains and cesspools. We must provide conveniences and necessities for this large family.

In his powerful novel "Two years ago," Charles Kingsley has told the story of a sea port town where a physician fought almost single handed against unsanitary conditions. This facinating novel is written in exceptionally fine style and is a story embodying fact and fancy. Some of the most important themes have been presented to the world in the guise of fiction. Dickens' stories, some of George Elliot's, Uncle Tom's Cabin and many individual works deal with principles.

Do not infer that such conditions as are described in "Two years ago," are supposed to be found in Quincy, neither has the Board of Health encountered any "Trebooze," but there are many who seem unwilling to trust to the discretion of medical men whose business and study it has been, to learn concerning these matters which we laymen are not expected to understand. We must take their opinions as we would the ideas of other specialists whom we would not think of doubting.

We should not contradict Mr. H. H. Faxon in matters of Temperance reform, nor Mr. J. Q. A. Field in other practical matters, then why should any of us deny that those physicians who have fought disease in our town, seeing causes that they could not remove, while they were trying to arrest the bad effects, are qualified to tell us when we unconsciously err in relation to our dwellings?" Our path of work and inquiry is in another channel.

In Charles Kingsley's story, the same principles of action are involved, as are being met in Quincy, and we commend this book to our friends the perusal of it was accidental with us. Have we not at least a "Dr. Thurnal?" If these medical men can be supported in their work, we shall see. The time and thought the must give is considerable; there is no opportunity of any but unselfish motive to prevail.

If the chairman, Dr. Gordon, were to tell the story of his work among us, we should pause and our cheeks would blanch to know how much suffering came from preventable causes. We do not see the under current, we live on the surface and refuse to accept the testimony of those who sound deep waters.

Thoughtful men and women must decide individually in relation to questions of public interest and not be swayed by any one, weighing all vital measures carefully, and not allowing any one to influence his vote in the right direction.

There seems to come some point in the history of the town, and in the life of the individual, when numberless causes act together to change the course of events, and if this time is the marking of such a change in our community, let each one remember he is a unit of the whole and he can influence for better or for worse. The action of our recent town meeting shows that the people generally mean to help reform in the right way and it shows confidence in the gentlemen who are beginning this sanitary work. Let us show our gratitude for their efforts by endorsing their recommendations.

FAIR PLAY.

Petitions granted,—Horatio N. Glover, administrator of estate of Joshua Holbrook of Weymouth, was granted leave to sell real estate. Quincy Bicknell, executor of the will of Nathan Bates, was given permission to mortgage real estate to the amount of $1,500. Henrietta C. Davidson was granted a widow's allowance in estate of Jonas H. Davidson of Weymouth; and Elizabeth Hobart in estate of Charles Hobart of Quincy.

For the Patriot.

The Boat Race.

Messrs. Green & Prescott:

Knowing you are desirous of obtaining for your valuable paper such news as may be interesting to your readers, I will give you a statement as prepared under the excitement of the occasion.

The contemplated boat race, on Monday, a notice of which was inserted in your paper, resulted differently from what was anticipated. The two contestants started under favorable auspices, both eager for the affray. The conditions were over a supposed two-mile course. But after having pulled one-third of the distance they unfortunately ran upon a sunken wreck, and owing to their muscular strength broke their oars and were left at the mercy of the elements. It is said by their jovial companions that instead of fouling with the wreck they came in contact with His Satanic Majesty, the Sea Serpent, who was on his annual pilgrimage to our waters, seeking whom he might devour.

On this point the old shell backs were very reticent. On being discovered from the shore the steam yacht Florence, moored in the harbor promptly went to their assistance and towed both boats to the wharf, where the old heroes were received with great enthusiasm and taken in wheel-barrows to the head-quarters of the Prince of Caterers, Sir Knight Allison and given a sponge bath which revived their drooping spirits. After which a sumptious repast was given them, when speeches, sentiments, and songs prevailed. Prof. Barnes and Strong added much to the amusement of the company by their quaint songs and doings, more especially Bro. Strong, who sang the melody of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," with pathetic applause.

I am very happy to say cold water was the prevailing drink, "in small quantities," and you may rest assured if our venerable Apostle of Temperance, Goliah 2d, had been present on the auspicious occasion, he would been rapt in admiration and given a silent gosh if he had not exploded with mirth.

REPORTER.

ANOTHER ESCAPE. James J. Moriarty of East Weymouth, who had been arrested for breaking and entering at Weymouth, and had been placed in the Quincy lockup, effected his escape Monday. He had been brought before the District Court and his case continued to Thursday, but the kind-hearted officer gave him the liberty of the whole lockup, and there being a sledge hammer there he broke the lock off a door leading into the cellar and his exit was by the bulkhead which was unfastened. He left a sarcastic note behind saying he would be in court Thursday morning but as all expected, he did not put in an appearance and is still at large. Since his crime at Weymouth he had been to Savannah by boat, had stole from the captain and crew, had worked his way back to Fall River, and had walked to Weymouth, only to be arrested.

Milton Gleanings.

The new depot is now completed and, when the lower platforms are done, will be opened for use.

The Selectmen have made the following appointments:

Town Counsellor,—Hon. Nathaniel F. Safford.

Board of Engineers,—John H. Burt, W. S. Leavitt, Rufus L. Chapman, George E. Choate, Nathan Godfrey.

Night Watch,—George A. Harned, Samuel A. Alden, James Wigley, Patrick McDermott, L. A. Chase, Maurice Pierce, George C. Partelow.

Keeper of Lockup,—Edwin W. Houghton.

Special Police,—James H. Packard, Lemuel Crossman, Samuel G. Sloan, John R. Lawrence, Edward Mellen, J. P. Thompson, Wm. Jordan, Wm. W. Wheelock, Samuel S. Somers, Elmer Nickerson, Walter C. Cook.

Public Weighers,—Charles Breck, Walter C. Cook, Josiah Babcock, Samuel Morse, Wm. Swan, Frank Robinson.

Dr. Jaques and John Tucker were thrown from the former's carriage while out riding Monday at the Lower Mills, the horse having run away. The doctor was but slightly injured, but Mr. Tucker was not so fortunate and will be laid up a short time.

W. H. B. Root died last Saturday morning after an illness of six weeks. He was buried on Tuesday. The East Milton Division, S. of T., furnished a floral tribute.

Several of our teachers are attending the convention at Hyde Park.

The trouble in the Granite Hook and Ladder Company has resulted in a reorganization of the company with the following officers:

Foreman,—O. F. Bates.
1st Asst,—Henry Tarbox.
Clerk,—Eugene Clapp.
Treasurer,—Oren Bates.
Steward,—W. L. Taxbox.
Standing Committee,—E. J. Eaton, Arthur W. Clapp and Elias Williams.

At the adjourned parish meeting of the Congregational church held Monday evening, Messrs. G. S. Webster, A. A. Brackett and O. Andrews, the parish committee chosen at the previous meeting, made a proposition that they would serve provided $900 could be raised. The following gentlemen and ladies were appointed a finance committee to ascertain if the amount could be raised, and report at another meeting to be held a week from Monday evening: Frank Kemp, James Wigley, Mrs. A. A. Brackett, Mrs. George Enderle and Mrs. Josiah Babcock. The pew owners also held a meeting on the same evening and adjourned to the same time.

Josiah Babcock is having a new store team built at Jas. R. Wild's in Quincy.

Church Multiplication in Quincy.

A vigorous protest is at last being made against building too many churches to the sparsely settled square mile. The Evangelical Alliance took up the matter at its meeting in Boston last Monday, and handled it in a very common sense manner. "Do not plant new churches where they are not needed, merely on denominational principles," was one of the sentiments applauded. There is both religion and money in that sentiment as everyone knows who has witnessed the irreligious rivalry and the scrabble for filthy lucre displayed by the three or four churches planted where one or two would suffice.

The Church Congress, an entirely new organization, which met in Hartford, Conn., this week, also devoted no small portion of its time to this same subject. This Congress is made up of all denominations, — Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregational Trinitarians and Unitarians, Episcopalians, Baptists, and of others "too numerous to mention." Its chief object is the promotion of Christian union and the feeling expressed was that we had gone far enough in the way of divisions, and their perpetuation in needless and competing churches. What wastes of money and energy both at home and abroad comes of it! What can a church in a village of 1,000 inhabitants do for the promotion of religion and morality when it is struggling with two or three other churches for a dwarfed existence; In Quincy we have not escaped this sin against economy, Christian unity, and effectual service. It is the common judgment, that in parts of our town there has been a burdensome multiplication of churches. And recently there has been exhibited among us a curious illustration of the unreasonableness of certain denominational extensions.

The Atlantic union mission had for years flourished apace, members of many denominations worshipping side by side in the spirit of unity. At last it was decided to build a chapel. Their minister at this time, a Trinitarian Congregationalist, located at Neponset, exerted himself zealously to this end, and soon enough money was obtained to warrant the enterprise. It was begun, with the money thus contributed, regardless of denominational lines, when abruptly the minister announced that the movement would cease as a union mission and enter upon a new career as a Trinitarian Congregationalist church. Of course this procedure alienated the love of many and paralyzed the energies of more. A union church would take in all and was enough for all. A strictly denominational church meant exclusion and further and needless church building. Now, it might be supposed that the minister did this in his zeal for Congregationalism. But, no, it could not have been that, for, in the meantime, he gathered together and planted within fifty feet of the Congregational Trinitarian church at the centre, a new Presbyterian church. Here is a phenomenon in denominational extension which it is difficult to reduce to rational law. If Presbyterians and Congregationalists are so nearly alike that the same preacher satisfies both, what is the use of building another church when the one already built is sufficient to hold them all? Again, if Congregationalists and Presbyterians, and Methodists and Baptists, could worship together in peace, what end is gained by taking a name which drives away all but those who call themselves by that name? Is that the way to disseminate the gospel of unity among Christians and brotherly love? Is that the way to bring the christian church to a solid front against appaling sins of the time? The unilluminied lay mind finds its expression in these words of the Boston Daily Advertiser:

"Alas for the infinite, traditional and sacred folly worked out in the name of Christianity, in expending millions annually at home and among the heathen for the sake of some dogmatic phrases and holy tinis and spiritual genuflections!"

BASE BALL.

OPENING GAMES IN THE OLD COLONY LEAGUE.

Adams Academy Games—Two Defeats.

The Adams Academy nine were defeated by the Hopkinson nine of Boston, by a score of 24 to 16, on last Wednesday afternoon on the former's grounds. Loose fielding abounded on both sides and errors were piled up with alarming rapidity by the Academy boys during the first four innings, but during the last ones they played a most creditable game. The honors of the day were carried off by Brainard of Adams who played a magnificent game at first, while Aldrich, also of Adams, carried off the batting honors, wielding the stick with great effect.

The Adams Academy nine suffered defeat at the hands of the English High nine of Boston on last Wednesday afternoon on the Greenleaf street grounds. The best playing was done by Aldrich, Brainard, Redway and Wise. The first named playing an especially fine game. Morse and Aldrich carried off the batting honors. The score was 31 to 7 in favor of English High school.

RANGERS VS. ST. JOHN'S.

Last Saturday afternoon the Rangers of East Weymouth came to Quincy and played the opening game in the Old Colony League with the St. Johns club of this town, at the grounds in South Quincy. The local team were the first at the bat. Lynch knocked the ball to Pratt, but an error by Hunt gave him first, and he stole second. Downey also reached first but was caught napping between first and second. Lynch had advanced to third and came home on a pass ball. J. Galvin retired at first, and Barrett who had knocked a good one to right field was put out in trying to reach second. For the visitors Pratt struck out and O'Connell retired at first. Moran reached first and second on errors, but Hunt struck out and closed the innings.

In the second innings D. Galvin took first and second on errors but retired at third. Ford struck for a base, and base by base secured the second run for the St. Johns. Kelly got a base hit, but was left at third as Barry and Neagle flied out. The Rangers retired in one, two, three order.

The St. Johns were blanked in the third although Downey and Galvin reached third, the former being put out at the home plate. The visitors did better. Killory, who broke his bat in striking, went the rounds of the bases on errors. Halloran reached second on errors and scored on Connell's two-baser, Pratt having fouled out. Moran hit for a base and Connell scored, while Moran reached third. Hunt retired at first and Moran scored. Lonergan made a base hit, but was the third out in trying to steal second.

The local team retired in one, two, three order in the fourth, while Slattery scored one for the visitors on errors.

In the fifth Barry took first on missed third strike and scored by errors. Neagle who had made a base hit was left, Lynch and Downey retiring on fouls and J. Galvin on three strikes. The visitors retired as quickly as possible.

Barrett was the only Quincy man to reach a base in the sixth, and there he was left. Cullen of the visitors reached third but he also was left.

St. Johns were unable to score in the seventh, although Barry had hit hard to left field, only to be captured, and Lynch was put out at the home base. The Rangers however increased their score to eight. Killory reached first on error of Kelly, and after Halloran and Pratt had retired, scored on Connell's base hit. Connell advanced and was brought home by Moran, who also stole bases and scored before Hunt closed the innings.

The Quincy club did its heaviest batting in the eight. J. Galvin, Ford and Kelly each made two-basers and Barry a single, which realized two runs. The Weymouths however, made three on a base hit of Lonergan, a two-baser of Halloran, and errors.

In the ninth, Neagle and J. Galvin both retired at first, and Lynch on a fly, and the game was ended, with a score of 11 to 5 for the Rangers. Below is the summary:

REUNION. The third annual spring reunion of the Suburban Press Association at the Hotel Vendome, in Boston, on Monday last, was one of the best times the association has enjoyed. About seventy ladies and gentlemen were present. The dinner served, both in quantity and quality, was highly creditable, and received many favorable comments. President Lee of Pawtucket presided, and the after-dinner speeches, songs, readings, etc., were listened to with much pleasure. In the evening many accepted of an invitation from the managers of the Bijou theatre, and witnessed the presentation of the "Rag Baby," a very comical play, which keeps the audience full of good humor.

Quincy, March 14. tf

A CARD. The ladies connected with the Benevolent Society at Atlantic desire to express their heartfelt thanks to the friends who so generously contributed, both in the way of fancy articles and refreshments for the supper table at their late fair. Especially would they gratefully remember Mr. T. Gurney, Mr. Cephas Drew and Mrs. J. Lucas for their useful presents to the Society. We feel that we owe a great debt of gratitude to Miss Mary L. Hinckley, Miss Lizzie Glover and Miss Katie Nelson, whose table filled with beautiful and costly articles presented a very attractive appearance, it being at once a delight to the eye and a great temptation to the purse. At least we must suppose so, for they disposed of everything and the sale of articles amounted to one hundred and twenty-one dollars. Conspicuous among the many beautiful articles was a painting designed as a present to our late pastor, Rev. R. F. Gordon, who has left us for a larger field of labor. To his untiring efforts we owe that great pleasure which we have so long desired but hardly dared to hope for, of having a church of our own. Our hearts are full of gratitude to him and to all of our friends. Much of the success of our fair was due to the very efficient help we received from the gentlemen. Their services we assure them were heartily appreciated; especially those of Edward H. Richardson.

KEEP IT PURE,

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1881.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.,

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best remedy to do this, your "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take to this day, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am sure of that. Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW FARRELL.

24 Adams Street.

In all cases when a consultation is deemed desirable,

Address:—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. But, if you have not done so, adopt "FAVORITE REMEDY" as a household friend.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever to the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1885.

The Bullfrog's Party.

In autumn, when the barns were full,
And sheep and pigs were sleek and fat,
The frogs resolved to give a ball—
Or sort of free-and-easy chat.
'Twas straight agreed that none should come
Who were not either rich or wise—
Great scholars who could make a speech,
Or else were great at catching flies.

The object of the meeting was
Not only fun but elevation:
To teach the dwellers of the bogs
To seek the very highest station.
The first who came was Dr. Owl,
In ebon kids and white cravat;
You would have split to see him bow
When he shook hands with Mrs. Bat.

The dove came next in snowy dress,
And in her breast a sprig of myrtle;
And after her a whippoorwill,
Escorted by a snapping-turtle.
A cricket, with a banjo made
Of hazel-shell and oaten straw,
Had perched himself upon a rock,
And fiddled till his toes were raw.

Among the rest the robin came,
With beaming eye and red cravat,
And after him a jolly quail,
That scarce could waddle for his fat.
But for a moment all were hushed,
Just when the din was fully ripe.
To watch a sleek and chubby toad
Commence to polka with a snipe!

A frisky chipmunk fixed her eye
Upon a squirrel young and bright,
And when he handed round the nuts
She fairly trembled with delight,
The crow discoursed on greed and theft,
And almost wished he'd ne'er been born;
Mankind, he said, had got so smart
He scarce could steal a grain of corn!

For supper they had fish and bugs,
And pickled snails, and roasted flies,
And nuts, and mice, and glow-worm hash,
And pepper-corn, and beetles' eyes.
In short, they stuffed and danced and clacked,
Till frog and bird were almost dead,
And when the sleepy moon went down
They hopped and waddled home to bed.

Farmers and the Tariff.

JOSIAH QUINCY TALKS TO FARMERS.

The farmers, at their regular meeting in the Ploughman Building, Boston, last Saturday morning, discussed the question of "The Protective Tariff, and its Effect on the Farmer." Col. Daniel Needham presided, and in opening declared that the meeting was not a partisan one, but one for the free and frank discussion of the great question before the people. The question of the tariff is one that will always be new and one that will never be decided, for the reason that government is and always must be a matter of experiment. Political economy is merely a set of dogmas, for there can be no science of government. So far as the farmer is concerned in the tariff, he has no interest in the protection of wool, because the wool which is brought in is dissimilar from that which he produces. But he is interested in the question in other particulars.

Mr. Josiah Quincy was then introduced. If I express, began Mr. Quincy, some disrespect for the doctrine of protection, I would not be understood to express disrespect to those who honestly believe in that system. The effect of the tariff, primarily, is to take from the consumers of the imported article a certain tax which is paid into the Government Treasury. But the real effect of the tariff is not simply to collect revenue, but to protect—as it is called—the domestic producers of those articles that are imported. So the people are taxed, first, for the revenue, and second, by the sum by which the price of like domestic products are raised by the imposition of these duties. The first function of the tariff is to raise prices. My first objection to protection is, that it is an interference with the natural laws. Protection, thus, must in its nature be an evil. If protection enhances, as it does, the price of domestic products, somebody has got to pay these enhanced prices. Now, who is it that pays these taxes that go into the pockets of the protected manufacturer? Out of the 17,350,000 people engaged in gainful occupations in this country, 7,600,000, or 44 per cent., are engaged in agriculture. Therefore the taxes fall upon the farmers in the proportion of 44 per cent. of the whole number upon whom the taxes fall. How large a proportion of some of our agricultural products has to find its way to foreign markets and thus have its price fixed by the price in foreign markets? More than three-quarters of our total exports consist of the products of agriculture, or, at the farm value, we find that the farmer to the extent of 20 per cent. at least is dependent upon foreign markets and has his price fixed by the price brought in those foreign markets. This means that the more foreign trade we have the better it will be for the farmer, for it will increase his sales, and it means that a tariff which restricts foreign trade is a bad thing for the farmer. This levying of high tariffs is a game that two can play at. Other nations will say they will exclude the agricultural products which we would be glad to sell abroad, because we exclude the manufactured products which they would be glad to send here. The farmer thus would see that protection is a two-edged sword. Now the protectionist would say that protection furnishes a market for the sale of farm products, and that were it not for protection everybody would go into farming. But the number of people who can be protected by a tariff is insignificant compared with the total number of people in the country, and this fact shows the protectionist statement I have mentioned to be without basis. Mr. Quincy then reckoned, from census figures, that only 830,000 people were by any possibility benefited by a protective tariff. What does this number amount to as compared with all people engaged in gainful occupations? he asked. It amounts to less than 5 per cent. And thus if all these affective occupations were wiped out only 5 per cent. of the farmer's market would be lost, and only 5 per cent. be forced into agriculture. But I do not myself admit that even this change would come about. A larger market would come from the stimulation given by the abolition of protection. Mr. Quincy closed by comparing the agricultural industries with others. The production of pigiron in 1884, he said, was $90,000,000, of wool was $64,000,000, and of poultry and eggs was $180,000,000. Under these circumstances, shouldn't the producers of poultry and eggs call protection just as well as the iron or wool manufacturers?

Household Receipts.

BATTER PUDDING. Beat separately the whites and yolks of four eggs; mix with them eight ounces of flour and a saltspoonful of salt; make a batter with a little more than a pint of milk; mix. Butter a baking-tin, and just before pouring the mixture into it add a teaspoonful of baking powder. Serve with vanilla sauce.—Cook.

WEBSTER PUDDING. Three eggs, one cup of molasses, one cup of milk, one-half cup of melted butter, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful each of cloves and cinnamon, one-half a nutmeg, a little salt. Mix as soft as pound cake, four cups of flour being about right. Steam two hours and serve with sauce.

CHOCOLATE CAKE. Three eggs, two cups sugar, one cup butter, three cups flour, three-fourths cup sweet milk, one teaspoonful soda, two teaspoonfuls cream tartar.

FROSTING. One-fourth cake of chocolate, one and one-half cups sugar, three-fourths cup sweet milk; lemon; let it boil till it thickens.

PUDDING SAUCE. Two eggs beaten very light, one large cup sugar. Beat well together. Let stand awhile and beat again. Two tablespoonfuls of boiling water added just before using. One-half teaspoonful of vanilla.

Kerosene will soften leather belts or boots that have become hard from exposure or use around the wash-room. Good for the harness when hard from rain or dampness. Wash with warm water, then grease with good animal oil.

Apple parings and cores should always be saved and jelly made from them.

A wise housekeeper is careful where she keeps her flour, for she knows it is more readily tainted than milk.

Table-cloths are prettily ornamented by a border of scarlet embroidery in linen thread, the design being geometrical of a running border of flowers.

An uncomfortably tight shoe may be made perfectly easy by laying a cloth wet in hot water across where the shoe pinches, changing several times. The leather will shape itself to the foot.

Anecdotes.

They were speaking of a young lady who sings beautifully, and one of the party asked: "Is she a mezzo-soprano?"

"No, I guess not, I think she is a Swede," was the innocent reply of a high-school girl.

"What is the matter?" asked a lawyer of his coachman.

"The horses are running away, sir."

"Can you not pull them up?"

"I am afraid not."

"Then" said the lawyer, after judicial delay, "run into something cheap."

"Bridget," said a lady to her domestic, "where is the dust-pan?"

"With the broom, ma'am."

"And where is the broom?"

"With the dust-pan ma'am."

"Well, Bridget, tell me—where are they both?"

"They are both together, ma'am. Seems you are mighty particular today."

Smith—"What fiery red hair that girl has. Looks as if she were ablaze. Do you know her?"

Jones—"Oh, yes; she is an old flame of mine."

"Freddie, did you go to school today?"

"Yes'm"

"Did you learn any-thing new?"

"Yes'm"

"What was it, my boy?"

"I got on to a sure way of gettin' out for an hour by stuffin' red ink up my nose."

"We have decided to change the amount of your salary," said the junior partner to his head clerk.

"Raise it?"

"Yes, raze it."

"Ah! H'm! Well, that's all right as long as you don't take me in as a partner. Anything but that."

"So you are going to Europe for a while," asked Flipkins of the doctor.

"Yes; but I do not know what to do with my patients," replied the doctor.

"Oh! Never mind them. They will live—until you return."

Miscellany.

Remember Your Promise.

"Won't you have another piece of pie, Mr. Featherly?" asked Bobby, hospitably. His mother was entertaining a few friends at dinner and the dessert was being discussed.

"Thanks, Bobby," Featherly replied, laughingly, "since you are so polite about it, I believe I will take a small piece more."

"All right," said Bobby, "Now, ma, remember your promise. You said if it was necessary to cut into the second pie I could have two pieces."—New York Times.

Must See the Boss.

A telegraph messenger boy called at a suburban cottage, the other day, with a private message for the gentleman of the house. The servant-girl being busy in the kitchen, the lady of the house answered the messenger's ring. "I wanter see the boss, if yer please," the messenger said. "I will take the message," said the lady. "It's private," said the boy. "I was told ter give it ter ther boss only." "Then you must see the boss? Very well. Mary," the lady called to the servant-girl in the basement, "here's a boy wishes to see you."

☞ "Guess they must be rich folks to want to spend $3 to get a cent," said an M. D., looking through his window after an anxious mother whose child had just been relieved from the necessity of digesting a penny.

☞ Complimentary. "Gentlemen of the jury," said a Tecumseh lawyer the other day, "there were just thirty-six hogs in the drove. Please remember the fact—just three times as many as in the jury box, gentlemen."

Alcohol Creates a Progressive Appetite for itself.

"When liquor is taken, even in the most moderate quantity, it soon becomes necessary and then arises a craving demand for an increased amount to produce the original effect. No food creates this constantly-augmenting want. A cup of milk drank at dinner does not lead one to go on, day by day, drinking more and more milk until to get milk becomes the one great longing of the whole being. Yet this is the almost universal effect of alcohol. Hunger is satisfied by any nutritious food: The dram-drinker's thirst demands alcohol. The common experience of mankind teaches us the imminent peril that attends the formation of this progressive poison-habit. A single glass taken as a tonic may lead to a drunkard's grave. Worse than this, the alcoholic craving may be transmitted, and young persons often find themselves cursed with a terrible disease known as alcoholism—a keen, morbid appetite for liquor that demands gratification at any cost—stamped upon their very being through the reckless indulgence of this habit on the part of their ancestors."

(To be continued.)

Conundrums.

Why is a prisoner on trial like a criminal hanging? He is in a state of suspense.

Which is the most hearty gentleman? Sir-loin.

Which is the most positive gentleman? Cer-tain.

Which is the most suspicious gentleman? Sur-mise.

Which is the most cowardly gentleman? Sur-render.

☞ A suit for $100 damages was brought against Edgar Barnes, at Springfield, Ill., for frightening a horse with a bicycle. A verdict for the defendant was rendered, the court holding that the bicycle is a legal vehicle and entitled to the rights and privileges of the road.

A USEFUL EXPERIMENT. I used Bradley's Phosphate the past season for the first time, as an experiment, to test the claim made by others concerning its good results. I planted two pieces of cabbage, one with manure, the other with Bradley's Phosphate: the crop from the latter was much more abundant—in fact, the largest yield even given me from the same area of land—and I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent and profitable fertilizer. FRANK E. GUSTINE.

Winchester, Mass., Jan. 2, 1885.

CORN. May, to the majority of our readers, is the corn-planting month. No other crop so demands that "we make haste slowly," as this. Corn being a tropical or at least a subtropical, plant, it requires a higher temperature for its germination and growth than do natives of temperate regions. The Indian's rule for planting, when "the young oak leaves are as large as a squirrel's ear," and the rule of the New England farmers, to plant when the shad-flower bush is in bloom, are only different ways of saying, "wait until the ground is warm." By whatever natural sign the time may be fixed, it will be found that the season is so far advanced that the thermometer averages sixty degrees in the shade. Corn is a rapid grower, and demands a large amount of plant food, and some quick acting fertilizer may be profitably sown with the seed, to give the young plants a good start. The manure from the poultry house may be best disposed of here.

☞ "Yes," said the old sailor, "I've been so far north that when the cows were milked they gave ice cream.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1885.

MAY.

The robin, the forerunner of the spring;
The bluebird, with its jocund carolling,
The restless swallows building in the eaves,
The golded buttercups, the grass, the leaves,
The lilacs tossing in the winds of May,
All welcomed this majestic holiday.

Postal Changes.

The following are some of the important changes made by the postoffice appropriation bill passed by the last congress, which will go into effect July 1, 1885.

First—The weight of all single rate letters is increased from one-half ounce each, or fraction thereof, to one ounce each, or fraction thereof. The same increase of weight is allowed for drop letters, whether mailed at stations where it is a free delivery or where carrier service is not established.

Second—All newspapers sent from the office of the publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereto, or to other news agents, shall be entitled to transmission at one cent per pound, or fraction thereof, the postage to be prepaid. This is a reduction of one cent from existing rates.

Third—Any articles in newspaper, or other publications, may be marked for observation, except by written or printed words, without increase of postage.

Fourth—That a special stamp of the value of ten cents may be issued, which, when attached to a letter, in addition to the lawful postage thereon, shall entitle the letter to immediate delivery at any place containing four thousand population, or over, according to the federal census, within the carrier limit of any free delivery office, or within one mile of the postoffice or any other postoffice coming within the provisions of this law, which may, in like manner, be designated as a special delivery office; that such specially stamped letters shall be delivered between 7 o'clock A. M., and midnight; that a book shall be provided in which the person to whom the letter is addressed shall acknowledge its receipt; that messengers for this special delivery are to be paid eighty per centum of the face value of all the stamps received and recorded in a month, provided that the aggregate compensation paid to any one person for such service shall not exceed thirty dollars per month, and provided further that the regulations for the delivery of these specially stamped letters shall in no way interfere with the prompt delivery of letters as provided by existing law or regulations.

Tresspassers on Real Estate.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has passed this bill which was demanded by the farmers and market gardeners, and which was much needed by them:

Any person, except a child under twelve years of age, discovered in the act of committing a tresspass on the orchard, nursery, garden or cranberry meadow of another, may be arrested by the owner or occupant of such land, and lawfully detained, by imprisonment or otherwise, until a complaint can be made against him for the offense and be be taken upon a warrant issued upon such complaint; but such detention without warrant shall, in all cases, be reasonable, and shall not in any case continue more than ten hours.

DEATH STATISTICS. Statistics have been published designed to show the increase in the number of deaths in Massachusetts from pneumonia. In 1857 there were 1,075 deaths reported and in 1883 there were 3,045. But in estimating the significance of these figures two things must be kept in mind—first, the great increase in population, and second, the improvement during that period in the methods of collecting such statistics.

Opposed to Liquor Licenses.

The Worcester authorities have granted 212 licenses and given 71 applicants leave to withdraw.

The pastors of the Roman Catholic churches in Worcester are making a sharp fight against license. A recent Sunday morning Rev. Thomas Griffin, chancellor of the diocese, said he had carefully reviewed the names of the applicants for liquor licenses, and found that fully two-thirds of them bore Irish names, while only about one-third of the city's population is Irish. No man with a drop of Irish blood in his veins could weigh that fact without bringing a crimson glow to his brow and he protested against those who would thus drag down the name of his countrymen. The Irish people had brains and energy and muscle, and could carve their way through the world with any other race, and yet it is a lamentable fact that in any other trade or business in the community, except the liquor business, it could not be said that two-thirds of those engaged therein were Irish. The liquor traffic was pronounced dangerous to liberty, and he charged the liquor dealers with being the greatest enemies to the freedom of his native land. Liquor dealers he said are clustering around the church and the cemetery, and invading the very temple of the living God. Father McCoy spoke in the same vein, and denounced the saloons as little hells and normal schools of vice. Rev. Thomas J. Conaty said that among the list of applicants for liquor licenses he found nineteen who are in his own parish. He sincerely regretted that this should be so, for he believed it to be impossible for a man to be engaged in the liquor business and save his soul.—Southbridge Journal.

☞ "San Francisco," says an inhabitant, "has not been a clean city from its foundation. There is Oriental dirt and Occidental dirt. It has come to be a foreign city. Merchandise fills the sidewalks, and in many places crowds pedestrians into the street. Offal is thrown there. The six months' trade-winds of summer and the six months' showers are the two sanitary agents which keep watch and ward over the city."

☞ The law of Kansas sentences a murderer to death, but the sentence does not take effect unless, at the expiration of one year, the governor signs the death warrant, when, if that is not done, the prisoner is confined under a life sentence. No governor has ever been elected who would sign a death warrant, and for this reason there are about thirty death-sentenced prisoners in the penitentiary at Leavenworth.

DEDHAM'S 250th ANNIVERSARY. Dedham was incorporated Sept. 8, 1636, and next year will celebrate the event with appropriate exercises. At the last town meeting the citizens of Dedham acted upon the following article: "To see what action the town will take in regard to the celebration in 1886 of the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of the town." Under this article a commitee of fifteen prominent citizens were appointed by the moderator to take the subject into consideration and report at the March meeting next year.

☞ A German forest-keeper has published in the Leipsic Journal a cure for hydrophobia, which he has used many times in fifty years with invariable success. The bite must be bathed with warm vinegar and water as soon as possible, and when this has dried, a few drops of muriatic acid poured upon the wound will destroy the poison in the saliva and insure the patient's safety.

☞ A bill has been passed by the Nevada Assembly imposing a fine of $20 on any person who treats another in a saloon. The bill does not prevent any number of persons from going into a saloon and drinking together; but requires that each man shall pay for his own drink.

A burglar who rides a bicycle and wears a mask has been breaking into houses in Manchester and other places in Essex county.

The centre of population of the United States, according to the tenth census, lies just south of the Ohio, near Covington, Ky.

The Weymouth Gazette says, that Mr. Hall of that place set forty-nine eggs and had forty-six chicks hatched, all of which are living.

A French scientist has written a pamphlet which proves theoretically that the future man will have a large brain, but no natural teeth.

During the past two or three months between thirty and forty Chinese boys have been sent from San Francisco to China by their parents to be educated.

The longest stage line now operated in the United States is that between Junction City, on the Yellowstone and Rock Creek, Wyoming, a distance of 410 miles.

Mrs. A. L. Childs of Wilmington, Ct., who some time ago was struck by lightning which came into the house on a miniature telephone line and took her shoes from her feet, died from the shock.

The Old Colony Railroad.

In 1834 the Old Colony railroad was chartered to build a short line out of Boston. The capital was fixed at $100,000, divided into 1000 shares. From this beginning it went year after year adding branches and taking in roads, until now it is made up of what was once twenty different railroads. In every case, when they have taken in a branch each one has become better and stronger financially. This corporation now has a capital and debt of $18,000,000, created by the union and consolidation of twenty different railroads. Its mileage in this commonwealth foots up 475 miles. Out of twelve counties in this state, its tracks enter seven. Out of twenty principal cities it connects with seven. It accommodates one-third of the entire population of the state. Its water frontage makes up 73 per cent. of this commonwealth. The Old Colony during the past three years has actually earned each year net, over and above its fixed charges, eight per cent. The road is ably and well managed; its management is conservative and prudent, and at the same time gives liberal and good accommodations to the public at reasonable rates, and its officers and directors combine experience and great financial strength.

INCREASED SALARY. The Committe on Public Service have reported a bill in the Senate establishing the salary, in full payment of all services, of the Norfolk County Commissioners at $3,000. It increases the salary $1,100, as they have been receiving $1,900.

☞ Among the many prize offers of the French Academy of Sciences is a sum equivalent to about $20,000 which was left by Breant in 1849, and is still unawarded. It is to be given to the person who shall find an effective remedy for the Asiatic cholera, or shall indicate with absolute certainty its causes.

Newspapers of To-Day.

People generally, and even those who may be termed steady readers and close observers, have but a faint conception of the magnitude and influence the press of this country has attained. From a careful examination of the advance pages of the 1885 edition of the AMERICAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY, issued May 1st, by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, it appears that there are 14,147 newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and Canada; of these the United States has 12,973, an average of one paper for every 3,867 persons. In 1884 the total number of newspapers was less by 823 than at present, and while the gain this year is not so marked as in some previous years, it is still considerable. Kansas shows the greatest increase, the number being 78, while Illinois follows with a gain of 77. It is curious to notice that New York, the scene of so much political activity during the last campaign, should have only about one-third as many new papers as the State of Pennsylvania. As an index to the comparative growth and prosperity of different sections of the country, especially the Territories, the number of new papers forms an interesting study, and may well occupy the attention of the curious.

SUPPLEMENT.

A Dog Case.

A case was tried in the Superior Court at Dedham last week that was of interest to all owners or keepers of dogs. The case was a suit of Mrs. Bullard, wife of F. D. Bullard of Sharon against Elbridge Clapp of Quincy. Mr. Clapp owns the Jere Holmes estate in the extreme westerly part of Sharon. In the summer and fall of 1883 he occupied the place and late in the fall let it to a man from Quincy, named Sampson, who occupied it that winter with his family. On the farm was a horse, cow, hens and a dog.

In February, 1884, Mrs. Bullard, whose husband is station agent at Sharon, went to the farm to deliver a telegram to Mr. Sampson. While there she was slightly bitten on her hip by the dog, hence this suit. By our Statute the owner or keeper of a dog, is responsible for any damage he may do and must pay the sufferer twice the amount of the injury.

Mr. Clapp claimed he was neither the owner or keeper of the dog and introduced evidence to show that the dog was purchased by and licensed to his son, George Clapp. The jury decided that Mr. Clapp was responsible for the acts of the dog and fixed the amount of the injury at $35, which being doubled by the court will give Mrs. Bullard $70.—Canton Journal.

We would advise those in Quincy, having dogs about their premises that they do not own, or highly prize, to get rid of them at once, before they are made to suffer as our townsman has in this instance; when, really, he had no claim, whatever, to the dog.

A GOOD NEWSPAPER. Do you ever stop to think what a tireless letter a good newspaper is? Week after week, year after year, it goes on, telling of marriages, births, deaths, the coming and going of the people, the business successes, or failures, accidents, improvements, meetings, revivals, socials—in fact events of all kinds. All is grist that comes to the hopper of a good newspaper. If you should undertake to write a letter to an absent friend and tell half the news found in your local paper, we think you would give up in despair. People in this town are recognizing this, and are acting accordingly, as our advertising columns will show.—Foxboro Times.

OLD MONEY. While demolishing an old chimney in Otsego county, N. H., recently, workmen found $97 in Continental money dated 1776 and 1777. The printing on the notes was perfectly legible, and in general they were in good condition. The package consisted of one $40 bill, two $20 bills, one $8, one $7, two 50c., one $2-3, and one $1-3.

---

CELEBRATION. Rutland, Vt., had the biggest Arbor-Day celebration in the State, about 3500 trees having been set out. About 1000 of these were in the main village, where there were formal exercises, Judge Veazey of the Supreme court delivering an address, and the school children and citizens marching around with banners and brass bands.

---

TIDES. On Cape Cod and in other districts along the New England coast it is firmly believed that a sick man cannot die until the ebb tide begins to run. Watchers by beds of sickness anxiously note the change of the tides, and if the patient lives until the flood begins to set in again he will live until the next ebb.

---

THE FLYING FISH. The so-called flying-fish, contrary to the general opinion, are not capable of flying, and the impulse to which they owe their long shooting passage through the air is delivered while they are still in the water, by the powerful masses of muscle on both sides of their body.

---

SUICIDE. The suicide of children is a singularly painful phenomenon of modern high pressure. Vital statistics show that in 1884 ninety-five children under fourteen years of age committed suicide in the United States.

---

BANANAS. San Francisco gets 900-000 bananas a month from the Sandwich Islands. The number of bananas on a bunch average 110, and they bring in that city at wholesale $4 per bunch. The sale is large, but to the retailer the profit is small.

IN THE VICINITY.

— South Abington is to have a stone crusher.

— Tonsilitus is quite prevalent in Hanover.

— Diphtheria is a prevailing epidemic in Hanson.

— Every cottage but one at Downer Landing has been engaged for the summer.

— Meigs says he shall be able to give Cambridge a taste of high service travel very soon.

— A strawberry patch, belonging to George Dwelley of Pembroke, has been destroyed by worms.

— Mrs. James H. Allen of Marion has a calla that has produced ten lily blossoms since January.

— The citizens of Dedham have had an indignation meeting over the acts of their board of assessors.

— Over one thousand dollars worth of cut and standing wood were destroyed by fire in Hanson recently.

— Over one hundred tramps were put up at the Weymouth almshouse from April 1st to May 7th.

— The basement of the new Universalist church at Norwood, is staked out and the work of excavation has already commenced.

— The contract for the Norwood water works has been awarded to the parties who are constructing those of Hyde Park.

— The Selectmen of West Bridgewater have forbidden the sale of the Sunday Globe in that town by the Brockton news man.

— Over two hundred trees, many of them fruit, were destroyed in Hingham in consequence of somebody's carelessness in setting fire to grass.

— Hyde Park has an Horticultural Society with a membership of 137. It has started on its second year with Mr. W. C. Eustis as president.

— The Middleboro News says, "from the way cranberry bogs are being made in this vicinity we judge that there will be mighty sassy times around here this fall."

— A fire was started, by the lighting of a pipe, in Mattapoisett recently which burned over several acres of pasture and four or five acres of wood land.

—Hingham's board of engineers of the fire department for the ensuing year will be: Chief, George Cushing, assistants Moses Cross and John H. Stedder.

—In a two mile race on rollers at East Weymouth last Saturday night, George W. Fay of that place defeated Fred W. White of Chelsea, the latter breaking his skate.

— The Fitchburg Railroad commenced Monday morning May 4th, to run an early train from Waltham to Boston, to accommodate the early marketmen. The train leaves Waltham at 3.45 A. M. and reaches Boston at 4.30

— Mr. Briggs Emery, a conductor on the Old Colony Railroad, by the recent death of an uncle in Bath, Me., comes into possession of $15,000. Mr. Briggs is a deserving young man with a small family, and will make good use of his newly-acquired wealth.—Sunday Budget.

SWEDISH COLONY. Brockton probably has the largest Swedish colony of any place of its size in the United States, the last census showing over one thousand Swedish residents. The most of these live at Campello. The first Swede who ever settled in Brockton arrived from Sweden in 1852. Within ten years he was followed by three hundred of his countrymen, and since 1863 the population has steadily increased. Most of the Swedes are employed in the shoe factories at Campello.

☞ "Santa Fe de Bogota," that wonderful city nine thousand feet high in the air, so that it forms "a temperate zone on the very verge of the equator," is the subject of an interesting paper, with a panorama of illustrations, in the June Harper's. The city is in the bed of an old mountain lake, called the Sabana of Bogota, sixty by thirty miles, and around it tower what still seem mountains even from the altitude of the city. Humbolt said of this South American city that it stands upon its own grave, his thoughts looking to the probabilities of its ultimate destruction by an ingulfing earthquake. Among the products of this strange place is the "aligator-pear," a fruit pronounced "the masterpiece of nature," "fit for demi-gods." The description of the place and its people will be a surprise to Anglo-Saxon Americans.

Enterprising Exchanges.

It is with pleasure we have noticed the evidence of prosperity in several of our exchanges recently.

The Musical Herald for May contains interesting reading on musical matters and three songs.

The Cohasset Cottager donned a new heading on celebrating its fourth birthday. The Cottager is an excellent family paper and we wish it continued success.

The Decorator and Furnisher is a first class art magazine. The May number is on our table and is replete with information, descriptions and illustrations.

The Middleboro News has taken a new departure. It is now issued semi-weekly, Mondays and Thursdays. Its editor, H. H. Sylvester, is a young and enterprising man and it is with pleasure that we note this evidence of his prosperity.

The Dorchester Beacon has been greatly improved not only with a handsome head but otherwise. It is a good family paper and we are pleased to see this general improvement which speaks of thrift and prosperity.

Among the magazines on our table this week we notice for the first time, the Literary Life, although it is in its third volume. It is a decidedly interesting and attractive number from beginning to end, and of excellent tone. It is published by the Elder Publishing Co., of Chicago.

The Stoughton Sentinel editor has an eye to business enterprise. He has issued a handsome Spring extra which is printed in the interests of his advertising patrons. The Sentinel is an excellent family paper and its editor displays much talent and ability and is a thoroughly wide awake man.

The Waltham Record has followed in the wake of the Middleboro News, and has also become a semi-weekly. Both of these papers have been reduced to one-half their former size, the two issues corresponding in size with the former weekly. Brother Barry's labors seem to be appreciated by his advertisers.

The Arlington Advocate says, "We learn that the new publishers of the Middlesex Townsman have abandoned the publication of the same, being unwilling longer to bear the loss entailed by each week's issue. It is not an easy matter to manage a newspaper enterprise in a town of ordinary size (or for a circle of small places) so as to pay expenses and leave a living profit. Hard work and rigid guarding of expenses are the two essentials of success in this line."

---

FIVE WEALTHY MEN. There are five men in the United States who control more capital than any five Kings in the world—C. P. Huntington, Albert Keep, Jay Gould, George B. Roberts, and James H. Rutter—who are presidents of five railroads which have 19,320 miles of track, representing $1,035,000,000, of which Jay Gould controls 6,054 miles of track and a little over $300,000,000.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, MAY 9, 1885.

Notwithstanding complaints made by disappointed office seekers to the effect that the new broom is not sweeping fast enough, there were six hundred Democratic postmasters appointed during the month of April, besides the foreign ministers, consuls and bureau officers commissioned.

It must be said however, that the number of dissatisfied Democrats to be found in the city has been exaggerated. There are disappointed men who have visited the White House regularly for some time, and who have been very importunate. They are principally Senators and members of the House, and when they relax in congenial circles they are apt to be critical and even abusive, but there has never been anything like a storm center of indignation. There are really more appeals for retention in office than there are applications for places in the public service. The incumbents who have so long enjoyed the honors and profits of patronage are loath to give them up. They invoke the Tenure of Office Act, the Civil Service Act, and other expedients to prevent removal.

President Cleveland has had an unusually hard task before him. Other presidents coming into power have been able to take up the work of the Government where their predecessors laid it down, and that was a comparatively easy task. For a quarter of a century the presidents have all been Republicans. Mr. Cleveland is the first of his party to be entrusted with the national helm since President Buchanan. The country has changed very greatly in every way since then, and the ways of the Government have changed too, with modern needs. There are twenty-five million more people now than then, there are forty thousand more names on the official rolls of the national Blue Book, and it may be said that the president who came in on the fourth of last March had to learn everything.

ADAMS.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE Assessors of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4 1-2 o'clock P. M. and from May 26th until June 2d, every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sections 14, 15 and 16, of Chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Returns of Property held for Literary, Benevolent, Charitable or Scientific Purposes.

[Chap. 217, Acts 1882.]

"All persons and corporations are required to bring in to the assessors, not later than the first day of July, 1885, true lists of all real and personal estate held by such persons and corporations respectively for literary, benevolent, charitable or scientific purposes on the first day of May, 1885, together with statements of the amounts of all receipts and expenditures by such persons or corporations for said purposes during the year next preceding said first day of May, 1885, such lists and statements to be in such detail as may be required by the Tax Commissioner." Blank forms for the above returns can be had of the assessors.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice, he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the assessors at their office, on or before the 2d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE Assessors of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4 1-2 o'clock P. M. and from May 26th until June 2d, every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sections 14, 15 and 16, of Chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Returns of Property held for Literary, Benevolent, Charitable or Scientific Purposes.

[Chap. 217, Acts 1882.]

"All persons and corporations are required to bring in to the assessors, not later than the first day of July, 1885, true lists of all real and personal estate held by such persons and corporations respectively for literary, benevolent, charitable or scientific purposes on the first day of May, 1885, together with statements of the amounts of all receipts and expenditures by such persons or corporations for said purposes during the year next preceding said first day of May, 1885, such lists and statements to be in such detail as may be required by the Tax Commissioner." Blank forms for the above returns can be had of the assessors.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice, he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the assessors at their office, on or before the 2d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

REASONS WHY.

Royal Baking Powder is the Best in the World.

1. Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, and the only absolutely pure baking powder made. All others contain alum, lime, or other impurity. All the ingredients of "Royal" are first rendered chemically pure, so that no adulterant can possibly enter into it, and it is composed only of those materials pronounced by the most eminent physicians and chemists, and proven by practical experience, indispensable for the production of a perfect baking powder. "It is a scientific fact that Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure."—PROF. H. A. MOTT, Government Chemist.

2. The Royal Baking Powder is of the highest test strength. It produces the maximum amount of gas attainable in a baking powder compounded from proper and wholesome materials, and is, therefore, of the highest possible leavening power. "I find the Royal Baking Powder to produce 127.4 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder" (the largest amount given by any baking powder yet tested).—PROF. E. G. LOVE, Government Chemist.

3. The Royal Baking Powder is entirely free from lime—a quality of the highest importance. Tartrate of lime is present in all other baking powders, chiefly as an adulterant of the cream of tartar used in their manufacture. Cream of tartar, refined by patent processes that totally eliminate all the lime and other impurities, is used exclusively in the "Royal," but in no other powder. "The cream of tartar manufactured by the New York Tartar Company, and used in the manufacture of the Royal Baking Powder, is perfectly pure, and free from lime in any form."—WM. McMURTRIE, Chemist-in-Chief, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

4. The Royal Baking Powder will retain its full strength for any length of time in all climates, and under all conditions of atmosphere, and will be found, whenever used, to possess the full leavening power it contained when first made. All other baking powders lack this perfect keeping quality, and will lose their strength to a large degree when a few weeks old. This is because they are made unscientifically, and from impure and improper materials. "I have tested samples of the Royal Baking Powder that had stood for several years upon the shelves of New England groceries, and find their loss of strength was almost inappreciable, being less than one per cent. I have found no other baking powder that will retain even one-half its strength under a similar exposure."—R. W. SCHEDLER, Analytical Chemist, N. Y.

Poetry.

A Spring Poem.

The old man sits in the garden chair,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
His hat is off, so his head is bare,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring,
He readeth Tupper, it makes him weep,
And anon he falls in a calm, deep sleep,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring,

The early wasp hath a vicious look,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring,
As he cometh out of his winter's nook,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
He seeth the old man's shiny pate,
And his wild eye gleams with a deadly hate,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.

Loudly the old man snores in the sun,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
Quickly the little wasp hies to the fun,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
He sits him down with a fiendish glee,
And goes for that head with a one, two, three,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.

Yells of "murder" are heard around,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
The old man rose with a terrible bound,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.
He sprang three feet and came down hard,
And hence this song by a Springtide bard,
Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring.

—Hal Berte, in Detroit Free Press.

Miscellany.

Uncle Alick's Prophecy.

"Yes, Robert, I know it's a poor place, but I don't feel willing to give it up. It's been my home—as it was my father's before me; and I did hope"—with a sigh—"that you'd ha' taken to it, and made it as good as 'twas in his time. Your poor father never had any luck with it."

"Nor do I expect any, mother. It takes a natural liking and a natural talent to succeed at any business, and I've none for farming. I wish I could persuade you to sell the place, and let me set up a store at the cross-roads. We could make more there, without the labor and care that it costs us here."

"I ain't so sure of that, Robert. Perhaps if you'd marry and settle down here, with a good managing wife to help you, you'd do better and be better satisfied; and if it weren't for old David Gardner's obstinacy you and Letty—"

"Enough, mother!" interrupted Robert, flushing all over his handsome, sun-burnt face; "it's no use to say anything more on the subject. I'll never ask any woman to marry me so long as I know that I couldn't afford her a suitable help, or so long as there's a mortgage hanging over the roof that I'd bring her to. A father's hardly to be blamed for saying that his daughter shall never marry a poor man, to break herself down as her mother did, with work. So that's settled."

His mother looked at him anxiously over her spectacles.

"If it wa'n't for the mortgage," she said, slowly, "we might get along. 'Twas that worried your father into his grave—that, and not finding the gold-streak—"

Her son made an impatient movement and she added:

"Don't you think you could get a little more time allowed us, Robert. Maybe when the crop's sold, and the apples and cider—"

"Mr. Davis won't hear of it, mother, I saw him yesterday and talked it over, but he insists it must all be paid by the first of August—ah, here he comes now ?"

Robert went out to meet the well dressed, sharp-eyed man in his handsome buggy, while his mother remained on the back-porch, with sleeves rolled up, mixing dough for the poultry.

"There ain't many of 'em to feed now," she said, talking aloud to herself, as she had been accustomed with her late husband. "What with cholera and gapes in the chickens, and weak legs in the turkeys, I hain't had any but ill-luck with the lot of 'em this year. Then there's old Speck missing—the best layer of 'em all, and Gold-streak's fit for nothin' sence her leg's broke. Ah, me! I'm mightily afeared that she's the only gold-streak we'll ever know on this place !"

"What's that about a gold-streak, Mrs. Langly ?" exclaimed a clear, young voice.

And a girl with a sweet face and bright brown eyes and a blue-striped chintz dress fitting perfectly to her trim figure, stood smilingly before her.

Mrs. Langly's face brightened immediately.

"Why, Letty, how you do always manage to take one by surprise, as if you'd risen out o' the yearth or dropped down from the clouds ! Well, child, you're welcome ! And how's your mother ?"

Letty made a suitable reply, and explained how she had been sent by her mother on some little business connected with quilt-patterns, for the invention of which Mrs. Langly was famous.

"You shall have my gold-streaked pattern," said the old lady, promptly. "It's ths handsomest of all, and I've never before given away—not even to the minister's wife, who was so taken with it."

"Gold-streaked again ?" said Letty, smiling. "That appears to be a favorite name with you."

"Ah, my dear, I've cause to think a heap of that name ! Maybe it would be better if I hadn't; and maybe again—well, nobody can tell yet."

There was a moment's silence, when she resumed:

"I dare say, Letty, you've thought me obstinate and selfish in opposing Rob's wish to sell the farm. But I had a reason, child, more on his account than mine; and I think I may's well tell it to you. I know you're to be trusted not to go and spread it around among the neighbors, who would no doubt be hinting that I'd better be put in a lunatic asylum. Maybe you'll think so yourself, but at any rate I'll let you judge.

"You see," she continued, as she slowly worked in another handful of corn-meal, "the Langlys come of Scotch stock, and it's been said that Rob's great-grand'ther Langly, over in Scotland, had the gift o' second-sight—that is, seeing and knowing things that are going to happen. I've heard a good deal of talk about it in the family, but never did think much of it, though my husband—poor departed Jeems—believed in it as firmly as he believed in summer and winter. He said these things come by a mysterious law of natur'. Well, about eight years ago old Uncle Alick Langly paid us a visit on this farm. I hadn't seen him but once before in my life—for he lived down in Tennessee, a long way from here. Him and Jeems, they walked all over the farm, and it was a far better cultivated place then than now, though nothin' compared to what it was in my father's time. Jeems' Uncle Alick didn't seem to think much of it, though. Then he went over the country looking up lands to buy for his son, Alick, who thought of coming this way to settle, if a good prospect offered. But in the end he gave up the idea, as he couldn't find just what he wanted."

Here she began slowly and deliberately to clear the dough from her hands. Letty, seated on the top step of the porch, looked up with quiet, expectant eyes.

"The day that he went away," continued Mrs. Langly, with a long-drawn breath, "he was standing here—yes right here where you are a sitting—and looking all around him on the farm. All of a suddent he says, 'Jemmy—Jemmy and Mary'—turning to me—'I've one thing to say to you before I go. Stick to your farm, for there's a streak of golden luck in it.' Of course I asked what he meant; but all he would say was, 'I've seen it—I've seen it by the power that's given us to look into the future. I've seen a streak of gold-luck running through your land that's to better your fortunes in good time. Don't part with it until your luck's found.' And that same day he went away, and the first we heard of him after he got home was that he was dead."

There was another pause, and Letty said:

"And you think there is really a vein of gold to be found on your farm ?"

"Jeems thought so. To his dying day he believed in it. Goodness ! how much he thought about that gold-streak ! Why, half his time he spent in hunting, and digging, and scratching around; and at last he went off to town and tried to get two men, that was used to the business, to come out and examine the land to diskiver gold.

"But they only laughed at him, and said no gold would ever be found in Pike county. And then he thought maybe there was gold money hid somewhere, on the place; so he dug under all the rocks, and looked in the holler trees, and was speshly keerful in digging in the garden.

"But no pot of gold ever turned up, and, meanwhilst, the farm got neglected, and it seemed that more bad than good luck was a-coming to us. Still, almost on his death-bed, he said to me:

"'Mary, don't you sell the farm if you can help it. I believe, as faithfully as I believe in anything, that that streak of gold-luck will turn up some time. No Langly ever yet prophesied what didn't come to pass.'

"That was what he said; and so now, Letty, you know, as Robert knows, why I am unwilling to sell the farm."

"And what does Robert think about it ?" inquired the girl, with a faint flush on her cheek.

"Oh, he thinks it all nonsense—about the gold, and the second-sight, and all. And as for me—why, sometimes I can't but agree with him. And then, again, there's a feeling that there may be somethin' in it, after all—and that it may be given to some folks to see what's going to happen in the future. Just as we know there were prophets of old, to say nothing o' the Witch of Endor."

Just at that moment they heard Mr. Davis' buggy roll away, and Robert came around the corner of the house.

He looked a little excited; but that might be from finding Letty there. He walked home with her across the fields to the next farm. When he returned he said, quite abruptly:

"Mother, Mr. Davis wants to buy the farm. He's offered more for it than I ever dreamed it would bring. He seems quite anxious to get it; and when I told him that you objected to part with it, he actually offered to let us off with the balance of the mortgage, provided the business is settled at once."

"Why, Robert, what can he mean ?"

"I don't know. There's something in it I don't understand; but, if you've no objection, I'll go over to G—— to morrow and see Lawyer Pannell about it."

Robert had expected to be only one day from home; but he stayed three. And, meantime, the one hired boy, going to bring the cows from the meadow, reported that there were a number of men passing through the farm, looking about, examining the ground, and acting in a very strange and unaccountable manner.

"Good gracious !" thought Mrs. Langly. "They surely can't be suspicioning the gold streak ?"

She was very anxious for her son's return. When he did come she noticed the bright glance, and the brisk manner in which he dismounted from his horse and came straight toward her, as she stood at the steps to welcome him.

"Well, Rob, I see you've got good news."

"The best of news, mother," he answered, cheerfully.

The tears came into her eyes.

"I shall hate to give up the old home, after all."

"You need not give it up, mother. We won't sell the farm. Mr. Davis was sharp," he added, contemptously, "but fortunately we escaped the trap he baited so nicely."

"Why, what is it all about, Robert ?"

"Why, only this, mother: They are going to run a new railroad through our farm."

"What !" exclaimed the old lady in dismay. "Cut our farm in two with a railroad and spile it completely ? So that's what those men were after when they came trespassing on our place yesterday ! But I'll see whether they'll ever venture to do it again ! Surely, Robert, you'll not submit to see the farm ruined and—"

"Hush, hush, mother !" he said. "Calm yourself, and let me explain."

And when he made it all clear to her how the passing of the new railroad through their farm would make them comparatively rich—and how there would probably be a station established in their neighborhood, and even perhaps on their very land, which would ten-fold increase its value—and how in that case he might establish a store there, and after awhile a post-office, already needed, with various other prospective advantages—his mother could scarcely realize the idea of such good fortune.

But her first words showed how much she had the happiness of her son at her motherly heart, when she said, with moistening eyes:

"You and Letty can marry now, Robert !"

Some few months after this time, Mr. Robert Langly stood with his mother on one side, and his wife leaning on his arm on the meadow-slope, watching from a distance the busy laborers throwing up a clay embankment, where the new railroad was to be laid.

The sun was slowly sinking to the horizon, and his almost level rays shone redly on the yellow clay, freshly turned up and gleaming in a long, bright line against the green fields beyond.

"Dear me !" said Mrs. Langly, "I never knew there was so much clay on the land; for all father's talk about a clay substratum over there, and his plowing in clover and marl. How red and yellow it looks ! and how that long line of wet clay shines in the sunlight, like a streak of gold !"

At this Letty turned with bright eyes, full of a sudden surprise.

"A streak of gold ? Oh, Robert, how strange ! Can this be the streak of gold-luck that your father's Uncle Alick foretold ?"

Mrs. Langly sank on the grassy bank, quite "shaken," as she declared, with the realization of the fulfillment of the prophecy.

"Maybe," she said, presently, "he did r'aly see it by the gift o' second-sight; or maybe, being a clever, far-sighted man, he might have got an idea that a railroad would have to run from G—— to L—— sometime, and pass right through the farm, or maybe, he might have heard somebody say as much, when he was speculatin' round the country. I'd like to know which it was."

And to this day she has not made up her mind on that point.

YORK.

I am writing in New York in the new world about old York in the old world, old England, around which so many interesting associations cluster.

New York is a namesake I believe of old York, but how unlike, is York across the sea, her namesake this side the Atlantic. New York is so much younger and larger than old York, that is much smaller but far more venerable and interesting. York is the capital of Yorkshire, and situated at the junction of the rivers Oase and Foss. It is just half way from London to Edinborough and in a charming part of the country. A fine farming region is all around it. York contains 50,000 inhabitants. It is governed by twelve aldermen (those I saw were fat and portly as I suppose an alderman ought to be) and thirty-six councillors one of whom was Lord Mayor as in the case of London.

York is one of the oldest cities in Great Britain. It was made a Roman station by Agricola in the year seventy-nine, and it became very soon the chief seat of Roman power in Britain. While the people of England were not English but Romans York was a city of the finest importance. The first Metropolitan church in England was built here by Edwin, the North Umbrian King. William, the conquerer, found he had to fight hard a long time before he conquered this brave old city. The first English parliament was held in York in 1160 by King Henry the 2d, and for 500 years afterwards parliaments occasionally assembled in this royal city, as it may well be called. King Richard the 2d had the courts of King's bench and chancery held here for some time. It was near York that Fairfax conquered Prince Rupert on Manston Moor in 1644. How thoroughly time changes the order of things and the sentiments of the people. In old York which once resounded with the marching of Roman soldiers and the battle of Kings. The British Association for the advancement of science was first organized in 1831. Consider the panorama so filled up with strange and exciting pictures which moved on in old York from the year 79 to the year 1885?

There are so many interesting memorials of antiquify in this ancient city that it is exceedingly attractive to the tourist. Here you see remains of Roman towers, temples and walls of the earliest churches. The walls around the city, built in the time of Henry 2d, and perhaps earlier, still encircle a large part of the town. Breaches have been made in the walls for the railroad trains which were not dreamed of when they were built. Now they serve as a promenade. They are high, wide, and solid as a rock, and a romantic place to take a walk. I liked the walls better than the streets for a stroll in the evening twilight.

The principal attraction of York however is the great Gothic Cathedral, called the Yorkminster. It stands on the site of the oldest church in England, King Edwin's, in which this amiable sovereign was baptised on Easter day 627. How long ago the Easter flowers bloomed on that now vanished altar !

There is a portion of the wall now to be seen in the crypt, which is a remnant of this church of long ago. This grand cathedral was begun in 1100, and then they kept on building, Kings, Bishops, Nobles and wealthy persons giving their influence, patronage and money until it was re-consecrated, as the virtue of the first consecration seemed to be quite outgrown by passing centuries, in 1472.

Just look for a moment at the size of this noble christian temple. It is 524 1-2 feet in length, 250 feet wide across the transpets. The western tower is 202 feet high, the central tower 213 feet. The nave is 99 1-2 feet in height, chair 102 feet high. The lantern inside 188 feet high. The great east window 76 feet high and 32 feet wide; the west window 54 feet high and 30 feet wide. The stained glass of the windows is remarkably rich and mellow with age, and is really beautiful enough for the angels to look through, as I suppose they can, if we can only look at them. In the north transept the five lofty lancet windows are known as "the five sisters." If there are any sisters around as sweet and lovely as those windows there, each can say "my face will be my fortune and I can wed as I wish." The great west window is one of the most beautiful in the world, quite equal to the east window in the Carlisle Cathedral. The great east window is the largest in the kingdom, which retains its original glazing done in 1405, what good glaziers they had then. It is also one of the largest gothic windows on the globe.

It was a charming afternoon in June, and the golden sun was dropping down the western sky, when I entered this vast and grand cathedral to attend Divine service. The light fell around me on altar and pillar in all the tints of the rainbow, the music was so soft and sweet and touched me with such wondrous power that its strains are echoing in my memory still.

The Atlantic Church.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

"Unity" must have been misinformed when he stated in your last issue that money was contributed for a church other than a Trinitarian Congregationalist at Atlantic. Before a cent of money was subscribed it was distinctly understood and favored by the people of Atlantic, that the present denomination should build the church, and it was so stated in the heading of each subscription book, so that there was not the possibility of a mistake in the matter. In one sense it is a Union church, for all denominations at Atlantic have united in its building and feel grateful to the Congregational minister, Rev. Robert Gordon, whose interest in our behalf, and unselfishness and zeal has procured for us a church where there was no Protestant church existing.

With all due respect to the spirit that would dispense with the multiplicity of churches, we would say that Atlantic has not been afflicted with the distemper in the past and hopes with one good flourishing church to carry out the views of "Unity" and let this one church suffice for the spiritual necessities of the people who have been so many years without church or pastor. No denomination is kept out but all are invited to worship in a spirit of brotherly love.

Rev. Robert Gordon's course through the whole building has been straight forward and above reproach, without the slightest attempt at misrepresentation, or at anything underhanded, and the Atlantic people appreciate his ability and worthiness and sacrifice, and are only too glad to correct any statements to the contrary.

TRUTH AND JUSTICE.

Boiling Water in Paper.

Take a piece of paper and fold it up as school boys do, into a square box without a lid. Hang this up to a walking stick by four threads, and support the stick on books or other convenient props. Then a lamp or taper must be placed under this dainty cauldron. In a few moments the water will boil.

The only fear is lest the threads should catch fire and let the water spill into the lamp and over the table. The flame must therefore not be too large. The paper does not burn, because it is wet, and even if it resisted the wet it would not be burned through, because the heat imparted to it one side by the flame would be very rapidly conducted away by the other.—Nature.

☞ George P. Rowell, formerly of New York city, has given the rent of a building for five years for the public library at Lancaster, N. H., his native town. Although not quite a year old, the library has 2,500 volumes, and $1,000 worth of books will soon be added.

There is a well-to-do farmer living within a mile and a half of Meredith Centre, N. H., 66 years of age, who never wrote but one letter in his life.

ANNALS OF QUINCY,--1793.

NUMBER IV.

January 25, 1793, the following inhabitants were by order of the Selectmen, warned to depart from the limits of Quincy, within fifteen days.

Thomas Welsh and wife, Barnabas Swift, Seth Joice, Thomas Swift, James McDaniel, James Dorren, Jacob Fowle and family, Mr. Copeland at Judge Cranch's, Luke Hurd and family, Thomas Haskell, Lemuel Withington and family, John Pond and family, James Faxon, Jr., and family, Gains Thayer and family, William Jenkins, and Patty Page at Seth Baxter's.

April 11th, the town voted to build a school house on the "training field," which embraced all the land where the First Church now stands, a part of Washington street, and a large share of Temple street. It was a plain, two-story house and stood about one hundred feet north of the church. The upper story was used as a town hall, and in the winter a "ciphering school" was kept in the same room. On the lower floor the grammer school was taught. The first town meeting was held in this hall on Thursday, December 8, 1796. This building was burnt December 29, 1815, and until a new school house could be constructed, the school was kept in the hall of the house near the easterly corner of Franklin and School streets.

Rev. Anthony Wibird was paster of the First Church at the incorporation of Quincy, having been ordained February 5, 1755. He continued until his death June 4, 1800. The town and church were then together as many votes and items which are to follow will show.

The Quincy Light Infantry was incorporated in 1790, two years before Quincy became a town, and was celebrated for its high military character.

March 26, the County of Norfolk was established.

April 30, the Selectmen laid out a driftway subject to gates and bars from Daniel Baxter's house near the beach to Nut Island, said way to be two rods wide.

August 12. In accordance with the recommendation of President Washington, the town chose Benjamin Beale, Esq., Hon. Richard Cranch and Moses Black, Esq., a committee "to see that there be not any privateer fitted out from this place by any of the citizens of the United States or others against any of the belligerent powers, in order that strict neutrality be kept." The recommendation was called out owing to troubles between France and other foreign powers.

On the same date, the town chose Judge Cranch, Moses Black, Esq., and Ebenezer Miller, Esq., to petition the General Court to have Quincy annexed to Suffolk County.

October 8, John Hancock died.

December 30, it was voted "that in the future the bell will toll for the commencement of divine service at half past ten o'clock A. M., and half past one o'clock P. M.. from the first of November to the first of April; at ten o'clock A.M., and two o'clock P. M. from April to the first of November.

The town voted "not to send" a representative to the General Court.

March 10, the town "voted that the hogs may go at large this year."

On the same day, Benjamin Beale, Esq., Thomas Pratt, Capt. Daniel Baxter, Lieut. Elijah Veazie and Mr. Charles Newcomb were chosen a committee to make and exhibit plans for an almshouse, with cost of erection.

May 12, the town voted to build a poor-house on the town land near "Scants Swamp," and the committee named in the preceding paragraph commenced to build at once on the corner of Coddington and Canal streets, opposite the present location, and where the town pound stood until a year or two ago.

May 17 there was a very heavy frost.

During this year laborers on the highways were allowed two shillings per day.

May 29, the town voted to sell the body seats on the south side of the broad alley of the First Church.

June 19, Capt. Daniel Baxter was authorized to collect the taxes at nine-and-a-half pence per pound. Also to cause the two opposite body seats to be made into two pews, corresponding in every particular with the two the ground was sold for.

September 15, Deacon Jonathan Webb, Benjamin Beale, Esq., and Capt. John Hall were chosen a committee to take or cause to be taken a plan of the town, agreeable to an act of the General Court passed June 18, 1794.

On the same date a committee was chosen to confer with the Rev. Mr. Wibird, about closing the meeting house during his poor health.

October 6, a war with France being anticipated, the United States Government required an army of 80,000 men to be in readiness. At a town meeting held this day it was "voted, to assist in raising the men required by Congress." Men enlisting were allowed fifteen dollars per month (including the continental pay) provided they were called upon to march, and six shillings for each day they were called for to muster or train.

November 3, a committee of three; Capt. John Hall, Capt. Daniel Baxter and Lieut. Alpheus Carey were chosen to assist Capt. Joseph Bracket in procuring his quota of men to go into the army if called for.

A small square school house was built in 1794 at the Farms District on the westerly side of Hancock street, nearly opposite the residence of Mr. Horace Jenkins; its cost was $75.34. In 1829 it was sold to Mr. Samuel Rawson, and is at present attached to the house of Mr. Lemuel Billings as an out-building.

Peter Boylston Adams, Esq., again represented the town in the General Court this year.

WITH SUPPLEMENT.

Memorial Day.

Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., have made the usual arrangements for the observance of Memorial Day in this town next Saturday, and the clerk of the weather will probably arrange his department so as to have a scorching hot day as usual.

To-morrow morning the comrades of the Post will assemble at their hall at nine A. M. for the purpose of accepting an invitation of Rev. B. B. Sherman of the Congregational church, Wollaston, to attend special services there at 10.30. In the evening at 6.30 the Post will again assemble and attend in a body Union Memorial services to be held in the Stone Temple, beginning at 7.30 o'clock. The pastors of the several churches in the Centre will take part in the services, and addresses will be delivered by two or more laymen who were in the war. The public are cordially invited to both services.

Memorial Day, the Post will assemble at its headquarters at 7.30 A. M. and detachments under the command respectively of Junior Vice Commander George H. Osborn, Adjutant W. P. Martin and Warren Dunbar will decorate graves at the various cemeteries. One comrade will be detailed by Samuel DeForest, the officer of the day, to visit and decorate the grave of Col. Paul J. Revere at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

At nine A. M. the Post escorted by the Weymouth Brass Band will visit West Quincy, and at 1.30 P. M. they will again assemble and march to the Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. On their return an oration will be delivered at the Town Hall by Theophilus King, Jr., the orator of the day.

Healthfulness of Quincy.

From all directions come reports of ravages of diphtheria, pneumonia, typhoid fever and other diseases, while in this town of over 12,000 inhabitants not a death has occurred from any cause, between May 3, and May 20. The opinion is expressed that a careful analysis of the registration of deaths would not sustain the statement so frequently made that Quincy is unusually liable to diseases caused by bad drainage and poor water. That the facts do not corroborate the statement is evident.

FAXON HALL. The entertainment at Faxon Hall, last Wednesday evening, May 20th, in connection with Granite Temple of Honor, proved to be one of the pleasantest entertainments that has been held in Quincy for some time. The committee were fortunate in securing the services of Miss Belle Cushman Eaton of Boston, the popular elocutionist, who is capable of entertaining and drawing an audience of herself. The organ solos of our young organist, Mr. William Wilson of Quincy, were highly appreciated. Mr. Frye of Boston in his characterizations was very amusing, and the singing by Miss Grace Adams and Mrs. R. T. Sawyer was very much enjoyed.

REMARKABLE. In connection with the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, Quincy, May 14th, it is a very noteworthy and remarkable fact that it was the fifth golden wedding that has occurred in one family. Mr. Noah Curtis had sixteen children, and five of them celebrated their golden weddings. Mr. and Mrs. Noah Curtis in 1855; Mr. and Mrs. Adam Curtis in 1870; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Baxter in 1879; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Stetson of Braintree in 1877, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, as above stated, on the 14th instant.

FLOWER MISSION. The season of the Flower Mission will commence on Wednesday of next week. The committee hope that a large interest will be taken in the work, and that all who have gardens, or conservatories will send their contributions.

It is earnestly desired that children may be encouraged to help in this charity, as a large quantity of the flowers, are sent to the children's hospital.

Fruit and flowers for the Boston hospitals may be sent on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday next to the house of Mr. George Saville, on Saville avenue.

SUPPLEMENT. In the PATRIOT supplement this week will be found interesting reading. The doings of the Superior Court at Dedham, the teachers' convention at Hyde Park, the Supreme Judicial Court jurors, the "Summary of News" and "In the Vicinity" departments, and several clippings from exchanges.

FIRE. The alarm from Box 37 about 5.35 Wednesday evening was for a slight fire on the roof of the boiler and engine house of McFarland & Smith, on Water street. A bucket of water extinguished the flames, and the alarm was entirely unnecessary.

AUCTION. On Wednesday Mr. E. F. E. Thayer sold at public auction all of the personal property of the late Mr. Caleb Stetson, on Hill Side farm East Braintree; consisting of horses, cattle, pigs, agricultural machinery, barn utensils, wood, manure, potatoes, hay, vinegar, etc. As a farmer Mr. Stetson, having enjoyed a wide reputation for possessing every thing of a first-class character, this attracted a great many buyers from Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Weymouth and other towns. There were over three hundred people present the large proportion of whom were buyers. The horses, four in number, brought good prices and so did the cows, in fact every article did, with perhaps the exception of the manure which brought but 38 and $3.50 per cord, but there was only a small quantity sold at that figure the remainder having been "bid in." A quantity of wood also remained unsold owing to the want of buyers. With these exceptions the sale as we have already said was an excellent one and continued away into the afternoon. There was an abundant collation served at mid-day.

THE GENERAL. Gen. Grant continues to be able to work, and does work considerably every day, assisted by his son and the stenographers. During the past week the cancer in his throat has caused him a good deal of pain, and it is evident that the disease, though quiescent, is slowly but surely fastening still closer upon him.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Ulvilda Baxter, wife of Lemuel Baxter, passed away on Wednesday evening at the age of 63 years, after an illness of less than a week with pneumonia. She was born April 2d, 1822, in Otisfield, Me., where she lived until she was married and came to Quincy, and had been at her death a Point resident for forty-one years. For many years Mrs. Baxter had been an invalid, but a most contented and cheerful person, and seemingly enjoyed life much. She was much respected by all and will be greatly missed from the place. She leaves a husband, two daughters and one son to mourn her loss, who have the heartfelt sympathy of the community. Her funeral takes place to-day (Saturday) at 2.30 o'clock from her late residence.

On Wednesday morning James Warren, youngest son of Walter S. and Mary Redding, died at the age of 21 months.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Mr. Medlar, a graduate of Yale, preached at the Congregational Church on Sunday last, coming as a candidate; he was quite generally liked.

Mrs. H. Farnum Smith starts on Monday for Lincoln, Nebraska, to visit her three sons in that city. Mr. Arthur B. Smith hold the position of chief clerk in the superintendent's office of the Burlington and Missouri River R. R., and both of the others are in the employ of the same corporation.

Dr. James F. Harlow has been quite ill for the past week, but we are pleased to say that he is now much improved.

Mrs. Isabelle Richardson and Mrs. Clara Goodridge, former residents of the Point, have been visiting the place this week.

Mr. Seth Sears, principal of the Washington school, accompanied his A grammar class, numbering eighteen members, to Boston on Friday, to visit the exhibition of the Battle of Gettysburg. This must prove especially interesting and of great benefit to the scholars at this time as the Civil War is the epoch in history now being studied.

THIS AND THAT.

Many Point people were prevented from witnessing the mock trial on Monday evening by the severe rain storm.

We are glad to see that the Village Improvement Society has favored a portion of this district. The extreme Point will need but little attention, being already supplied with many large and beautiful elms of which she is justly proud.

The yard of the Washington school is looking extremely neat this season.

SHIPPING.

Sailed, May 15th, Sch. Helena Russell, Capt. J. B. Mehaffey, for New York, with granite from Field & Wild and others. Capt. Mehaffey who has freighted stone for a number of years from this place, intends this to be his last trip in the Sch. Russell. On arriving in New York he will leave for Maine to oversee the building of a new vessel of which he is to be master.

Arrived, May 17th, Sch. Thomas Booz, Capt. Somers, from Philadelphia, with 415 tons of coal for Sheppard & Sons.

May 20th, Sch. J. Warren, Capt. Sargent, for Quincy, with 75,000 ft. lumber from Calais, Maine, for Benj. Johnson.

May 21st, Sch. Mary Augusta, Capt. Holt, from New York, with 265 tons white ash stove coal for J. Sheppard & Sons.

May 21st, Sch. Wm. Collins, Capt. Daniel Higgins of this place, for Weymouth, with a cargo of coal.

District Court, Quincy.

John W. Owens of Quincy, was brought before His Honor Thursday morning for a third drunk; he plead guilty and was fined $10 and costs.

Thomas F. Hand of Randolph, for being drunk was fined $1 and costs.

William Buchan of Milton, for assault and for disturbing the peace at Milton, was fined $5 and costs and $10 and costs respectively. In default he was committed to Dedham.

J. Newton Clark of Randolph, a common drunkard, was fined $10 and costs and in default committed.

Ralph Mansdell of Weymouth, was fined $1 and costs for being druuk.

Jeremiah White of Quincy, for assault was fined $3 and costs.

Joseph Labreck of Quincy, for maintaining a liquor nuisance, had his case continued to June 15th.

The Italians arrested for the assault at Weymouth were discharged Friday for want of evidence. James Sullivan, the party assaulted has since died from his wounds.

Democratic Club.

The Democrats of the Second Congressional District met at the Democratic State headquarters last Saturday and organized under the name of the Second District Democratic Club, with the following officers:

President, Edw'd Avery of Braintree; Secretary, H. L. Gibbs of Brockton; Treasurer, Sigourney Butler of Quincy; Executive Committee, Lincoln S. Drake of Easton, J. W. Hart, of Weymouth, William A. Hodges of Quincy, Abbot W. Packard of Brockton, John T. Ford of Randolph, Bushrod Morse of Sharon, Philander W. Cobb of Kingston. The Vice Presidents, one from each town in the district, include in their number Hon. Charles G. Davis of Plymouth, Hon. Bushrod Morse of Sharon, W. G. A. Pattee of Quincy, Enos A. Reynolds of Brockton, W. W. Brooks of Canton, John F. Simmons of Hanover.

In the afternoon the club partook of a dinner at the Quincy House, at which speeches were made by Hon. Edward Avery, Hon. Albert Palmer, Josiah Quincy, Lincoln S. Drake of Easton, Major Edward P. Reed of North Abington, Philander Cobb of Kingston, Martin J. Lincoln of Taunton, Charles L. McCann of Brockton, Andrew Shanahan of Rockland, M. Loud of Abington, Sigourney Butler of Quincy, W. G. A. Pattee of Quincy, Benjamin F. Peterson of South Abington, C. H. D. Kendrick of Brockton.—Journal.

☞ The Illinois Legislature has passed a bill prohibiting telephone companies from charging more than $3 per month for the use of a telephone.

☞ The Charlestown Marines returned from Panama on Tuesday, not having lost a man.

Wollaston.

A scaly operation—dressing fish.

Always tired—a good wagon wheel.

F. J. Perry is making an addition to his house on Newport avenue.

The congregation at the M. E. Church still continues to increase.

Merry Mount Division initiated three at their regular meeting on Thursday evening.

The regular monthly sociable by the Congregational Church was given Thursday evening.

The Wollaston Village Improvement Society met with Mr. Charles R. Sherman on Wednesday evening.

The M. E. Sunday school is already making preparations for "Children's day"—the second Sunday in June.

Building is quite lively on Grand View avenue on the "first hill," one house and two cellars are well under way.

The regular meeting of the Musical Association to have been held on Monday evening was postponed one week because of the severe storm.

The Selectmen have granted Samuel A. Merrill an innholder's license and also a billiard and pool license to carry on business in the Wollaston Hotel.

Rev. B. B. Sherman has extended an invitation to Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., of Quincy, to attend his church Sabbath morning, when he will preach special services, commemorative of loyalty and brave deeds.

The "cantata" postponed from Thursday night, was held on Friday evening. A goodly number were present, though not quite as many as on Wednesday. The programme was finely rendered and everything passed off well. Miss Lucy A. Jones was presented with a beautiful boquet. Miss Gracie Pierson received the "gold dollar" prize, for selling the largest number of tickets.

Everybody is talking about the Mock Trial which takes place June 5th and 6th at Wollaston Hall, under the auspices of the Wollaston Village Improvement Society. The third rehearsal takes place at the Knights of Honor Hall Saturday evening of this week. All the details of the business are being arranged by Messrs Simmons, Baker and Fairbanks, which of itself is a sufficient guarantee of success. In fact we fail to remember a single entertainment at Wollaston where the citizens did not ensure success by the most generous patronage. Every dollar of the money made at this entertainment will be carefully expended for the benefit of all citizens.

Be sure and secure a souvenir programme as they promise to be worth retaining. We hope the suggestion offered by the Rev. Mr. Sherman in his address, that a society of children be organized for the benefit of Village Improvement, will result in a flourishing band of youthful tree planters. If you can only succeed in thoroughly interesting the children you are sure of the parents. His idea that the children plant trees and name them after popular poets and authors is well worth a trial.

Hough's Neck.

This beautiful summer resort is beginning to show some life and activity.

Mr. Mears is busy at work getting his place in order; he has added a new piazza to Ocean View house, besides making other improvements.

Mr. Packard has commenced his house on Great Hill, and it promises to be a fine one.

Hotel Dot, otherwise called the Clam Shell, is being enlarged.

We hear them say that two young men from Quincy are to put up a rauche near Mr. Chapman's cottage.

Mr. Graham from Hyde Park will occupy Mr. Chapman's cottage this season.

Mr. Warren D. Howard and wife from Brockton were guests at the Linden House last Sunday; also, Mr. Charlie Collins from Boston and Mrs. Collins from Hyde Park, together with Mrs. Graham from New York.

Mr. Murray's house is nearly completed; it only needs a coat of paint to make a fine appearance.

Mr. Jackson is building quite a roomy barn; also enlarging his house by the addition of three rooms.

Miss Torrey will be in her cottage by Decoration day.

The Seaweeds will visit Hotel Linden Decoration day, and spend Sunday also there.

Mr. William Croucher has a fine cottage this side. He has left Nut Island and come among folks.

Decoration day will see Hotel Linden opened, and it promises to be a busy season with them.

West Quincy.

The Selectmen have appointed Alonzo Glines a police officer without pay.

Twenty or more of the young friends of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fuller surprised them at their residence on Wednesday evening, and spent a few hours enjoyably.

The apothecary store of Mr. Frank A. Read was removed on Thursday to the lot on the opposite side of the street, near the residence of Mrs. Michael Elcock.

Work has been very dull recently, and several workmen are reported to have left town to find work elsewhere.

Daniel F. Desmond, the regular conductor on the Granite Branch, is enjoying a two-weeks' vacation. Conductor J. E. White is supplying his place.

EXPOSITION. The World's Exposition at New Orleans closes on the 31st of the current month. The sum of $95,000 has been raised by subscription to meet the cost of carrying the Exposition over to November next, when it is the intention to reopen it to the public, and, it is expected, under much more favorable auspices.

CONVENTION. The Episcopal diocesan convention now in session at Columbia, S. C., is taking a sweat in the color-line steam chest. The lay members are bent on keeping the colored delegates out of the convention. Wonder if they'll be satisfied to wear a crown and play a harp with them in Heaven?—Milford Journal.

From Cork Clippings, once thrown away, thousands of yards of Linoleum are now made by C. H. Pepper, 72 Federal St., Boston.

☞ Many vines and shrubs are found to have been winter-killed.

☞ Arthur's Secretary of State, Frelinghuysen, died on Wednesday.

There is a decrease in the number of failures reported throughout the country.

Atlantic News.

The communication of "Unity" in last week's PATRIOT on "Church Multiplication in Quincy," especially that part which refers to this part of the town has been severely criticised by many who think the writer either misunderstood the situation or wilfully misrepresented it. In another column of this issue will be found the other side of the story. The publishers have also received another communication on the subject, but as the author was ashamed to give us his name it was doomed to the waste basket.

The new chapel will be dedicated next Thursday evening at seven o'clock and the Rev. F. L. Bristol installed as its pastor. The services will be as follows:

Anthem.
Invocation, Rev. A. E. Winship of Boston.
Hymn.
Scripture Reading, Rev. D. W. Waldron of Boston.
Prayer, Rev. Joshua Coit of Boston.
Historical Address, Rev. R. F. Gordon of Dorchester.
Hymn.
Sermon, Rev. Dr. Duryea of Boston.
Dedicatory prayer, Rev. E. W. Packard of Roxbury.
Doxology.
Benediction, Rev. F. L. Bristol.

In our report of the above services in the PATRIOT next week, we expect to give the historical address of Rev. Mr. Gordon in full.

The grounds about the new chapel are being graded and improved.

The abutters on Newbury street are to set out a row of maple trees on each side of the road. This has long been a barren and uninviting locality and a few trees will greatly improve it.

While Michael Bowen was riding along Hancock street near the Glover estate on the tail board of a team on Monday he was thrown and his collar bone broken. Dr. Sheahan attended him.

The Old Colony have improved about the Atlantic station this week.

The boy will be twenty-one to-morrow. Go around to Gurney's and get treated.

Mrs. Catherine Tripp has been granted an innholder's license to carry on the hotel known as the New Squantum House.

As the result of a child's quarrel May 12, Carmine Gardner was brought before the District Court on Thursday morning, on complaint of George O. Melzard for assault on his little son. Judge Pratt presided, and he thought that while technically there was an assault, that one party was as much to blame as the other and continued the case to September.

Wednesday noon there was a disgraceful drunken row on the Neponset bridge, and a West Quincy man was badly pounded. We learn these rows are of frequent occurrence, being caused by Boston rum.

Milton Gleanings.

Union memorial services will be held to-morrow morning at 10.30 o'clock at Milton Centre.

Civil engineers were engaged Thursday in laying out the proposed new road from the East Milton depot to Hunt's corner.

Miss Henrietta T. Hallowell, assistant teacher at the High School, has resigned and gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., to teach.

Next Tuesday evening the Division will present the farce from Harper's Magazine of last December, entitled "The Elevator." There are thirteen different parts.

The residents of that tract of land which Milton acquires from the town of Quincy are anxious to know if they are now in Quincy or Milton, that they may know where to pay their dog licenses, taxes, etc.

Mrs. Abby A. Hayward, wife of J. E. Hayward, of Braintree, a former resident of this place, died in Braintree on Tuesday. Her funeral occurred Thursday. Her age was 54 years, 3 months and 20 days.

Wm. Buchan of Milton was before the District Court at Quincy this week for assault and for disturbing the peace on Milton Hill. On the first charge he was fined $5 and costs, and on the latter $10 and costs.

A new arrangement has been made in the time and length of session at the High School. Instead of all the pupils attending one session from eight to one o'clock, the second and third classes will now attend from eight to twelve o'clock, and the first class from twelve to two o'clock.

The spelling-match craze was revived in East Milton this week by the local Division of the Sons of Temperance, who passed Tuesday evening pleasantly in that manner. Sixty or more participated, and Mr. O. A. Andrews gave out the words. Miss Susie Brockenshire stood the longest, and among the last to take their seats were Mr. Card of Dorchester Division, and Miss Grace Webster and Alice Babcock.

The Memorial Day committee have arranged the following order of exercises to be observed that day at the cemetery, at 2.30 P. M. An address by Rev. J. H. Gunning of Boston, a dirge by the band, singing quartette, and the regular ceremonies by Huntington P. Walcott Post, No. 102, G. A. R. Citizens and school children are invited to join with the Post, and it is hoped that a large contribution of flowers will be sent to the residence of Mr. Nathan Pond.

SUMMER TRAVEL. The Old Colony Railroad company expects an unusual amount of summer travel this season, to the famous summer resorts along the shores of south-eastern Massachusetts, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket. The state board of health has endorsed the Cape, with its clean fields and beaches of clean sand and mild and refreshing sea breezes, as just the place to restore and preserve health; and thousands of people will heartily endorse that opinion. Supt. French says the western people have a great fashion of going clear to the extreme east end of Nantucket to spend the summer. They are bound to get where there is no land between them and the other side of "the great pond," if possible. If another island should rise still further east, they would be found swarming over upon that.—Middleboro News.

Fish have not been so low for five or six years at Gloucester as at present.

A Middleboro lady had quite a valuable May basket hung for her last week. It contained, besides flowers and other articles, a gift of $20.00 in money.

The Odd Fellows of Hanover are in such encouraging circumstances, that they have in contemplation the building of a hall for their exclusive use.

MEMORIAL DAY.

General Orders of Commander-in-Chief.

In accordance with Rules and Regulations, May 30th will be observed as Memorial Day. As defined by resolution of the Eighteenth Annual Encampment, it will be kept sacred to the memory of our heroic dead. Let no idle merry-making mar its consecrated hours.

Twenty years have passed since our last Grand Review. The death roll of years has added tens of thousands to the half million graves we left behind. The daily tolling bell, the freshly knotted crape, the muffled drum, the slow and solemn procession, tell how fast our comrades join the silent ranks above.

One by one a gallant leader languishes upon his couch of pain, and over myriads of homes the death angel hovers darkly. Hallowed be the day that brings such solemn thoughts as these.

Our comrades sleep well. No tear can disturb their profound slumber; no perfume of flowers make their rest more sweet. But wherever Memorial Day is observed, there rises a higher ideal of American valor, a holier care for the men who saved the Union.

Let posts of the Grand Army everywhere assemble. Enlist all loyal hearts in an observance of the day. Let the women and children be invited. Let all who reverence the flag unite in the ministration of loyalty and affection. The custom of inviting the clergy to hold memorial services on the Sunday preceding Memorial Day is again commended, and comrades should feel it a privilege and duty to attend.

Where there are no graves to gather around, as on the far frontier, memorial services may still be held. Where there are no flowers to wreathe, there still remains that perfect flower of Freedom—the Red, White and Blue. Above each patriot's grave may its benedictions fall.

The flowers of love are immortal. Be it ours to cherish them in our hearts and let their fragrance fill our lives.

By command of JOHN S. KOUNTZ,
Commander-in-Chief.

A LOSS OF $70,000. For nearly three years one of the largest wholesale boot and shoe houses in Boston, doing a business of $2,000,000 a year, has been systematically robbed, the value of the stock stolen aggregating upward of $70,000. The victims are Messrs. Joseph R. and John F. Winch, in business at No. 130 Federal street, under the firm name of Winch Bros. One of their salesmen and two retail dealers have been arrested. The first intimation of loss, was at the close of the year 1883, when their accounts would not balance. A deficiency in stock of nearly $28,000 was discovered.

A TERRIBLE LEAP. Robert E. Odlum, a professional swimmer, leaped from the Brooklyn bridge, N. Y., on Tuesday, and died in a few minutes after striking the water. He has had a desire to hop from this bridge, and thought it could be done in safety. He has figured in several jumping feats on the Potomac river; the highest was 100 feet. The last leap was 140 feet. He has recently been employed as clerk in the Willard House, in Washington, his native city.

NEW ACQUIREMENTS. The Shepard of the Danvers Mirror is gradually getting a flock together, the latest arrival being a daughter on Tuesday last. If this dear old terpischorean artist don't learn some new steps within the next year we shall smile. The warm drink waltz, cold oil cloth polka and colic schottische will be some of the new acquirements.—Middleboro News.

As the Middleboro News man has been married but a few months, it puzzles us to know how he is so well posted.

HEADQUARTERS

PAUL REVERE POST 88, G. A. R.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

QUINCY, MAY 21, 1885.

General Order, No. 1.

In compliance with the laws of our order, our established customs, and general order No. 15, from National Headquarters, the Comrades of this Post will observe Saturday, May 30th, as Memorial Day.

This is the day of all the year the most hallowed to us; the day on which we gladly leave the routine of our daily avocations and illustrate again our loyalty to the memory of our deceased Comrades by gathering at the "Bivouacs of the Dead," and performing the sadly pleasant duties of decoration peculiar to our order.

On Sunday, May 24th, the Post will assemble at Headquarters, at 9 A. M., for the purpose of attending Memorial services at the Congregational Church, Wollaston; also at 6.30 P. M., to attend Union services at the First Church. All old soldiers and sailors are cordially invited to be present and unite with us.

Our many friends are cordially invited to send contributions of food to Revere Hall, on Saturday morning, May 30th, for the noon collation.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

1. The Post will assemble promptly at 7.30 A. M. at Headquarters.
2. A detail of Comrades under the command of Jun. Vice Commander George H. Osborn, accompanied by the Chaplain of the day, Rev. D. M. Wilson, will proceed to the National Sailors Home Cemetery, hold appropriate services, and deposit a Floral Offering to the memory of the departed Comrades.
3. A detail of Comrades, under the command of Adjutant W. P. Martin, will decorate the graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.
4. A detail of Comrades, under the command of O. G. Warren Dunbar, will decorate the graves in Hancock and English Cemeteries.
5. Officer of the Day, Samuel D. De Forest, will make a detail of one Comrade, and proceed to Mount Auburn Cemetery, and deposit a wreath marked "Post 88, G. A. R." on the grave of Col. Paul J. Revere.
6. Chaplain George W. Collier will take charge of invited guests.
7. At 9 A. M. the Post will form in front of Headquarters, and escorted by the Weymouth Brass

Full Moon, May 28th, 3.31 P. M.

THE effort of the stone-cutters and tool-sharpeners of Quincy to secure a half holiday Saturday afternoons seems worthy of all encouragement. A large majority are in favor of it—474 to 149—and the money sacrifice will fall upon the laborers themselves, and not their employers. The men are working by the piece, and they are willing to surrender the opportunity of earning a little more money in order that they may have a little more time of their own. This is not because they have such large wages that they feel that they can afford luxuries, but because they are willing to pay a little for what they feel to be a necessity. They need time for recreation, for reading, for the enjoyment of nature, for doing little chores about home, for visiting and shopping. Surely these are not unreasonable wants! Life should be other than ceaseless toil, and when by sacrifices voluntarily assumed men aim to make it something else, they should be encouraged. Furthermore such a release from work has again and again been proposed as one of the best means to save Sunday from entire secularization. Give workmen, it is reasoned, a chance for recreation and rest Saturday afternoon, and they will be more ready to perform Sunday duties. We do not see why it may not be so. At least we cannot expect men who have only Sunday in which to rest and get acquainted with their children, to be very eager to attend church.

So far the movement has met with ready response from a number of firms. Some have opposed it, but we trust with better reason than one employer who wrote, "If you can show me by argument, pro and con, that it is to the interest of the workmen of the town to loaf round the streets half a day a week, then I am with you." It is to be charitably presumed that the writer of the words did not know their injustice. Plainly it is calumny pure and simple, to assume that the time asked for would be wasted in loafing. For the most part it would be well spent.

THAT was a notable anecdote told by Admiral Farragut of old Captain Wilson who lived and died in our town. The captain was one of the best pilots that has ever taken vessels in and out of Boston port. He was the favored pilot of the commanders of government vessels. On one occasion he piloted a large war vessel, of which Farragut was lieutenant, into the harbor. As she was passing through the Narrows the lookout reported a schooner directly ahead. "God help her," said Wilson, "we shall have to run her down. I can't alter our course an inch; the water shoals rapidly on both sides of us." And run her down they did, with what consequences is not related. The Admiral said he always remembered Captain Wilson's conduct and when he had a difficult task to perform he sternly went ahead, regardless of what might happen.

THE American Benevolent Society of Mexico, whose object is to afford relief to deserving unfortunate citizens of the United States, who find themselves in a strange land and in distress, have issued an appeal to the public for aid. The death of John T. Bolton, manager of the second Raymond-Mexico Excursion party, has forcibly brought the matter to public attention. While French, Belgians, and other nationalities have hospitals and cemeteries, Americans have neither. The United States Minister is president of the Society and A. Jacot, treasurer. Contributions will be thankfully received.

BURTON and Cunningham, the two dynamiters, who employed the "resources of civilization," as Phelan facetiously puts it, to blow up the Parliament houses, have been doomed to penal servitude for life. What a pity they hadn't turned their civilizing attentions to Quincy town hall! Instead of penal servitude they would have earned the freedom of our future city and the caresses of its possible citizens. Next to the receiving tomb in the old cemetery it is the most hideous granite interior we have. Neither was made for living men.

THE Boston police are not again going to give any person or paper an opportunity of telling them what their duty is. The Record got them on the hip with regard to the gamblers, but they have redeemed themselves by their successful raid upon the preachers. With swift spontaneity they spotted the Rev. A. J. Gordon and many co-laborers preaching on the common last Sunday, and promptly cited them to appear in court this week. Even our "millionaire policeman" can't excel that.

THE Hon. George Lunt, who died in Boston last Saturday at the age of 81 years, was brother to the Rev. W. P. Lunt, one of the former pastors of the Stone Temple. In their quiet, modest bearing and scholarly habits they were much alike; both had the poetic gift, and both died regretted and honored. The Reverent Mr. Lunt died March 21, 1857.

NOW that the Riel rebellion is crushed and order restored, the half-breeds may get some measure of justice done them. What a pity they could not have received justice in the first place; then there would have been no war.

THE account of the typhoid epidemic in Plymouth, Penn., is instructive reading for those who think a Board of Health is a superfluous institution. Bad water and poor drainage caused 841 cases of fever, 55 of which have so far proved fatal.

DR. W. L. FAXON.

Hearing on a Petition for Restraint and Guardianship.

JUDGE BUMPUS APPOINTS JOSEPH W. ROBERTSON.

On Monday evening, despite the exceedingly inclement weather, four hundred or more assembled in the court room in the Town House, to witness the hearing on the petition for a guardian for a well-known townsman, Dr. W. L. Faxon. Hon. E. C. Bumpus, was judge, and N B. Furnald was clerk. Joseph W. Lombard, who has faithfully filled the position of crier for a long time, was in his accustomed place and opened the court.

Proceeding the trial of Dr. Faxon, the following cases were disposed of: Commonwealth vs. H. H. Faxon for maintaining a liquor nuisance; J. Q. A. Field vs. Dr. J. A. Gordon for trespass; Dr. Everett vs. H. H. Faxon for maintaining a liquor nuisance; Commonwealth vs. the same for maintaining a barbed wire fence; and others.

Dr. Faxon was represented by John L. Eldridge, Esq.; and James H. Slade, Esq., appeared for the prosecution. The following jury were impaneled: Mrs. A. A. Claflin (forewoman), Miss Floretta Vining, Mrs. E. W. H. Bass, Mrs. Wilson Tisdale, Mrs. James H. Stetson, H. T. Whitman, R. D. Wentworth, George H. Locke, William A. Hodges, W. H. Cobb, John B. Bass, James H. Stetson.

Among the questions asked the forewoman to learn her qualifications were: Her age? Could she read? Could she give a verdict without consulting her husband? Did she think her husband, if he was on the jury, would give a verdict without consulting her? We did not think she was as young as she represented, but when she said she could read anything but the poetry in the PATRIOT we thought she might have been younger. The third and fourth questions were answered respectively "yes" and "no," the latter after some hesitation.

The following is a copy of Chapter 3426, Section 146,357 of the Revised Statutes, under which the petition was brought.

"Whenever any citizen, inhabitant, resident, dweller, occupier, lodger, inmate, tenant, sojourner, settler, squatter, colonist, denizen, townsman, villager, native or any other person of whatever designation or description, in any city, town, village, hamlet, neighborhood, settlement, vicinity or place, of whatsoever name or nature, by the persistent, obstinate, wilful, positive, tenacious, stubborn, stiff-necked, dogmatic, inexorable, mulish, headstrong or fanatical advocacy of any public or private scheme, plan, device. design, proposition, system, expedient, contrivance, stratagem, trick, intrigue or machination, obviously impracticable, infeasible, unachievable, extravagant, imbecile, illogical or absurd, shall become a source of public annoyance, burden, plague, infliction or calamity, or a disturber, destroyer, extinguisher, exterminator, annihilator or

SUBVERTER OF THE PUBLIC PEACE,

concord, agreement, unison, quiet or harmony, or shall in any wise, way, manner or method, so behave, operate, act, perform, proceed or carry on, as to raise in the public mind a serious doubt of his mental capacity, intelligence, instinct, judgment, wit, shrewdness, soundness of brain sufficiency, or a well grounded apprehension, nervousness, disquietude, solicitude, anxiety, distrust, trepidation, alarm, dread of danger, peril, jeopardy or insecurity to the public welfare, prosperity, thrift or success; if he shall be permitted, allowed, suffered, privileged, warranted or authorized to remain at large, it shall be the duty, business, affair, concern, task, work, job, office, charge, function or province of any justice upon the petition, request, demand, suit, solicitation, prayer, supplication, application, appeal or motion of seven or more well-known, conservative, intelligent, long headed, sagacious, astute, discerning, rational. sensible, enlightened, unprejudiced, discreet, prudent citizens, upon whom no suspicion, doubt, distrust or misgiving in respect to mental capacity, magnitude, dimension, volume, largeness greatness, amplitude, massiveness or comprehensiveness, rests, to cause the accused to be brought before him, and to determine, judge, deduce, conclude, infer, ascertain, arrive at, estimate, review, settle, decide, arbitrate and pronounce upon the evidence presented, whether as aforesaid, requires, exacts or demands that said accused be placed under restraint, hinderance, prevention, interruption, obstruction, interception, inhibition or embargo, either in some approximate asylum, sanctuary, refuge, retreat, hospital, infirmary, or under guardianship, tutelage, wardship, safe keeping, coercion or other form of discipline, and the said justice shall have authority, right, privilege, power, license, liberty, warranty to make such disposition, arrangement, decision, adjudication or determination of the case as the circumstances, situation, position, attitude, predicament, contingencies, emergencies or exigences of the case and the public welfare as aforesaid requires. And it shall be the duty of said justice, upon the hearing, to receive evidence of all acts, performances, eccentricities or idiosyncracies of the same accused, whether or not specially recited, stated, mentioned, referred to or suggested herein, bearing directly, indirectly, or not at all upon the main issue to be tried."

THE PUBLIC WELFARE,

A petition was then presented signed by Charles F. Adams, Jr., Jonas Shackley, Seth Dewing, Cotton Centre Johnson, Joseph Silva, William H. Glennon, Henry H. Faxon, Edwin W. Marsh, John Q. A. Field, A. W. Sprague, Jocko Ring and Quong Wah Lee, representing that Dr. Faxon had violated the provisions of the above chapter.

Lawyer Slade called as witnesses Luther W. Anderson, John G. Faxon, William B. Rice, R. F. Claflin, Edwin W. Marsh, Dr. J. F. Welch and Charles A. Foster, who each testified that the defendant was unsafe to be at large, that he was continually button-holeing everybody and everywhere, and endeavoring to make them adopt his progressive ideas. The testimony of his son, "Johnny" was amusing and very damaging to the Doctor.

For the defence Lawyer Eldridge called the defendant, Dr. Faxon, and Dr. J. A. Gordon and Theophilus King, Jr. Drs. Welch and Gordon testified as experts, and of course for the side upon which they were called.

The rigid examinations by the counsels, and the lively words that passed between them were interesting to the spectators, and the oaths administered by the clerk were original and novel. The whole was a very interesting "mock trial" in the interest of the Quincy Village Improvement Society, and a grand success; being admirably planned, well executed, and the only regret is that the evening should have been so very stormy.

H. T. Whitman, one of the jury, slipped out before the trial was over, ostensibly to catch a train, but he must know that it was in violation to law, and the judge should have had him arrested.

BRIBING. The gas monopoly in New York City, it is openly charged, spent $100,000 in the Legislature, bribing members to defeat gas legislation calculated to loosen their grip on the public throat.

The Atlantic House at Nantasket will open May 30th for the season.

Petition to the District Court.

Through the efforts of Special Officer Faxon, the following petition has been drawn and presented to Judge Humphrey and his associates. The petition was headed by Henry H. Faxon, and among the others we notice the names of the Selectmen, all the constables, the town clerk and treasurer, and a dozen or more influential citizens:

To the Honorable Justices of the District Court of East Norfolk:

GENTLEMEN: For four years the voters of Quincy, by an emphatic No vote, have declared against licensing the sale of intoxcating liquors in that town. The law has been rigidly enforced by the police, but there are a few rumsellers still lingering in the vicinity whom it is difficult to convict in consequence of their debauched patrons lying on the witness stand.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Quincy, therefore pray your Honors that, in the event of trial and conviction of those who are now defying the law, you will not only impose heavy fines but also add imprisonment in the House of Correction, in order that the transgressors may fully realize the true weight and significance of the popular condemnation of their vile traffic.

Quincy, April 16, 1885.

For the Patriot.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, MAY 18, 1885.

Changes in the Government Departments here, dismissals, new appointments, and new rules are matters of absorbing interest in the official and clerical circles of Washington now, while the post offices, and the people who are to fill them, are the chief objects of importance to the Democrats now coming to Washington from all sections of the country. The offices of the towns and villages are given more attention than those of the cities. These smaller post offices are being filled at the rate of one hundred per day, or about one appointment for every five minutes of a working day. Postmaster General Vilas has a great deal of night work to do in order to keep things going with the rapidity deemed necessary.

In making up the Labor Bureau, Secretary Lamar did not give one appointment to a woman. Some strong-minded women who were opposed to such discrimination on account of sex went to him and reasoned the question, urging him to at least consider the appointment of women on the commission. The Cabinet Officer replied to their arguments with gallant speeches and chivalrous assertions to the effect that women ought to be taken care of, that they should be sheltered from all rough contact with the world. He said something about regarding women as tender flowers and twining vines, all of which his interviewers agreed was very pretty in romances, but very unpractical when applied to women who are struggling for bread or sealskin jackets. They persisted however, until they extracted from Mr. Lamar the promise to think about it.

Although Saturday has been set apart by the President as his day of seclusion, he saw fit to make three exceptions to this rule on Saturday last. He received as visitors, Speaker Carlisle, who stayed about two hours, ex-postmaster General Gresham, who stayed an hour, and Senator Blackburn of Kentucky, who also made a long call. Mr. Carlisle talked about policies and not about politics, which was appreciated by the President after a week's consideration of patronage. General Gresham congratulated him on the success of his administration thus far. It was the first time he had met Mr. Cleveland.

A new rule regarding the leaves of Department clerks has been announced. The thirty days annual leave is not to be reduced, but absence from sickness as well as from other causes is to be deducted from the month's vacation. Heretofore sick leaves have been permitted in addition to the thirty days, and have in many instances permitted clerks to draw salary for two or more months while absent from their desks. This plan has been recommended by the Treasury investigation commission, and will be adopted in all of the Departments. It is understood that the President is also of the opinion that thirty days absence from office is all that should be permitted in a year, and that sick leaves should be the loss of the clerk rather than the Government.

An old rule which has long been disregarded is now to be rigorously enforced in the Departments. It is that which forbids more than one member of a family to be employed in one branch of the Government service. The system that will be adopted to discover these relationships is so formed as to cover all possible cases, and any prevarication will cause the dismissal of all concerned in it. Another system that is to be disposed of, is the accrediting of Department clerks to States and Territories where they do not belong. Last week a Congressman asked for a position for a lady who had passed the civil service examination, and he was told that the quota from his state and district was full. He knew this could not be true, and on investigation he found seven clerks credited to his own and the adjoining Congressional district, who had never been within the borders of the state mentioned.

ADAMS.

REBUKE. The following from Hyde Park Gazette, whose editor is an influential and popular member of the House, is a deserved rebuke to certain great-little men in the Senate:

The bigheads of the Senate are on the Judiciary Committee. The House passed a bill, on petition of the Suburban Press Association, in relation to legal advertisements, and the Senate committee quietly "sat down" on the bill and refused to give the petitioners a hearing.

OLD COLONY LEAGUE GAMES.

Braintrees, 5; St. Johns 2.

The game at South Braintree last Saturday afternoon between the St. Johns of Quincy, and the Braintrees, in the Old Colony League, drew together 300 or 400 lovers of the sport, and was an interesting, well played game. The fielding of the home club was remarkably fine, but the batting of both sides was weak, the few runs being obtained mostly by errors. Several struck out on each team, but the pitcher of the St. Johns was most successful in this respect. Two of the decisions of the umpire—that of Whitcomb in the sixth and Burrell in the seventh—were very questionable and we think should have been decided safe. The playing of the St. Johns was much better than on the opening game, the club having been somewhat re-organized, and it is expected they will play a very good game after practicing together.

The Braintrees went to the bat first but were blanked in the first two innings, four of the men striking out, and the other two retiring at first. At the third Coughlin took first on error and reached the third on a fumble of O'Dowd's hit, on which the latter reached second. Burrell should have been out at first, but a wild throw permitted him and Coughlin and O'Dowd to score. Woodsum who had reached first, was out on stealing second and Downey flied out. Laughlin took first on balls, and advanced to third on a muffed fly from Mulligan's bat, by which the latter reached second, but Laughlin was the third out in trying to steal home. The Braintrees were unable to score in the fourth and fifth innings being retired in one-two-three order, two men striking out. In the sixth Downey reached second on a pass third strike and scored on Mulligan's two baser, McLaughlin having fouled out. Whitcomb followed with a base hit, and McLaughlin advanced and scored on Chamberlain's hit. Whitcomb was declared out in stealing third and Coughlin closed the innings by striking out. In the last three innings the runs were not increased, although Woodsum, Mulligan and O'Dowd made base hit, but each in different innings. The total runs were five.

The St. Johns were not as fortunate. Barry was the only man to reach first in the first, and he was out in stealing second. Sullivan retired in the same manner in the second after having made a base hit, and no one reached first in the third. Four men struck out in these innings. In the fourth Lynch made a base hit and reached third on error. Downey fouled out. Lynch was brought home by Barry, who also scored by an error at second. Westland and Sullivan retired on fouls. It was one-two-three order in the fifth, and the sixth did not realize a run, but Lynch was left on base. No Quincy man saw first in the seventh or eighth, and two struck out. In the ninth Lynch opened with a good one to left field but it was captured. Downey reached first on error, McLaughlin retired by a foul, and Downey closed the game in trying to steal second. And the two runs scored on the third innings was the total.

OTHER OLD COLONY GAMES.

At Readville last Saturday, the game between the Rangers of East Weymouth, and the Hyde Parks, was won by the former, by the score of 11 to 10, although Thompson of the Hyde Parks, struck out nineteen of the Rangers.

At South Abington, the Neponsets won their game with the Samosets of that place, by a score of 7 to 2.

The game at East Weymouth, Wednesday, between the Rangers of that place and the Braintrees, the two clubs which were previously tied for first position, was watched with much interest. It was won by the Braintrees by a score of 15 to 4.

The following is the standing of the clubs in the Old Colony League.

| | Played | Won | Lost | Per cent |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Braintrees, | 3 | 3 | 0 | 1.00 |
| Rangers, | 3 | 2 | 1 | .66 |
| Neponsets, | 2 | 1 | 1 | .50 |
| Hyde Parks, | 2 | 1 | 1 | .50 |
| Samosets, | 2 | 0 | 2 | .00 |
| St. Johns, | 2 | 0 | 2 | .00 |

NOTES.

The PATRIOT is desirous of giving all the base ball news in the vicinity, and hope the secretaries of the clubs, or the scorers will send the result of all games, and other items of interest, that the object may be obtained.

This afternoon the Hyde Parks play at the South Quincy grounds, with the St. Johns; the Neponsets will be at Braintree, and the Rangers and Samosets will be matched at East Weymouth.

Next Saturday, Memorial Day, each club will play two games, the Neponsets being here in the afternoon. The St. Johns go to South Abington in the morning.

CRICKET.

The opening game in the schedule recently adopted by the Quincy, Chelsea, Roxbury and Brockton clubs, will be played in this town next Saturday, Memorial Day, between the Roxburys and Quincys. The local team awakened quite an interest in the sport last season, and have several good players.

RINKS.

The six-day race on roller skates, at New York, ended at ten o'clock last Saturday night, and a remarkable record was made. Snowden, the winner of the twenty-four hour race at Quincy, came in a good first, with 1166 miles, 1 lap to his credit, Boyst had 1148 miles, 3 laps; Maddocks 1100 miles, 7 laps; Shock 1026 miles; Francis 910 miles, 7 laps; and Harriman 800 miles. The best previous record was 1000 miles, by Donovan.

The exhibition given at the Coliseum, on Friday evening, and Saturday afternoon and evening of last week, by Dr. Sawtelle's educated St. Bernard dogs, was very interesting and much admired by many. They were a beautiful collection of dogs and exceedingly well trained.

Mr. J. H. T. Hopkins, who has been the floor manager of the Coliseum since its opening, has resigned his position to become manager of the Stoneham rink.

The game of polo between the Niagaras and Crescents, two teams composed entirely of young ladies, at the rink Tuesday evening, was won by the former in three straight. The playing was very good, and their conduct ladylike, if ladies can be ladylike in playing polo.

GEN. LOGAN RE-ELECTED. The deadlock in the Illinois Legislature, which has existed since the session opened in January, was broken on Tuesday by the re-election of Senator Logan, who received the solid Republican vote, just enough for his election. The result is hailed with the greatest delight by the Republicans.

About a hundred bicycles are owned and in use in Brockton, and a local dealer says there is a continued demand for these vehicles.

Beware of Scrofula
Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum
William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well." "My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

KEEP IT PURE.
The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few causes. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess this power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1881.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.,

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While casting about for the best remedy to do this, your "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am cure of that. Yours, &c.,
MATTHEW FARRELL.
24 Adams Street.

In all cases when a consultation is deemed desirable,
Address:—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. But, if you have not done so, adopt "FAVORITE REMEDY" as a household friend.

MALARIA.
As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S
FAVORITE REMEDY
has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

A Day at Quincy Woods.

We sailed one day
Across the bay,
For Quincy Woods our course we bent
To picnic there was our intent,
But landing on that festal shore
Mosquitoes stung us o'er and o'er.

Yet we must stay,
There spend the day,
Until the lagging tide's return,
Brave men and babes for home did yearn,
Pestered by legion we crouched to dine
On chowder hot and coffee fine.

When twilights' ray
Streamed o'er the bay
We gladly sought our tiny boat
Upon the wave-washed beached afloat,
Homeward with joy our oars we sped,
A glance we gave the shore we fled.

The mellow light
Of coming night,
And beams of rising moon between
O'er-veiled it now with silvery sheen,
Lo! before our wondering eyes
It seemed an earthly paradise.

When years advance
May we thus glance
On mellow light the tender hue
Of times long vista shining through,
From life's past troubling vexing care,
Silvering the memories there.

Farm and Garden.
A New Enemy to the Bean.

The conflict which is in constant operation between man and the creeping things of the earth is so equally balanced that there is some doubt as to which will conquer. No sooner does man find some effectual remedy to check the ravages of one insect than another makes its appearance to devour vegetation that has been supposed to be proof against the whole insect tribe. We look back to our boyhood days and call to mind the luscious currants that grew almost spontaneously, with no enemy to molest them, and hanging in large clusters on the bushes until September, how little did we then suspect that some creeping worm would come and destroy every green leaf before the currants could grow, and thus leave the half green fruit to bake in the sun. And the potato fields of our boyhood, how green and luxuriant they kept until the cool nights of autumn came; how little did we dream of the sickening odor of the rot which comes in a night and lays low the tops and makes the tubers a disgusting mass of corruption. But no sooner did we get familiar with this new disease then came a disgusting slug to strip every leaf from the stalks before the blast was ready to destroy them. Thus one thing after another has been laid low by some new enemy, and is only saved by persistent efforts directed by the sharpened wits of man. But one product of the garden has been spared from destructive insects, and has been gathered untarnished from insect pollution; it has been looked upon as a product so clean and so good that every New England Christian is expected to have his stomach filled with it before he goes to listen to the Sabbath sermon. Who has ever suspected that a little insignificant enemy to our own Boston bean would suddenly make his appearance to destroy the purity and the good qualities of an article so necessary to mark the weekly culinary eslendar.

This new enemy appears in the shape of a very small worm that works in the bean, evidently during the autumn, and passes the winter in the bean to come out in the spring like the pea bug. It does not appear quite as large as the pea bug, but makes up in numbers what it lacks in size, four or five sometimes being found in a single small bean. If this enemy should spread as other similar enemies do it would not only be a serious drawback on the production of the bean, but it would be a death blow to the bean pot, for our New England baked beans would be among the things of the past. What are we to do about this new enemy, will any one tell us?—Massachusetts Ploughman.

☞ The orchard this month will require but little attention, providing it has been attended to earlier in the season; possibly the tent caterpillars will have to be looked after, and if the farmer has time he will look after the borers at the roots of the trees. After they are all removed a cone of fresh gravel or coarse sand should be heaped around each tree to prevent the miller from laying her eggs near the roots during the summer. The young orchard should be kept well cultivated, and may be planted with potatoes or beans, but never with Indian corn.

☞ Quinces can be raised as readily as apples or pears. But the ground where they are growing needs to be kept from grass and weeds; and it is an excellent practice to spread ashes of any sort and lime around the trees, and dig such fertilizing material into the soil. Quinces sell as high as $10 a barrel, and they have always been high.—Germantown Telegraph.

Anecdotes.

"What is repentance?" queried the Sunday school teacher.

"To be sorry for doing wrong," said the good boy.

"Were you ever sorry for anything you did?"

"Yes'm," said the bad boy.

"What made you sorry?"

"Great Jehosaphat! Wasn't you ever spanked?

"Yer Honor, will you excuse me from serving?"

"State your excuse," said the judge, "or take your seat among the jury men."

"I has ther itch, yer Honor."

"Scratch him off, Mr. Clerk," said the judge.

Teacher—What did Solomon mean when he said, "All is vanity and vexation of spirit?"

Boy—Dunno, 'less it was 'cause his seven hundred mothers-in-law visited him at once.

Mrs. Gadabout—"Well, they say woman is a conundrum, anyway."

Mr. G.—"You are just about the easiest conundrum I ever did see."

Mrs. G.—"I am? Why?"

Mr. G.—"I never come home without finding you out."

'Put out your tongue a little further,' said a doctor to a lady patient.

'Do you think, sir, there is no end to a women's tongue?'

Miscellany.
For the Patriot.
Letter from Brooklyn, N. Y.

MAY 16th, 1885.

Wednesday was a red-letter day for us. After years of vexatious litigation the Elevated Railroad is opened for a distance of five miles and a half from Fulton Ferry. It is carrying 30,000 passengers daily, and soon will increase accommodations to 100,000. A mile and a half more will soon bring this line to East New York and soon branches will extend in other directions.

The great Seney Hospital on which this millionaire spent $400,000, and which for a year has been standing incomplete, is to be finished and occupied within a year. It has a commanding situation on Prospect Hights and is to be under Methodist management.

The past week has been Anniversary week in New York as in Boston, the shadow of a by-gone custom. Most of the meetings were purely of a business character. I attended but one society, that of national and international importance, thirty-six years old, yet only four members besides myself were present.

A year ago this week the Wall street panic took place and not a few have rueful memories thereof.

European travel this summer, it is said, will be lighter than usual, on account of threatened war and cholera as well as for other causes.

A strong inducement last Tuesday was given me to resume for the fourth summer preaching at Tolman's Square Church, London. The pastor of this large and prosperous church is to be absent five weeks, visiting this country again. Another call came from Bristol, but the continued illness of my eldest son forced me to cable a dispatch declining the urgent overtures. So instead we have chosen a three months' residence on Golden Hill, Kingston, in the Catskill district, on the Hudson, from which you may expect hillside jottings later on.

Our Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. will occupy their new and elegant quarters in the autumn, the finest of the kind in the country. The membership is about 1500.

At a meeting of the New York Academy of Arithropology in this city, Dr. Sizer not long since gave a valuable paper on "Our Unseen Enemies," the germs which produce cholera and other diseases. An extract is enclosed. The Academy is publishing papers on different subjects connected with sociological and psychic science. A summer session at Ocean Grove is expected.

Sewerage.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

As I was visiting in your town a few days ago, my attention was called to the problem of sewerage for Quincy, and surely the sanitary condition of things are not what they should be and perhaps the town has not found out what valuable human life is.

The question of what should be done with sewerage is one that no town or city can afford to pass lightly over; for in a large measure the health and morals of a place depends on its sanitary condition.

If the town does not wish now for a complete system of sewerage, a large share of the evil may be averted by the use of an odorless excavator, such as is used in many large towns and some cities. A pump fills a tank on wheels and then it is carted off to a piece of land that needs emitching and there dumped, and in this way, at a small expense, cesspools and vaults may be kept clean without the danger commonly attending their cleaning. To see a cesspool full and flowing into a gutter, filling the air within a quarter of a mile with fumes that will generate all types of fever, is something that sadly needs prompt attention.
ENGINEER.

POETICAL. A box containing trailing arbutus for "John G. Whittier, Amesbury, Mass.," contained besides the address, these lines:

"Please handle, Uncle Sam, with care,
Don't let the box get broken,
They're bound for one who's loved where'er
The English language's spoken."

☞ The new clock in the Board of Trade Building in Chicago weighs ten tons. It is made of bronze, iron and steel. The pendulum alone weighs 750 pounds. The bell weighs 4,500 pounds more. The dials are ten feet ten inches in diameter.

☞ England imports nearly $25,000,000, worth of cheese a year. The average price paid for the imported article is a little less than eleven cents per pound. Canada sends a higher priced article than the United States, and the largest amount of any one country in comparison with the previous years. The increase from the United States has been slight, and the product of Holland cannot compete with American cheese.

☞ The Jacksonville (Fla.) Herald has this counsel for the season: By stretching a string near the ceiling of a room flies will use it to light upon instead of the walls, that can thus be kept all the summer free from fly specks. This a good thing for bald-headed people.

Household Receipts.

BREAKFAST CAKE. Two tablespoons of sugar, two tablespoons of butter, two eggs, one (scanty) quart of flour, one teaspoon of soda, two of cream tartar. Bake twenty minutes in a quick oven. Eat hot with butter.

FRIED BREAD. Take a half pint of sweet milk and add a well beaten egg and a little salt; dip in this slices of bread (if dry let it soak a minute), and fry on a buttered griddle until it is a light brown on each side. This is a good way to use up dry bread.

PRUNE PUDDING. Three quarters of a pound of prunes stewed and sweetened; remove the pits, cutting up the prunes somewhat; beat the whites of four eggs on a large platter and gradually add to them the prunes when cold, beating continually; turn into a pudding dish and bake about twenty minutes; beat stiff a teacup of cream, sweetened, and spread over the pudding when cold.

ASPARAGUS SALAD. A good salad is made of asparagus. Boil some asparagus in well-salted water; drain and cut in pieces, and when thoroughly cold pour over it a dressing made of oil and vinegar (twice as much oil as vinegar), seasoned with pepper and salt.

Alcohol, Upon Nervous System.

In the progressive influence of alcohol upon the nervous system, there are according to the researches of Dr. Richardson, four successive stages.

1. The stage of excitement.*

The first effect of alcohol, as we have already described, is to paralyze the nerves that lead to the extreme and minute blood-vessels, and so regulate the passage of the blood through the capillary system. The vital force, thus drawn into the nervous centers drives the machinery of life with tremendous energy. The heart jumps like the mainspring of a watch when the resistance of the wheels is removed. The blood surges through the body with increased force. Every capillary tube in the system is swollen and flushed, like the reddened nose and cheek.

"The true family is the type of the true stater. It is the absence of the feminine from the conduct of the governments of earth that makes them more or less savage. There are fathers of the state, but no mothers."—Rev. S. J. May, Syracuse, N. Y.

*"The reader should be careful to note here that alcohol does not act upon the heart directly, and cause it to contract with more force. The idea that alcohol gives energy and activity to the muscles is entirely false. It really, as we have seen weakens muscular contraction. The enfeeblement begins in the first stage and continues in the other stages with increased effect. The heart beats quickly merely because the resistance of the minute controlling vessels is taken off, and it works without being under proper regulation. What is called a stimulation or excitement is, in absolute fact, a relaxation, a partial paralysis of one of the most important mechanism in the animal body. Alcohol should be ranked among the narcotics."—Richardson.

Fashion Notes.
For the Patriot.
NEW YORK FASHIONS.

FASHIONABLE HEIGHTS.

A stylish tournure if stood on end would be highest among fashionable heights. Turned horizontally, it is of lengths the longest, and more than counterbalances high hats, high-dressed hair, high necks and high heels. The most perplexing, too, since what modiste may bring about a graceful fall of drapery over such sharp projecting cliff of whalebone or stuffed hair, or what manufacturer may render light what nature has made heavy? They all try it, and they fail. Had manufacturers in comparison have an easy time of it, since crowns may readily be sent up to any height. Dressers of high hair have an equally light task. In this case it is the wearer who suffers, since gravitation sets to work so soon as it is over, and pulling at loose hairs, would soon bring down the edifice but for bandoline, and often does so despite that time honored glue. Glue being a failure, one betakes to curling the loose hairs at the back, but now comes the high ruff or collar, and by friction makes a greater-than-ever tangle. These high necks are, moreover, quite at variance with the ears. Sawed upon perpetually, they never quite come off, but remain obdurate subjects for perpetual repetition. As to high shoulders inexorable is the fiat regarding them. Than not to be high-shouldered, it were better not to be.

BRIDAL COSTUMES.

June wedding bells jingle a sequence to wintry flirtations. A grand Spring drawing of matrimonial lottery tickets will soon take place; far more uncertain than the Louisiana State, since Gens. Beauregard and Early do not supervise the drawings made in the lottery of love. But the bride expectant ventures smilingly, and believes that she of all others has secured a prize. Her chief anxiety is her wedding dress. If very youthful, she will choose some light material, such as silk tissue, silk mull, surah, India silk, or perhaps satin, leaving to the more mature, silk or brocade; although with brides of all degrees satin is very popular. Favorite flowers are lilies of the valley, snow drops, azaleas, spirea, pond lilies or white lilacs, while the delicate tints of Marechal Niel buds and pale pink roses have much prestige. Gloves are always long and usually white, but a pearl tinge is preferred occasionally. Slippers or boots of white kid or satin.

MIGHTY IS THE PIN

in jewelry. Little gold-headed, silver-headed, pearl-headed, and many other headed pins. Headed by anything and stuck about in any way. These, in the army of pins that now invade us, may be reckoned as privates; but taking rank upward, degrees are many, until some grand specimen is reached, such as a crescent formed of nine different colored pearls, the largest a centre piece from which soft and diverse flashings grow gradually less, but are the prelude to a brilliant surrounding of small diamonds. The day of the lace pin is indeed at meredian height. In the glitter of great fashionableness it shines, and earth and heaven are searched to find semblances or new ideas. Chiefly at present are flowers in favor, the colored leaves stimulated by enamel, while precious gems portray other portions.
LUCY CARTER.

Conundrums.
Why is your servant Elizabeth like the ring on a race course? She is a Bet-in-place).

Why does a young man injure his stature by encouraging the growth of his beard? Because he will begin to grown down.

Why is opening a letter like a very novel way of getting into a room? breaking through the ceiling (sealing).

Why is a newly born baby like a gale of wind? Because it begins with a squall.

"Ma, can you get out of your skin?"

"Why mercy no child. Why do you ask?"

"Well, I heard pa tell another man that when he comes home nearly every night he finds you beside yourself. I don't understand it, do you?"

"No, my child; but I think your father will."

Biliousness

Is very prevalent at this season, the symptoms being bitter taste, offensive breath, coated tongue, sick headache, drowsiness, dizziness, loss of appetite. If this condition is allowed to continue serious consequences may follow. By promptly taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, a fever may be avoided or premature death prevented. It is a positive cure for biliousness. Sold by all druggists.

OF THE
Board of Health
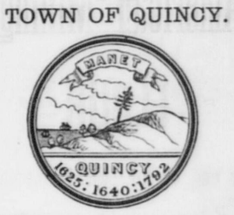
OF THE
TOWN OF QUINCY.



THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1885.

Superior Court, Dedham.

The following civil cases of interest to Quincy parties came before the Superior Court, at Dedham, last week. We copy the particulars of the same from the Dedham Gazette:

Evan J. Evans vs. Martha A. Jones, administratrix of the estate of William H. Jones, deceased. The case is one of a difference in accounts, and has been passed upon by an auditor. There being a difference of opinion in regard to several items, this present suit is brought to settle the matter. A short statement of the case is as follows:—William H. Jones was a teamster in the town of Quincy. He also owned a derrick which he was in the habit of letting to various parties. The plaintiff, Evans, is a stone mason living in East Weymouth. Between 1874 and 1879, Evans and Jones had a number of mutual business transactions about which both parties failed to carry out any written account. In consequence of this neglect and by reason of the frequent interchange of business relations between the parties without any settlement or any accurate understanding of the facts Mr. Jones' accounts at his decease in 1881 were found to be in a chaotic state. In 1883 Evans put in a claim against the estate in the sum of $60. Mrs. Jones doubted the justice of the demand, and on October 8, 1883, was sued by Evans. The case was tried at Quincy, but no settlement effected. An auditor was next appointed by this court, and he decided that Mrs. Jones was indebted to Evans in the sum of $30. Mrs. Jones refused to settle on this basis, claiming that Evans owed the estate a considerable amount for the use of the derrick during 1879. Evans on his own part claimed that Jones had agreed to give him the derrick in consideration of stone work done on Water street, and on account of the debt which Jones owed him.

In giving this case to the jury His Honor told them that it was the fourth trial of the matter. He complimented them upon the patience that they had shown in listening to the evidence and arguments, and then said that he expected that such a capable and intelligent jury would arrive at a harmonious decision, and render a verdict which should forever take this case out of litigation. It was a mere question of fact and must be settled by a jury and they were the ones to accomplish this much desired end. Under these instructions the jury went out about three o'clock on Wednesday. They remained locked up all night under the charge of Deputy Sheriff Paul. On the opening of court on Thursday they came in and rendered a verdict for the plaintiff, and assessed damages in the sum of one cent. E. Bicknell for plaintiff; J. L. Eldridge for defendant.

Alexander Davidson vs. Alexander Marnock. The defendant is the chief of the Scottish Clan, a secret society for mutual benefit which is located in Quincy. A son of the plaintiff, Davidson, was a member of the clan. He died recently, and a death benefit which he had held in the society was claimed by his father, the plaintiff in this case, under a bequest making this amount payable to him. The society refused to do this, giving as a reason that the society were controlled by rules and regulations, one of which was that all death benefits must be paid to the wife of a deceased member, if such a person existed. Such a person was found in this case, hence the refusal to pay anyone else. His Honor ruled that the defendants had a perfect right to carry out their rules and regulations and rendered a verdict accordingly. J. L. Eldridge for plaintiff; G. F. Williams for defendant.

John Murray vs. James Joss and others. The defendants, Joss Bros., are granite workers in Quincy. March 1, 1883, the plaintiff, Murray, went to work for the Joss Bros. He made no special agreement with them concerning the matter of wages. April 15th, he called at the office and was paid the sum of 88 cents per day. He continued at this rate for one year. March 1, 1884, he commenced work at the rate of $1.25 per day. Continued at this rate until September 21. Then became dissatisfied and called upon the Joss Bros., for his September pay and stated he was going to leave. They refused to pay him. He nows brings suit to recover this pay now due. The defendants claim that Murray had engaged to stay three years; that he had just begun to be useful to them and worth the wages then paid by them; that no apprentice earns his wages until he has been at the business of stone cutting at least one year and a half; that, before that time the wages paid to apprentices is simply to provide them with the means of living, and is not compensation for actual service; that such service is often a question of loss instead of profit to the employer. Judge Staples could not find that there was any agreement upon the part of Murray to stay three years with Joss Bros. He, therefore, rendered a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $21.63. W. G. Pattee for plaintiff; J. L. Eldredge for defendants.

John B. Gough.

This famous lecturer was formerly a resident of Oneida County, N. Y. He came from England in 1829, with a family by the name of Mannering. They came from New York to Utica on the canal, and landed at a place now in the heart of the city. The family moved to the town of Kirkland, near where Hamilton College stands. Young Gough used to go to Utica fifty-five years ago peddling plums and apples for his employer. He was not allowed to go to school, but, on the contrary, was compelled to drudge from morning till night. He was not permitted to send a letter to his father in England unless it was first read by the Mannerings, and his letters from home were read by them before he got them. This he did not fancy, and being tired of ill usage and hard work, with no chance to go to school, he wrote a letter home on the sly which stated the facts. He sold his knife for twenty-five cents to get money with which to post his letter. He took his epistle to the little office at Lairdsville, and paid eighteen cents for the postage. In due time he had a letter from home, saying that the Mannerings had agreed to send him to school, etc., and that as they had broken their contract, he might leave them. They had some money which belonged to him, and he got it and started for New York, going part way on the canal, part way on the railroad, and the remainder on a river tug. He arrived at New York Saturday night with just fifty cents in his pocket, and this he paid a man to keep him over Sunday. Monday morning he started out to look for work, and found it as an errand boy in a book-binder's shop. He began lecturing in 1842, and up to July 1, 1884, had lectured on different subjects 8,560 times. He will be sixty-eight years old next August. Although his hair and beard are white, he retains much of his old-time vigor and force.

☞ The North American Review concludes its seventieth year with its June number. This number discusses several topics of vital public interest by no less than fourteen eminent writer, not including the short contributions in "Comments." Shall Silver be Demonetized?" is answered pro and con, by three distinguished economists, Sumner, Laughlin and Walker, representing Yale and Harvard Colleges, and the Massachusetts institute of Technology. "The Tardiness of Justice" is discussed by Judge W. L. Learned, and "Prohibition in Politics" by Gail Hamilton; "The Swearing Habit" by E. P. Whipple, and "French Spoliation Claims" by Edward Everett.

Three young men recently dined at Young's on an ostrich egg that had been forwarded to one of them from South Africa. The egg weighed three pounds, and it cost seven dollars to get it here.

Norfolk Co. Teachers' Association.

The thirty-eighth annual convention of the Association met at Hyde Park last week Friday and was largely attended by delegations from all parts of the county.

The first essay of the day was on "Misdemeanors," by J. B. Gifford of Stoughton. The remainder of the morning session was occupied by Kate L. Brown of Milton, on "The Idea of the New Education;" G. C. Fisher of Weymouth on "How to teach arithmetic during the first four years to secure the best results in after years," and James M. Sawin of Providence on "Books and reading, the spread and influence of pernicious literature; what teachers can do to oppose it." A collation was served at noon.

About a thousand persons were present at the evening services. The first speaker Hon. T. W. Bicknell, discussed the "Relations of the Home to the School." He said that the great problem of modern society is what to do with a child. How to make a man of him. Four factors, the church, the home, the school and civil society, are the great agencies for education. No one of these can alone afford a rounded education. Complete harmony in all agencies is also requisite. The most vital point that offers for improvement in our schools is an increased efficiency of School Boards and Supervisors. The home aids the school, not by direct contact, but by individual indirect support and encouragement.

Rev. Dr. Duryea of Boston, the next speaker, spoke on the "Relation of the Church and School." The great aim of modern education is the harmonious development of all the possibilities of the pupils nature. Every individual possesses latent energy. The aim of education is to develop and make active this energy. This faculty cannot be developed by talk but by example only. The moral side of the child must be aroused by the example of the teacher. The combined inductive and moral faculties are the prime requisites of a successful teacher.

Mr. E. C. Carrigan was next introduced to discuss education from the point of legislative enactment as related to the public schools. The speaker spoke briefly and eloquently of what he considered the most important legislative measures before the people. Compulsory education of illiterate minors and tenure of office by teachers were strongly urged. The evening schools are necessary. They have failed hitherto, owing to improper management. These schools are needed, urgently needed. Give them the same chance that our day schools have and they will succeed.

Rev. Dr. Miner President of Tufts College, was the final speaker. He spoke briefly of the "Work of the School in Education," and urged the necessity of thoroughly prepared teachers who would work earnestly, faithfully and consistently for their pupils' highest development in the branches which are their province to teach.

The second day, Saturday, was marked by an unusually large attendance. After the reports of the various committees had been read and accepted the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, E. R. Downes of Weymouth; Vice Presidents, Carlos Safter of Dedham, F. H. Dean of Hyde Park, Mrs. Geo. Wiggin of Franklin; Councillors, F. D. Owen of Canton, Alverdo Mason of Braintree, E. E. Thompson of East Weymouth, T. H. West of Randolph, W. F. Hart of Milton; Secretaries, G. M. Smith of Holbrook, Lillie M. Stevens of Dedham; Treasurer, S. W. Billings of Sharon.

Joseph Belcher of Randolph delivered the first essay of the morning on the subject of "Examinations." He was followed by Dr. W. T. Harris of Concord, who gave an interesting and exhaustive lecture on "The education required for cities, and the reason for the immense growth of cities in the present century." The remainder of the morning was devoted to a discussion on "School Supervision" by Messrs. E. R. Downes of Weymouth, W. E. Bates of Canton and Winslow Battles of Randolph.

Votes of thanks were extended to the teachers of Hyde Park and to the Old Colony Railroad.

It was one of the most largely attended and successful conventions in the history of the association and the exercises throughout were of an interesting and highly instructive order.

Waste of Money.

Smith and Jones were strolling up Fifth-avenue.

Said Jones: "How much does it cost you a year for cigars, Smith?"

"Oh, about four hundred dollars, at a rough estimate."

"Well, that's a wicked waste of money. I never smoked a cigar in my life. Why, the money you've fooled away on tobacco in the past thirty years would almost buy one of these fine mansions."

"Yes," replied Smith, "I suppose it would. By the way, Jones," he added, "which one of these fine mansions do you own?"—N. Y. Times.

Open Fireplace.

A sick room should have an open fireplace. When you build your house bear this in mind. It is wise to so live as to insure good health as far as possible; yet as all persons are liable to accident and illness, it is well to have one room which may be used in case of sickness, which has an open fireplace. It is an excellent means of ventilation; an open fireplace is more convenient than a stove for warming clothing, bedding, etc., and it is cheerful company.

SUPPLEMENT.

Newspapers.

The local newspaper is the best read paper in the world, and all the city papers cannot supply its place. No other contains the marriages and deaths, or gives the time for the next concert, lecture, picnic, etc. It gives the local news in detail, and everybody reads it, and that is why it is the best read paper in the world.

The poorest read papers are those distributed free, for the sole purpose of advancing some particular person or object. But little real labor or expense is given to such papers, and, consequently the receiver finds scarcely anything of interest, unless he or she may be "taken" with the pet object therein announced, and when that knowledge is gleaned, down it goes.

Town Pride.

There is a pride that "goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall." With this the world is familiar and sets upon it the seal of contempt. Per contra there is a pride and self respect that deserves credit and gains a degree of reverence whenever and by whomsoever shown. True pride makes a people strong as a nation, influential as a state, honored as a community; and those places in our State that have grown from villages to large and prosperous towns or cities owe more to a spirit of local pride than to other advantages which to the outward seeming are more important.

Perhaps we as a community have all of this strong and laudable local pride that is desirable, but we doubt it. Too many think of self and act for the narrow circle of home alone, to make the town influence as potent as might be, and we write this to spur this element forward, if such may be the case. The drift of the natural elements of growth is in this direction as never before in the history of this section, and extraordinary results may be achieved by concerted and judicious action. Let all cultivate a proper town pride and good will come to the individual as well as the community at large.—Arlington Advocate.

RICH COLORED MEN. Philadelphia has quite a number of rich colored people. John McKee, a real estate dealer, is worth $300,000. Wm. Still has acquired $200,000 in the coal business. Robert Purvis is worth $150,000. The widow of Henry Jones has $60,000, which her husband cleared as a caterer. Thomas Boling, a flour merchant, is rich. So is Wm. G. Harvey, and several more colored men in the Quaker City are well to do.

☞ Canning eggs is a new industry recently started in St. Louis. A factory has been erected, and is in operation, where they will can 1,000,000 dozen annually. The eggs are put through some sort of process by which the yolks and whites are separated from the shells, and the substance in them dried and canned. A teaspoonful is said to be equal to one egg, and it is warranted to keep fresh three years.

GIGANTIC WORK. The tunnelling of Tuscarora Mountains, in Fulton county, Pa., is a gigantic work. Drills, propelled by compressed air, are in operation on each end of the tunnel night and day. The tunnel is already bored 1,200 feet on the west side and 1,300 on the east. As the mountain is calculated to be just one mile through, the boring is now half completed.

A SCOURGED TOWN. Plymouth, Pa., may well be termed a scourged town. Typhoid fever is raging there to a degree never before known in the country. It has a population of about 8,000, and there have been over 1,500 cases of fever. The deaths average six to eight daily. One hundred families are destitute. Whole families are down at a time. The cause is believed by medical experts to be the poisoning of springs by privy vaults.

AGREEMENT. A Weymouth couple who wanted to be married, but didn't have enough for the parson's fee, agreed to pay instalments of $1.00 a week for five weeks. Under this agreement the knot was tied.

☞ The Old Colony railroad is so well satisfied with the working of the Hillard automatic car coupler which it has had on trial, that twenty-five cars are to be equipped with it for a further test.

IN THE VICINITY.

— Weymouth has three night policeman appointed by the Selectmen.

—Over 100 street lamps were placed in position at South Abington last week.

— Reynolds Post, G. A. R., of Weymouth give a grand concert at the East Weymouth skating rink next Thursday evening.

— A Lodge of the Daughters of Rebekah were instituted on the 13th inst. at South Abington, by H. K. Braley, Grand Master.

—John H. Wyman and others, have sold to Joseph S. Kendall, 68 48-100 acres of land, and buildings on Quincy avenue, Braintree, for $17,512.50.

—Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Sanford of Milton are the newly appointed keepers of the Randolph almshouse, and have taken possession of the property.

— Rockland officers assisted by officers from Abington raided several saloons last week and seized a large quantity of hard and malt liquors.

— There is considerable talk concerning the changing the name of the town of South Abington. The names of Andrews, Sumner, Samoset and Standish have been suggested.

— On and after June 1st the station on the South Shore Branch of the Old Colony Railroad, hitherto known as Nantasket, will be styled North Cohasset, thus avoiding the annoyance of past seasons.

—Hon. Perez Simmons of Hanover, one of the oldest and most widely known lawyers in southern Massachusetts, died at his residence the 16th inst., after a long and lingering illness of heart disease, aged 74 years.

— An effort is being made by enterprising persons at North Weymouth toward laying out a public park between Sea and Bridge streets, taking Newton's pond and a portion of the fields and gardens surrounding.

—Brother Moseley, of the Gazette, says that the rules were suspended Monday, and admitted, on motion of Mr. Bradlee of Milton, the petition of the Selectman of Milton and others that the Quincy Water Company may be authorized to supply the town of Milton with water.

— A Brockton man has made a curious and wonderful clock. It is twelve feet high and four wide. Several figures come out on the quarters and hour such as a gayly dressed Turk, the Goddess of Liberty, twelve Apostles, Christ, Satan, bell ringers and others, twenty-three in number and each about a foot high.

Summary of News.

Supreme Judicial Court.

The Supreme Judicial Court for Norfolk County, came in on Tuesday morning, with Judge Allen on the bench. The following is the list of jurors:

First Jury,—Waldo Daniels, Franklin, foreman; Everett C. Bates and Samuel N. Bates, Weymouth; Frederick Bigelow, Holbrook; Geo. H. Bigelow, Dover; Frank I. Bodwell, Randolph; James M. Codman, Brookline; George A. Crooks, Bellingham; Allen C. Doolittle, Foxboro; Andrew Dyer, Braintree; Edward J. Everett, Norwood; Edward J. Fuller, Sharon.

Second Jury,—Lathrop C. Keith, Norfolk, foreman; James E. Grimes, Canton; John Haney, Hyde Park; Oswald C. Harrington, Wellesley; John Higgins, Milton; Galen James, Cohasset; Moses H. Johnson, Medfield; Thomas J. Lamb, Quincy; Jason Lewis, Walpole; Silas H. Metcalf Wrentham; E. Scott Morse, Dedham; Geo. Rodgers, Brookline; Patrick Sheehan, Stoughton.

Supernumeraries,—Levi Stearns, Quincy; Thomas Sutton, Needham; Francis W. Tewksbury, Hyde Park; Henry B. Tracy, Stoughton; Henry Wheat, Medway; Benj. F. White, Dedham.

LIFE INSURANCE. The Boston Globe publishes a history of life insurance since it was first introduced into this country in 1812. It shows that the companies have handled since that time nearly $1,500,000,000 of the money of the policy holders, while the net losses by failed companies have been $25,000,000 or 1-6 of 1 per cent. Up to date policy-holders have paid to the companies in the aggregate $1,285,563,000. The companies have paid in death losses, endowments and dividends, $900,000,000. Their present assets are nearly $500,000,000. What the companies have paid out, with their present assets, exceeds the amount received from policy holders by $138,084,161.

CATS. Professor Telephone Bell is experimenting with felines. He says that all white cats with blue eyes are invariably deaf. He has a pair, male and female, both mutes. The introduction of this variety into the world will surely be an immense blessing. Prof. Bell is certainly becoming a public benefactor. We are not informed whether he has taken out a patent on improved cats, but without doubt he has. Capital stock, $15,000,000. Only for a short time. Bootjacks not taken in exchange for stock at par.

READ THIS. There is no more universally disgraceful thing about ordinary farm buildings than the condition of the privies. These out houses should all be provided with barrels of dry earth, and each day some one should have a special charge to see that a sufficient amount is applied to subdue odors. This answers the same purpose as expensively made earth closets and costs nothing.

☞ The Granite Cutter's Journal, says a large black granite block, highly polished, was recently landed at Castle Garden, N. Y. It was quarried at Mount Aurari and is a gift from the citizens of Wales. It is to be placed at the base of the Washington Monument. On the face in gold letters in Welsh, is the following; "My language, my country, my people. Wales forever."

LARGE TOMBSTONE. An eccentric individual in Manchester, N. H., has ordered a tombstone which will be the largest in this country. It is to be of granite, and the dimensions are: length, 21 feet; width, 14 feet; thickness, 3 feet; or 900 cubic feet, weighing 50 tons. The parent block from which it is to be cut will weigh at least 100 tons.

☞ A terrible disease prevails all through the Seward valley, N. Y. The throat first swells, the tongue is then paralyzed, the patient cannot eat, and subsequently he becomes double sighted. No one has recovered from the disease which is very contagious.

GAS. The Old Colony Memorial says, "South Abington is rapidly growing "citified." Lamp posts for street lanterns are going up; drinking fountains being supplied, and now there are parties from Quincy who propose to introduce gas into the three towns of South Abington, Abington and Rockland."

An ancient relic, in the shape of a stone plow, was unearthed on a vacant lot in Little Falls, N. Y. The plow, which is worn considerably, is similar to the one now in general use.

Norfolk County Tax.

Poetry.

The Grocer's Wooing.

"My dear Miss Sally Ratus," sighed
The grocer on his knee,
"I cannot corn-ceive no butter bride
Than you would beef for me."

"You are a silly man," replied
The maid, "as one mace see"—
"If vermicilli man," he cried
"I mustard-mire thee.

"Nor, Miss, the love you're kindling wood
Soon make me smart, oil through,
It's cinnamon to bean no good—
Oh! do nutmeg go."

Then with a coffee rose and said,
"Before rice start you might Give me this soap"—she sugar head
"And, blushing, dimmed the light.

"Will! Lime afraid of kerosene,
Of caress seen," said she,
"Who candies-cover what thyme mean
Is smart tea-nough for me."

"The raisin sardine deed to guess,"
Said he, "but I will try—
You fear to have my sweet caress—
Seen by out-cider's eye."

"You's right: you'll make some honeycomb,
And I'll lard mit I'm caught—
You candle light me with a home—
Now squeeze meal like you ought."

Miscellany.

COUSIN TOM.

"Mary, I am astonished!"

Of course, the grave, elder sister was astonished. In truth and in fact, she lived in a chronic state of astonishment, for Mary Thorne was always doing something to astonish her friends and relative.

Miss Ruth could scarcely credit the evidence of her own senses in the hazy glow of the August morning, when she came out of the shadows of the little south porch and discovered that yonder moving object, half way up among the branches of the huge old pear tree, was not a spray of leaves, nor a cluster of sun-cheeked pears, swinging in the blue empyrean, but Miss May Thorne, comfortably perched in the crook of the old tree, her curls all flecked with the sifted rays of the sunshine that came down through the shifting canopy of leaves, and a book in her hand.

"I don't care!" said the little damsel, laughing saucy defiance. "It's the nicest place in the world up here. I feel just like a bird, with the leaves fluttering against my face and the wind blowing so softly, and I intend to stay here. Wouldn't you like to come up here, Ruthy? It's easily done. Just put your foot on that knot, and then—"

Ruth, who was thirty, and weighed a hundred and sixty pounds, bristled up with amazement.

"Mary Thorne! are you crazy? come down this instant!"

"Indeed I shan't!" said naughty Mary, tossing the silky shower of curls away from her forehead, and glancing down with eyes that shone and sparkled like two blue jewels.

"But we are all going—"

"Yes, I understand; you are all going in triumphal procession to the depot to render an ovation to the great Prof. Place, the wisest, sagest and grandest of mankind, to whom the Thorne family have the unutterable honor of being second cousins, and to escort him solemnly to a month's sojourn at Thorne Hall. Oh, dear!" ejaculated Mary, "I wish I could run away somewhere and hide. I hate this paragon of prim precision. I shan't marry him if he asks, and I mean to behave so badly that he won't dream of it. No, I am not going with you. I hate the close barouche, and its too warm to ride on horseback. I shall stay at home.

And Mary settled herself so snugly, with one tiny, slippered foot swinging down, and her pretty head close to a nest of blue speckled bird's eggs, that Ruth gave it up, with a sigh of despair.

"Well, then, have it your own way, you incorrigible romp. I wish you weren't too big to shut up in a dark closet, or have your ears boxed."

"It is a pity, isn't it?" said Mary demurely.

"Of course it is, Mary! If Cousin Tom Bradley comes this morning, be sure to explain to him why we are absent—and behave like a young lady, mind!"

"All right!" said Mary dauntlessly.

"I always liked Tom. We used to have grand romps together!"

She sat there in the old pear tree, prettier than any hamadryad that ever might have haunted the mossy old veteran of the garden, her cheeks touched with sunshine and carmine, her dimpled lips apart, now reading a line or two from the book in her lap, now looking up, rapt in girlish revery, into the blue sky, as it sparkled down through ever moving leaves, and now breaking into a soft little warble of song, to which the very robins themselves put their heads on one side to listen.

The carriage had driven away long since. She had watched it beyond the carve of the winding road; the dark mantle of shadow was slowly following the creeping sun-glow across the velvet lawn below, and the clock in the old church spire among the far-off woods had chimed out eleven.

And still Mary Thorne sat there in those forked branches of the old pear tree.

Suddenly there floated into her leafy sanctum a pungent aromatic odor, which made her lean curiously forward, shading her eyes with one hand, the better to penetrate the green foliage below.

Not the late monthly roses, nor the amethyst borders of heliotrope, nor the spicy geraniums—none of those blossoms distilled that peculiar smell.

"My patience," said Mary; "it's a cigar."

A cigar it was, and the owner thereof—she could just see a white linen coat and a tall head covered with black, wavy curls—stood on the porch steps quietly smoking and indulging in a lengthened view of the garden slopes.

"That's Tom Bradley!" said Mary to herself.

"Now, if he thinks I'm coming down out of this delicious, cool place to sit up straight in the hot parlors, he's mistaken! Tom," she called out in a silver accent of imperative summons, and then burst into merry laughter at the evident amazement with which the stranger gazed round him, vainly trying to conjecture whence the call had proceeded. "You dear, stupid cousin Tom!" she ejaculated. "Don't stare off toward the cabbage-beds. Look straight up here. You may come up if you please; there's plenty of room for both?" You are Cousin Tom, aren't you?" she continued as sudden misgiving crossed her mind.

"Of course I am; and you are Mary, I suppose?"

"Mary herself. Up with you, Tom! Catch hold of this branch—there! Now shake hands—You saucy fellow! I didn't say you might kiss me!"

"Well, I couldn't help it; and, besides, aren't we cousins?" said Mr. Tom, swinging himself comfortably into a branch just above Mary.

"Why Tom, how you have changed!" ejaculated the young lady, pushing back the curls with one hand, that she might better view the playmate of her childhood's days. "Your hair never curled so before; and what a nice moustache you've got! shouldn't have known you, Tom!"

"No?" said Tom, roguishly.

"And you've grown so tall!—I declare, Tom, you're splendid!"

"I could return the compliment, if I dared. But where are all the rest of the family? The house below is as empty as a haunted hall."

"All gone to welcome that horrid, poky old Prof. LaPlace, who has graciously indicated his willingness to pass a few weeks with us. Tom, I do hate that professor.

"Hate him! What for?"

"Oh, I don't know, I'm sure. He is a snuff-dried, conceited old wretch, and I'll wager a box of gloves he wears spectacles!"

"Nonsense, Mary! Why he is only twenty-six."

"I don't care; I know he is rheumatic and wears spectacles, for all that. And, Tom—now if you'll never, never breathe a word of this—"

"I won't upon my word and honor!" said Tom.

"Well, then, papa has actually got the idea into his dear old head that I would make a nice wife for the professor, and—"

Mary turned away with crimson indignation flashing in her cheeks.

"It is too bad of you to laugh, Tom. I never, never will marry that man!"

"I wouldn't if I were you," consoled Tom. "But, Mary, wait and see the man before you decide. He may be quite a decent fellow."

"No!" said Mary, shaking her head and biting her cherry lips firmly. "I hate him beforehand."

"What a spiteful little puss you are!" said her companion, laughing.

"No, Tom, I'm not." And the blue eyes became misty. "I love papa and Ruth dearly, and I love almost everybody. I like you, Tom; but I hate Prof. LaPlace. And I want you to promise, Tom, that you'll be my friend, and not allow him to tease me into walks, or rides, or tete-a-tetes of any kind. Will you?"

Would he? If she had asked him to precipitate himself out of the pear-tree upon the steps below, with those blue eyes fixed on his, he'd have done it; any man of taste would.

"I promise!" he said, and they shook hands on it.

What a cozy place for a chat that gnarled old tree was.

And when they had talked over everything they could think of, it was the most natural thing in the world that Tom should recover the book which had slipped down into the net work of tiny boughs, and read poetry to his pretty cousin in the deep, musical voice that maidens love to listen to.

And Mary sat there watching the jetty curls blowing to and fro on his broad, white brow, and the long, black lashes almost touching his olive cheeks; and she thought how very, very handsome Cousin Tom was, how much he had changed in the last ten years that had elapsed since she had seen him, and she wondered whether Tom was engaged to any pretty girl; somehow she hoped not. Now, why couldn't Tom have been rich, like that horrid Prof. La Place, instead of a poor medical student, and—

And when the large, black eyes were suddenly lifted to hers, Mary felt as though he had read every thought of her mind, and blushed scarlet.

"Come, Tom," she chattered, to hide her confusion "We've been up here long enough. Help me down and I will show you the old sun dial that we used to heap with buttercups when we were children.

A rumble of wheels; it was the returning carriage, and Mary clung to Tom's arm.

"The awful professor!" she whispered. "Now Cousin Tom, be sure you stand by me through everything.

"To my life's end!" was the whispered answer.

But there was no one in the carriage save Mr. Thorne and Ruth.

It drew up on the grand sweep beside the two cousins.

"Where's the professor?"

"He was not at the depot," said Ruth; "and—"

"But Mr. Thorne had sprung from the carriage and clasped both the stranger's hands in his.

"La Place, is it possible! Why, we have just been looking for you at Mill Station."

"I am sorry to have inconvenienced you, sir," was the reply; but I came by the way of Wharton, and walked over this morning."

"Never mind now, you are safely here!" exclaimed the old gentlman. "Ruth, my dear—Mary, let me introduce you to your cousin, Prof. La Place!"

Mary had dropped his arm, and stood dismayed.

"You told me that you were Cousin Tom!"

"That is my name, and I believe I am a distant cousin by relationship. Now, Mary," and the black eyes sparkled, "don't be angry because I don't take snuff nor wear spectacles. I beg the other Cousin Tom's pardon, whoever he is; but I am very glad he isn't here. Mary, be just, and don't hate Cousin Tom because his other name happens to be La Place."

But no doubt it was a very perplexing thing to have two Cousin Toms; and so, about six months subsequently, Miss Mary contrived to obviate that inconvenience by allowing one of them to assume a nearer relationship; and, in spite of all her asseverations to the contrary, she is Mrs. Prof. La Place.

For its a solemn fact in this world, that whenever a girl says she never, never will do a thing, she is pretty sure to do it the first chance she gets; and Mary is no exception to the general rule.

Dr. LaRoy Sunderland.

This aged citizen of Quincy passed quietly away on the 14th instant, among his relatives and friends at Hyde Park, Mass., where he went but a few weeks before his death. He had lived for about a quarter of a century on Mill street, and was well known to many of our citizens.

He was a constant reader of the PATRIOT and a valuable subscriber, as he always called at the office and paid for his paper in advance. He said he learned by experience that the trials and cares of publishing a newspaper were great, and he would never allow himself to be negligent in paying for the same. During the past ten months although in his 81st year, he has visited the PATRIOT office several times on business, and his mind seemed clear and bright, and he had a kindly word of greeting.

We copy the following notice of our departed friend from the Norfolk County Gazette;

He died in full consciousness, expressing his ideas until the last and declaring himself happy. It was given him, as it is to but few, to see around his bedside during his last hours, all his living descendants—children, grand-children, and great-grand-children, and all were present at his funeral. The service was very impressive, certain solemn songs the doctor had loved to listen to when alive, were sung over his coffin by his three grand-daughters, and an eloquent eulogy pronounced by Mr. Seaver, of the Investigator, a gentleman who has stood in friendly and journalistic relations with the deceased for many years past. Mr. Seaver dwelt long upon the persecutions and sufferings the doctor had to undergo on account of the change in his views on religion, and spoke feelingly of the many good qualities possessed, working continually to enlighten mankind, help the oppressed and strengthen the weak. "Our friend" said the speaker, "possessed not what is commonly called religion, nor did he believe in a life hereafter, he did believe, however, in doing good while in life here, and if there is a life hereafter where men are rewarded for their good work done on earth, then his works will also there be recognized, for he did much good." After Mr. Seaver's remarks Mr. Wm. J. Stuart read a poem by Mr. Washington Gladding, entitled "Ultima Veritas," as especially suitable for this occasion. After the singing of another hymn by the granddaughters of the deceased, the remains were carried to Mount Hope cemetery for interment, being escorted to that place by many relatives and friends.

Dr. LaRoy Sunderland was born in Warren, R. I., May 22, 1803, and was consequently 82 years old at the time of his death. He was brought up among Baptists at Exeter, R. I., and afterwards visited Middletown university, where he graduated at the early age of eighteen. In the year following, 1822, revival meetings of great extent were going on in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and Mr. Sunderland became so effected by them that he felt he himself had a great mission to perform, and he started out to convert others. He preached his first sermon on June 9, 1823, at Walpole, and his influence over his hearers was great. For seventeen years he continued to travel about this state as a revival preacher, and there are many people living yet at Milton, Weymouth, Chatham and other places to testify to the superhuman powers exerted by this, then youthful preacher. It seems that about the year 1835 the doctor overwrought his vocal chords and his voice failed him. He then went to New York, where for seven years he edited the Watchman, a Methodist publication.

While yet in New York he mingled much with the abolitionists of that time, was chosen into the executive of the anti-slavery society, and began a tirade against slave holders to such an extent that they offered a prize for his head. Bishop Soule of the N. Y. conference being an outspoken pro-slavery man, after three unsuccessful trials before the ecclesiastical courts, finally sued him for criminal libel, on account of some publications regarding the bishop, but although Gov. Young acted as district attorney, Mr. Sunderland was not convicted.

In 1842 began the publication of the Magnet, a paper devoted entirely to the investigation of Trance, a mental phenomena, which later he lectured upon and called by the name of "Pathetism" the basis of which seemed to be that conversation made by revivalists were really nothing more than mesmeristic powers, as often exerted by one being upon others. Believing in this firmly, he made public demonstrations of his pathetic powers over others, and it is said by eye witnesses, that when he was upon the platform but a few minutes and often before he had spoken one word, forty to fifty individuals in the hall would be attracted by him and, losing all self control, would subject themselves entirely to his will. Surgical operations were performed, the patient being under his influence, and not evincing any pain, and the New York Tribune, the New York Sun, the Boston Mail-Globe and other influential papers of that time, testify to these powers. From Pathetism he grew into spiritualism, becoming a strong supporter of the sect, and editing the Spiritual World, the first paper devoted to that science.

About 1850, Dr. Sunderland courted materialism and broke entirely with the church. As he entered fully into every new idea he conceived, so he wrote many pamphlets and books on the subject; agnostics, in fact, having of late been his favorite topic. The Society of Letters and Arts, of London, recognized his earnest literary efforts, and elected him honorary member, a distinction conferred upon but few men. A new edition of his works on medicine, philosphy and other scientific subjects is now in the course of publication, and will be issued from the office of the Investigator.

ANNALS OF QUINCY,--1795.

NUMBER V.

January 5, 1795, the committee appointed to raise the quota of men for the army the previous November, rendered their account, and were allowed nine pounds, seven shillings and sixpence.

The same date it was "Voted, that the Rev. Mr. Briggs or some other person, be requested to supply the pulpit until next March meeting."

April 1, a post office in Quincy, was established. Richard Cranch was the first postmaster, and he kept the office at his residence on School street, now the site of the residence of Mr. James Edwards. Mr. Cranch continued in the office until his death which occurred October 16, 1811.

April 6, the town "voted to have but one school in the town, and that to be kept at the school house in the Centre of the town."

On the same date the Town Clerk was voted a compensation of thirty shillings for the past two years' service.

Capt. Thompson Baxter was Moderator at the annual town meeting.

The Selectmen chosen this year served three years and were, Dea. Jonathan Webb, Lieut. Seth Spear and Elijah Veazie.

Capt. Joseph Baxter was Tax Collector this year, and his compensation was eight pence, three farthings per pound.

May 6, Benjamin Beale, Esq., was chosen Representative.

May 6, a vote was taken upon the matter of revising the State Constitution. The result was five in favor of revision and thirty-four against it. The vote throughout the State was opposed to a revision.

May 27, the Selectmen were empowered to hire a piece of ground of Mr. James Brackett for a garden for the poor of the town for a term of four years.

October 1, Voted to build a school house agreeable to a plan and estimate made by a previously appointed committee.

November 16, Benjamin Beale, Lt. Elijah Veazie and Moses Black, were chosen a committee to build the school house on that part of the training field which they think most proper. $1000 was appropriated for the purpose.

1796.

January 17, Mary Dunham, Lettice Pierce, widow of Lettice Pierce, Jr., and Titus Fuller, were by order of the Selectmen warned to depart the limits of the town.

March, 7, The town voted: "That the hogs shall be shut up." That the poor be put into the house built for their accommodation, excepting such that the Selectmen think not proper to be placed there. That the school be kept in the same manner as last year, and the master be hired by the year.

March 7, Rev. Mr. Flint was called to officiate in the meeting house until the second Sunday in April.

During this year the Humane Society awarded a premium of ten dollars to Ebenezer Adams and Loraine Fenno of this town, for saving the life of Peter Munwell, between Spectacle and Thompson's Islands.

December 8, The town voted to accept the report of a committee chosen to settle the line of fence between Mr. Seth Burrell and the town lands on training field.

It was voted not to send a Representative to the General Court this year.

Pattee's History says that "at the Presidential election in 1796, the citizens of the town seem to have bolted the regular Federal nominees for Electors, and to have voted for an independent candidate, an inhabitant of their own town. It appears a little singular that the Massachusetts Electors, who gave their suffrage to John Adams, did not receive a vote at this election in Quincy. Why the town refused to cast their ballot for Mr. Adams, we are unable to state. The following is the record of this election: "The inhabitants of the town met for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President, and gave in their votes as follows: Benjamin Beale, Esq., 38; and this appears to have been the only Elector voted for in town, and he was not one of the Massachusetts Electors who cast their ballots for Mr. Adams."

Benjamin Beale, Esq., was Moderator at the annual town meeting.

A change was made this year in both the offices of Town Clerk and Town Treasurer. Ebenezer Vesey and Peter Boylston Adams who had held the positions since the incorporation of the town, gave way to Mottram Vesey and Moses Black, Esq. The former served until his death in 1825, and the latter until April 2, 1804, when he resigned.

John Spear collected the taxes for seven and a half pence per pound.

☞ Maggie (to her step-father, who is very popular with the children)—"I wish you had been here when our other papa was alive. You would have liked each other so much."

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1885.

The Day We Observe.

To-day is Memorial Day. Let us reflect a little. Twenty years have come and gone since the close of that great civil war, which marked the destiny of its nation. Soldiers and citizens alike who saw it are rapidly passing from the scene, and another twenty years will find but few survivors of those historic days. But as the events of those stirring times recede from our view, the North and South grow nearer together and latent patriotism comes to the front with a united nation ready to stand by the old flag. And this feeling of love is fanned into a brighter and warmer flame as Memorial day approaches, and the tributes of affection are laid on the graves of those who fought on both sides with courage and convictions only those of a true American. And as we decorate these graves it seems to soften the heart, and quicken the sympathies. Let us all join in these beautiful ceremonies, not send a few interested ones, but close our stores and factories, turn out en masse and while we listen to the sad requiem of the band and the patriotic sentiments of the orator, try and better appreciate the freedom of freedom's homes. Then we can strew flowers on the silent graves and feel that it is the least we can do to show our love for the brave and generous dead. There is hardly a cemetery in our broard land, but what among its beautiful monuments or its tangled grass and rough grown hedge may be found a soldier's grave. And to-day these graves will be sought out and decorated by comrades who shared their perils, and who themselves will ere many memorial days share their silent sleep.

Paul Revere Post will assemble at their head-quarters at 7.30 this morning and a detachment under command of Junior Vice Commander, George H. Osborn, accompanied by the Chaplain of the day, Rev. D. M. Wilson, will visit the National Home Cemetery and hold appropriate services, and deposit floral offerings.

One comrade will visit Mt. Auburn Cemetery and deposit a wreath on the grave of Col. Paul J. Revere.

A detachment under the command of Adj. W. P. Martin will decorate about one hundred graves in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Another detachment, under the command O. G., Warren Dunbar, will decorate the graves in Hancock and English cemeteries.

At 9 o'clock the Post will form in front of their head-quarters on Hancock street and march to the corner of Granite and School streets, escorted by the Weymouth Band, where they will take carriages for West Quincy. Services will be held and a large number of graves in the three cemeteries decorated.

At 12, the Post and their guests partake of a collation.

At 1.30, a procession will be formed by the Post, headed by the police, and escorted by the band, accompanied by guests, friends, and citizens in carriages and on foot, which will proceed to the Mount Wollaston cemetery where appropriate ceremonies will take place and the Soldiers' Monument decorated with flowers; at 3.30 the oration will be delivered in the Town Hall, by the orator of the day, Theo. King, Jr.

Quincy to Celebrate.

It is some time since this town has celebrated the Fourth of July in grand style, such as she was once famous for, and the reason is because of the nearness to Boston and the beaches. It requires quite a large subscription to do the thing up in shape, and generally those who work the hardest to make it a success, are not only time and labor out, but also money. This year, however, several interested gentlemen are to try to redeem Quincy, and with that end in view have held three meetings at the Lyceum Room. The first one, on Friday evening of last week, was attended only by a few, and without transacting any business adjourned to Wednesday evening. An organization was then made, Geo. Harvey Field being chosen chairman, John H. Dee secretary, and Edward Whicher treasurer. The above gentlemen, together with Messrs. F. F. Green and W. G. Spear, were appointed a committee to see what the feeling was about town, and what support would be given in the way of subscriptions.

Wollaston.

The Musical Association to the number of seventy-nine met on Monday evening at the residence of Rev. William Lord. The meeting was devoted to Spring music and readings, and an excellent programme was presented. There were solos by Miss Alice Prescott, Miss Alice Lincoln, Miss Minnie Prescott, Mrs. F. E. Dewhurst, Mrs. William R. Lord, Mr. Samuel King, Miss Packard, Miss S. A. Pfaffman, Miss Pfaffman, Mr. W. E. Simmons; duets by Mrs. William R. Lord and Mr. A. Sprague, Misses Prescott and Wright; quartettes by Misses Pfaffman and Parker and Messrs. Sprague and Elliot; readings by Miss Lottie Polson, Mrs. Annes Lincoln and Mrs. George Welch; and remarks by Rev. F. E. Dewhurst. An abundance of beautiful flowers also lent their charms to the evening.

There will be but one more meeting of the Musical Association this season; when the evening will be devoted to Mendelsohn's music. It takes place a week from Monday, June 8th, with Rev. William R. Lord.

"The Great Umbrella Case," a mock trial to be given for the benefit of the Wollaston Village Improvement Society takes place on Friday and Saturday evenings of next week. Mr. Walter E. Simmons alias, Hon. Patrick O'Hoolahan will be the judge, and thirty-two prominent people of the village will take part. A rare treat is expected.

The houses of Samuel Brown and Frank Flood on Fayette street have been improved by new balustrades in front, and the latter's residence has also been painted.

Mr. W. W. Marple has been quite sick with erysipelas, but is improving.

Mrs. A. A. Walker and son, former residents of Wollaston, after an absence of two years in California, have returned to Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Walker spent Tuesday evening at the house of Mr. Henry Jones, where about thirty of their friends were assembled to welcome them home, and passed a delightful evening.

Monday was the sixty-sixth birthday of Queen Victoria.

Brief Locals.

☞ Sun rises 4.11; sets 7.12.
☞ Summer begins June 21.
☞ To-morrow is Trinity Sunday.
☞ Only four weeks more of school.
☞ The moon fulled Thursday evening.

☞ Mock trial at Wollaston next week.

☞ Rev. R. T. Sawyer preached at Danvers last Sunday.

☞ Hancock street in the Centre was never in a better condition.

☞ The mock trial netted the Village Improvement Society nearly $150.

☞ A year ago this week there were severe frost which did much damage.

☞ The regular monthly meeting of the School Committee next Thursday.

☞ Col. Charles H. Porter of Quincy is announced as the orator at Norwood to-day.

☞ Paul Revere Post is perfecting arrangements for its visit to Portland next month.

☞ Mrs. M. E. Green has been confined to the house the past ten days by sickness.

☞ The fire companies meet next Monday evening and the Engineers Tuesday evening.

☞ The triangular green spot near the Stone Temple has been greatly improved this week.

☞ The Cambridge Tribune says, Mr. Barrett Wendell is at Quincy with his family for the summer.

☞ The boot and shoe store of Robert Dickey, at the corner of Granite and Water streets has been closed.

☞ All the games in the Old Colony League to have been played last Saturday were postponed because of the rain.

☞ The estate of the late Timothy Sugrue was not sold at auction on Friday of last week,—$1400 being the highest bid.

☞ The new store building by Ira Litchfield, next to C. B. Tilton's on Hancock street, for Mr. Plummer, is looming up.

☞ The Selectmen at their meeting last Saturday granted Joseph W. Lombard and Joseph T. French auctioneers' licenses.

☞ The granite polishing firm of Milne, Chalmers & Co., formerly A. Milne & Co., have built a new shed this week for hammering.

☞ Many of the granite firms say that their business, which generally has a boom previous to Memorial Day has been light this year.

☞ The cellar for Hazen Ricker's new house on Union street is nearly completed. Mr. Warren D. Higgins has the contract for building.

☞ Inventories of the estates of the late Washington M. French and the late Charles Hobart of Quincy were filed at the Probate Court at Dedham last week.

☞ A medallion of the late Washington M. French, which is considered a very good likeness, has been made by F. Muer, from an impression taken shortly after death.

☞ The housekeeper can obtain her meats all cooked at Sweetser's, and often times save a fire during the heat of summer. He publishes his price list this week.

☞ James D. Taber has been granted an innholder's license and also a billiard and pool license, to carry on business at the Linden House, Hough's Neck.

☞ Just arrived, a carload of best Akron drain pipe, which I am prepared to deliver at the lowest price. W. Austin Winslow, agent, 80 Hancock street.

☞ A little child of John McDonald was bitten one day last week by a dog owned by John Sullivan. The boy is about as usual, but the dog has been killed.

☞ Flowers and fruit, for the Boston hospitals, may be left on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday next, at the house of Mr. E. B. Souther on Foster street.

☞ Mr. Philip Carver has opened to-day for the season, his fashionable ice cream saloon, for ladies and gentlemen, on Temple street. Let all lovers of good creams give him a call.

☞ Mt. Mount Wollaston Cemetery will, as usual on Decoration Day, be closed to carriages from 10 to 3 o'clock; and it is expected that work on lots will be finished by 10 o'clock, A. M.

☞ Thursday evening Thomas H. McDonnell's horse became unmanageable and run away with him, and when on Chestnut street threw him out, but he fortunately escaped serious injuries.

☞ Among the private sales in Norfolk County we notice the following: Claudine C. Vogel has sold to John Vogel 3 1-4 acres of land with building on the east side of Willard street in West Quincy for $8,125.

☞ The first game in the cricket schedule between the Roxburys and Quincys will be played at Roxbury today instead of Quincy as we announced last week. Next Saturday there will be a game here between the Quincys and Chelseas.

☞ Tuesday afternoon George H. Danforth, principal of the Adams school, accompanied by his A Grammar class, visited the granite yards of McGrath Bros. and took the measurements and rough sketch of a monument from which they afterwards drew on a scale of two inches to a foot.

☞ Somebody's toes have been trod upon; and if we could judge by the long, fierce howl, it was received with the most excruciating pain. There must have been corns upon them. The worst of it all was, it was done by a friend, and entirely unintentional; but such is life.

☞ The presentation of the difficult drama the "Ticket-of-Leave Man" at the Town Hall last Friday evening by the Excelsior Dramatic Company was very good. Mr. D. Rose, as Robert Brierly, performed all his part nicely with the exception of his wooing, which was hardly equal to the love displayed by R. Giddess as Sam Willoughby. All did well for amateurs. Dancing followed the entertainment.

☞ William Moore passed away Wednesday morning after a long illness. He was a stone-cutter by trade. His home was formerly in Biddeford, Maine, and after services at the house yesterday morning, the remains were taken to that place. Mt. Wollaston Lodge of Odd Fellows attended the services here, and sent two of their members to Biddeford, where Mr. Moore's lodge met them.

Quincy Point Items.

PERSONAL.

Master Stanley Forbes is visiting in Concord.

Mr. Thos. W. Carter's house is being greatly improved by painting.

To-morrow Rev. Mr. Ball of Taunton will fill the pulpit—coming as a candidate.

Rev. J. L. Harris and family moved to Neponset on Tuesday. They have secured a pleasant residence on Walnut street.

Mr. H. P. Kittridge starts on Monday for a three months' trip in the South, travelling for the Boston firm, Marquet & Varney.

Rev. Mr. Leland of North Weymouth preached at the Congregational Church last Sunday morning, and in the evening Mr. John Federhen, 3d, had charge of the exercises.

Miss Minnie Carter has been engaged as teacher for the intermediate school of Brookville for the remainder of the year, the vacancy having been made by the illness of the regular teacher.

Rumor says that there is no longer need of mourning for the lost and drowned Harvey Brown, as that account of his disappearance was all an error. He simply took H. G.'s advice and went West—though we feel sure that Horace would never sanction such sudden leave taking;—a little bill for dragging the river would now be in order.

David Wiley, a boy about fifteen years old, who drives a team for one of the stone firms in town, had his horse, a very powerful animal, run a long distance with him last Tuesday, from Quincy avenue to the coal wharf at the Point. The boy held on to him bravely and no accident occurred, but Wiley was nearly exhausted when he succeeded in reining him in.

Mr. Chas. Winslow had his arm badly hurt on Thursday while at work at Patch's coal yard. The sch. Emma Crosby was coming in to the wharf when Mr. Winslow's arm was caught between the shrouds and the staging, his perilous position was at once seen and efforts made to release him, else he would have sustained very serious injury. Later in the afternoon as the cargo was being unloaded, Wm. Gerroir, at work in the hold, was considerably injured by having a portion of a tub of coal fall upon him, which bruised him much and probably broke some of the bones in the wrist.

THIS AND THAT.

Hose 4 holds its regular monthly meeting Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Arrived, May 28th, Schooner Emma Crosby—Capt. Campbell, from Baltimore, with 385 tons coal for C. Patch.

The Quincy Stone Division S. of T. will hold a public meeting a week from to night, G. W. P., J.W. Cameron will preside.

Many of the places at the Point are looking very fine—the yards are being ornamented with pretty flower beds and the lawns were never looking better.

Do not forget the auction of yachts and row boats on Monday, at the bridge. The row boats have been built at Hingham during the winter and some good bargains may be secured.

The Ladies Aid Society are preparing for a strawberry supper to come off next Thursday evening—strawberries in every conceivable form will be placed on the tables and knowing who have the matter in charge we can predict one of the most appetizing suppers of the season. E. M. F.

West Quincy.

Narcis Le Clair is to build a house on Copeland street.

A new house is to be built on Robertson street for Steven P. Andrews.

Every one is invited to send us items of news. They will be thankfully received.

Michael J. Carey is to build a large new house on Hall place. The cellar is under way.

The Village Improvement Society have set out about a dozen trees on Cemetery street.

Auctioneer Adams sold the estate of the late James Galloway on West street on Monday, to Moses E. Rowe.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Sprague returned to West Quincy last Sunday after a long absence in Madagascar, Africa.

Bernard Donnelly, while at work with a derrick at the West Quincy station, on Tuesday forenoon, jammed one of his hands.

Health officers Spear and O'Connor are also here inspecting the sanitary condition of houses, etc. They find many irregularities.

Charles H. Bellows, the census enumerator, is busily at work in this neighborhood, and says he finds the population packed in pretty close.

Many citizens here say that they will take an active part in the proposed celebration of the Fourth of July providing West Quincy gets her share of the demonstration. If there are to be horribles they would like to have them start here.

Monday evening America Division, S. of T., presented at their meeting the farce entitled "Class Day," and with good success. The cast of characters was:

|---|---|
| Hon. John Buncombe, | Alfred Dingle |
| Frank Buncombe, | Virgil Fuller |
| Ned Taylor, | John Rose |

LARGE SALE OF HOUSE LOTS. There is to be a large sale of house lots on the afternoon of Memorial Day. B. N. Adams advertises from 75 to 100 choice building lots on Penn's Hill. They are finely situated, on high grounds, commanding a fine view, and will be sold at so reasonable a price that our mechanics in that vicinity can have a lot of land of their own. Read the announcement in our columns.

☞ Rev. T. J. Danahy lectured at the Town Hall last Sunday evening on "Ireland and Catholicism under Henry VIII and Elizabeth." An admission fee of fifty cents was charged but his people greeted him with a crowded house. It was a very long lecture lasting over two hours.

☞ Mr. Fred Guston, who came among us a few months since and took a bride, has now opened a store in Robertson's block, and intends to make Quincy his future home. He is an old soldier, and would invite the public to give him a share of their patronage.

☞ It is hoped by our Congregationlist friends, that the march of desire toward village improvement will lead everyone to assist by their presence, on Tuesday evening next, in painting their chapel Strawberry red. Read their notice in another column.

☞ Owing to misunderstanding as regard to date, the public meeting announced to take place Wednesday and Thursday evening on the question of Sewerage, was a failure.

CONDEMNED. At a meeting of the Somerville School Board this week, the practice of pupils making presents to teachers at the close of the term was condemned, and the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, that class presents by the pupils of our several schools to their respective teachers be prohibited.

CHURCH DEDICATED.

Atlantic has a Congregational Church and Pastor.

Dedicatory Services and History of the Society since 1874.

The dedicatory services of the new Congregational Chapel at Atlantic occurred Thursday and the seating capacity was fully tested, there being three hundred or more present from the village, Quincy, Neponset and elsewhere. About the desk was an abundance of flowers, noticeable a floral cross from the Faulkner's greenhouses. A handsome bible, the gift of Mrs. D. F. Dewing, as a memorial of the late Miss Mary R. Lee, was upon the desk; also a pulpit lamp, the gift of Mr. Wade of Brockton. The quartette were Miss Savage, Mrs. Carver, and Messrs. Hall and Owen, and the order of exercises was as follows:

|---|---|
| Anthem, | Choir |
| Invocation, | Rev. D. W. Waldron |
| Hymn, | Congregation |
| Reading Scripture, | Rev. D. W. Waldron |
| Prayer, | Rev. F. L. Bristol |
| Historical Address, | Rev. R. F. Gordon |
| Hymn, | Congregation |
| Sermon, | Rev. Dr. Duryea |
| Dedicating Prayer, | Rev. E. N. Packard |
| Doxology. | Congregation |
| Benediction, | Rev. F. L. Bristol |

Rev. Dr. Duryea's sermon was an excellent one, and was from 2d Corinthians, 6 : 16.

The edifice cost $3,500. It is 35 by 65 in size, with an auditorium 35 by 53. There is a pastor's room in the rear of the pulpit and also two good-sized ante rooms. The builder was Mr. Samuel Davenport of Neponset. The land was purchased of B. F. Prescott of Neponset, who taking into consideration the purposes for which it was to be used, sold it for about one-half its value. The church is not free from debt but we learn that a greater part of the cost has been met. It will be heated by furnace.

For the following interesting sketch of the struggles and triumphs of the Atlantic Mission we are indebted to a lady of Atlantic, who has watched with much pleasure the erection of the new edifice.

A REVIEW.

The village of Atlantic is comparatively of recent growth. Until within twenty years the population was nearly stationary and consisted largely of prosperous farmers who rode in their own conveyances to the neighboring village of Neponset or Quincy Centre to attend their respective churches.

As year by year the farms were divided into lots, and houses and residents multiplied, there seemed to be a rising and ever increasing need of a place of worship nearer at hand.

Early in the summer of 1874 some of the ladies of Atlantic concluded to make an attempt towards having religious services held in the School building and called upon the late Dr. Duggan at that time one of the School Committee, who procured its use for them.

Rev. C. H. Rowe who was then pastor of the Baptist Church at Wollaston was next visited, and he kindly consented to be present and conduct services the following Sabbath, July 12th, when he preached to about fifty.

The next Sabbath, he, with others from his church and several gentlemen from Neponset, organized a Sabbath School. Mr. T. B. Emery, then a resipent of Wollaston, was appointed Superintendent, with Mr. Hobbs, principal of the Quincy schools, assistant superintendent and secretary. The first teachers were Mr. Bradford, soon succeeded by Mr. Wilde, Mr. J. B. Ramsdell, Mrs. Sawtelle, Mrs. Hallett, Misses Mary R. Lee, Mary Emery, Annie Clean and Kate C. Nelson.

Members of several different denominations were interested in the movement, and it was thought best to have the different ministers alternate in preaching. For nearly three years, pastors were procured from Wollaston, Neponset and more distant churches who gave their services without compensation.

A "Ladies Society" was organized the same summer; its object being to gather funds for the "Mission" in the hope of a church at some distant day. Miss Mary R. Lee was chosen President, and remained so until her recent death. She will long be deeply mourned by those who knew and loved her. Through her earnest and hopeful spirit and the efforts of the ladies who gathered round her, the enterprise once begun was never allowed to fail. Mrs. Hallett and Mrs. Butland, also first members of the society, some years ago were taken and left many sorrowing friends behind.

In the spring of 1877 it was decided to secure a pastor to preach once on the Sabbath, and Rev. S. L. Beiler of the Methodist Church of Neponset was engaged. In a few months he removed to the west, and his successor was Rev. C. F. Rice from the same church. He conducted the services at the School House the remainder of the year, and continued through the years 1878 and 1879. Though his time was of necessity limited, he did much good among the people, and was beloved by all.

In the spring of 1880, Rev. J. W. Richardson was engaged as pastor. He resided here while continuing his studies at the Theological school. He came as a Methodist but shortly after changed to the Baptist faith. He preached with much acceptance to the people until nearly the close of the year 1881, when he left for another field of labor.

As the regular pastors had so far been Methodist and Baptist, it was thought best by all that the Congregationalists should take their turn in furnishing a pastor, and Rev. R. F. Gordon of Neponset was secured. For over three years he has held the Sunday service, and much of the time conducted weekly prayer meetings in the village.

Through all these years the school committee have kindly allowed the use of the School Hall. It has been furnished by funds from the young ladies' fairs, and the "Ladies' Society," with settees, organ, pulpit and other needful articles. Some of the time the hall has been well filled; at others the numbers have been small, but at all times the Sunday school has flourished—under the care of Mr. Emery, succeeded by Mr. Ramsdell, followed again by Mr. Emery, and for the past year under the care of Mr. E. R. Wade.

The need of a church in a more central location has long been felt and often remarked upon, but there has seemed to be no one to take the first steps in the matter. Fortunately for Atlantic Rev. Mr. Gordon saw and felt the need, and took hold of the work with an energy and perseverance that defied all obstacles. Public meetings were called at the school house during the winter and spring of 1884, and after the subject was thoroughly discussed it was decided by the majority to build a Congregational Chapel.

Mr. Gordon commenced work at once in collecting funds from wealthy Congregationalists in Boston and elsewhere, and secured a fine lot in a most central and desirable location. A committee was appointed to visit every family in the village and get subscriptions towards the building. With very few exceptions all have taken a deep interest, and though from unavoidable causes the work has progressed slowly, it has gone surely on to its completion.

The people of Atlantic may now congratulate themselves on possessing a Chapel, roomy, pleasant, and easy of access, and they have great reason for gratitude to Rev. Mr. Gordon for his untiring efforts in their behalf. Many thanks are also due to the kind friends who have assisted them in this work and helped to make it a success.

May all labor together in the spirit of love and unity, which is the spirit of true Christianity.

Milton Gleanings.

The church going people of East Milton are jubilant over the success that attended the committee who canvassed the village for subscriptions to defray the church expenses for another year. The sum desired was pledged, the committee previously chosen were sworn in, and soon services will be held regularly again.

It is rumored that James McGue contemplates starting in business very soon.

Otis J. Aldrich is sojourning among us for a short time after a long absence.

The farce to have been given by the Sons of Temperance last Tuesday evening was postponed one week, and it is said "The Elevator" is stuck half way up.

Walter B. Randlett, assistant engineer of Newton made a flying visit this week to East Milton. He was formerly clerk of the Engineers of Milton.

The fair and sunflower concert given at the Town Hall, Milton, Thursday evening by the First Congregational Church was a great success and much credit is due to the committee of arrangements. The singing by the sunflowers was very amusing. The singing by the male quartette was the feature of the evening and very much appreciated.

Miss Annie Zeigler is quite ill with nervous prostration.

Mr. Henry D. Burr is having a two-story pitch roof house erected on Walnut street, Neponset.

The OUTLINES for the coming 4th of July Celebration in Quincy.

Believing that a proper celebration of the coming 4th of July would be agreeable to the citizens of Quincy, a committee has been organized for the above purpose.

Before making any arrangements, however, the committee voted to select Mr. A. G. Olney to solicit subscriptions to defray all expenses attending the celebration, and he will immediately call upon all the citizens to subscribe. If sufficient money can be raised by June 10, the committee will increase its number, meet again, and proceed to arrange to carry out the programme they already have in view.

It now depends entirely upon the liberality of the citizens, and the committee earnestly hope that Quincy will this year add another to the list of celebrations she has so creditably presented in the past.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

—o—

QUINCY, MAY 21, 1885.

General Order, No. 1.

In compliance with the laws of our order, our established customs, and general order No. 15, from National Headquarters, the Comrades of this Post will observe Saturday, May 30th, as Memorial Day.

This is the day of all the year the most hallowed to us; the day on which we gladly leave the routine of our daily avocations and illustrate again our loyalty to the memory of our deceased Comrades by gathering at the "Bivouacs of the Dead," and performing the sadly pleasant duties of decoration peculiar to our order.

Our many friends are cordially invited to send contributions of food to Revere Hall, on Saturday morning, May 30th, for the noon collation.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

1. The Post will assemble promptly at 7.30 A. M. at Headquarters.

2. A detail of Comrades under the command of Jun. Vice Commander George H. Osborn, accompanied by the Chaplain of the day, Rev. D. M. Wilson, will proceed to the National Sailors Home Cemetery, hold appropriate services, and deposit a Floral Offering to the memory of the departed Comrades.

3. A detail of Comrades, under the command of Adjutant W. P. Martin, will decorate the graves at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

4. A detail of Comrades, under the command of O. G. Warren Dunbar, will decorate the graves in Hancock and English Cemeteries.

5. Officer of the Day, Samuel D. De Forrest, will make a detail of one Comrade, and proceed to Mount Auburn Cemetery, and deposit a wreath marked "Post 88, G. A. R." on the grave of Col. Paul J. Revere.

6. Chaplain George W. Collier will take charge of invited guests.

7. At 9 A. M. the Post will form in front of Headquarters, and escorted by the Weymouth Brass Band will march to the corner of Granite and School Streets, where they will take carriages and proceed to West Quincy, at which place services will be held, and the graves decorated in the Cemeteries located in that part of the town.

8. At 12 M. a collation will be served at Post Headquarters for the Comrades and their invited guests.

9. At 1.30 P. M. the Post will form in front of Headquarters, and escorted by the Weymouth Brass Band march to Mount Wollaston Cemetery, where, with appropriate ceremonies, the Soldiers Monument will be decorated with flowers.

At 3.30 P. M. an oration will be delivered in the Town Hall by the Orator of the Day, Theophilus King, Jr., to which the public are generally invited.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who served in the late war to participate with us in the Services of the Day.

By Command of
I. M. HOLT, Commander.

W. P. MARTIN, Adjutant.

Memorial Services.

For the past few years it has been customary in this town, as well as elsewhere, to hold memorial services in at least one church the Sunday previous to Memorial Day, and to invite the local G. A. R. Post to attend. In pursuance of this custom, special services were held last Sunday morning at the Congregational Church at Wollaston, and in the evening at the First Church in the Centre. Delegations from Paul Revere Post were present at each service to the number of about fifty.

At Wollaston, Rev. B. B. Sherman, pastor of the church, addressed his audience with an appropriate sermon from St. John 11, 49th and 50th verses. The stars and stripes were draped about the desk and elsewhere, and a was placed conspicuously. The singing by the large choir was excellent. The Post appeared in their new and neat helmets for the first time.

The services at the First Church were intended to be union services, the pastors of the several churches in the Centre having been invited to participate, but Rev. D. M. Wilson, the pastor of the church, and Rev. Mr. Ayres of the Congregational Church were the only ministers to take part, and they were assisted by Mr. C. E. Snow, Dr. William L. Faxon and Hon. Everett C. Bumpus.

After a selection on the organ by Mr. J. B. Stetson and singing by the audience, Rev. Mr. Wilson read from the Scriptures and Rev. Mr. Ayres offered prayer Mr. Snow rendered Will Carleton's famous poem, "Cover Them Over" very finely, and it was exceedingly appropriate to the occasion. Dr. Faxon spoke of the observance of Memorial Day. He thought it was becoming too much of a day for sports, and that the sacrifice of so many lives was not appreciated as it should be. Rev. Mr. Ayres, who was a boy of eleven at the outbreak of the civil war, spoke of the lasting impression it then had upon him; how eager he then was to hear the last tidings from the battle fields, and how he was affected by the reports of the deaths of those he knew. Mr. Bumpus thought it more of a day for recalling memories of the war than of ideas. He paid a glowing tribute to Col. Paul J. Revere, from whom our Grand Army Post was named, and whose house he now lives in. Rev. Mr. Wilson spoke of the unpleasantness of wars and the justification of them. Singing closed the services.

Gala Night.

The attractions offered at the Quincy Coliseum Tuesday evening, drew together a crowded house, and the entertainment was very satisfactory. In fact anything in the line of sports and amusements undertaken by Mr. Edward Whicher is always good. A. D. Perry acted as referee.

The fancy double skating by Masters Howard and King was admired. In the search by four blindfolded skaters for a silver dollar dropped near the middle of the floor, it was too readily found to be amusing. Master King of Chelsea and Master Grady of Quincy, were well matched in the mile-and-a half race, but the former fell early in the race losing the lead and a part of a lap which he could not recover. Eben Glover took the lead in the two-mile race with Joshua Holbrook of North Weymouth, and held it until the last turn, when the latter pushed him aside and came in ahead. The race and money were awarded to Glover, however, because of the foul mentioned. The two-mile race between White, the skater, and Demuth, the bicycle rider, was easily won by the former. The wheelbarrow race of ten laps between Messrs. Hicks and Glennon was easily won by the latter, although his machine was contrary; it was quite amusing.

BOTTOM'S DREAM. The first production on any stage of Mr. Wm. T. W. Ball's Shakspearian vagary, "Bottom's Dream," took place this week at the Park Theatre, Boston, and has been attended by large audiences. The piece is unique in the use made of the weaver's dream in Shakspeare's delightful comedy of "Midsummer Night's Dream," the characters of Bottom, Quince, Snug, Starveling, Oberon, Titania and Puck being brought into modern life and caused to take part in the commonplace transactions of every day life in the "Modern Athens." There are many good things in the piece, some very fair witticisms, and some pretty music by Mr. John J. Braham. The costumes are handsome and the stage setting elegant, while the large company of performers includes a number of good artists, headed by Mr. N. C. Goodwin, who personated Bottom. The principal characters in addition to Bottom were personated as follows: Quince, Henry V. Donnelly; Snug, Thomas Edwards; Flute, William Gill; Snout, Edward Goodwin; Starveling, George A. Schiller; Oberon, Pauline Hall; Titania, Fannie Rice; Puck, Daisy Murdock; Tambo, the "little minstrel," James Radcliffe. Mr. Goodwin's cleverness was the principal element in the performance and was greatly appreciated. "Bottom's Dream" will hold the stage till further notice, and will close the season at this house.

EXEMPTION. The Senate has passed to be engrossed a bill exempting all honorably discharged soldiers and sailors from the civil service rules. This will give preference to soldiers as applicants for office under the government, even if they cannot pass as good an examination in the higher branches. The requirement for any office should be, is he qualified to discharge its duties properly, and not how much Greek and Latin does he know?

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, MAY 25, 1885.

The managers of Mount Vernon have been in annual session during the week at the home of the Father of his Country. This corporation is known as the Board of Regents of the Mount Vernon Association, and it is composed of ladies only. They have succeeded in making Mount Vernon a veritable Mecca to which pilgrimage is yearly increasing, and they have given the tomb of Washington a national interest. The estate has an endowment fund of $30,000 raised by contributors in various states through the solicitations of patriotic women. This is invested in United States bonds. During the year the steamer which goes down the Potomac daily from Washington to Mount Vernon and returns, has carried 18,000 passengers. The round trip fee is one dollar per capita, and the receipts are turned over to the managers. The association has attempted to keep up the estate, roads, fences, tomb, and all; restore the old Mansion to the condition in which it was left at the time of Washington's death, and to re-furnish each room as nearly as possible in the style in which Martha Washington left it. In doing this they have been assisted by the inventory taken by Washington's executors; and by information gleaned from other sources. By much searching among antiquities, and through voluntary contributions of the family descendants, many of the original articles of furniture have been gathered up and put in the old places.

The trip to Mount Vernon is a pleasant one on any fine day, and it is especially delightful at this season of the year. The banks of the river are clothed in fresh green, and the laurel, ivy, and other spring blossoming shrubs are out in all their glory. I boarded the steamer in company with other sight-seers and went down to see the Regents in session.

In conversation with some of the Regents about the management of the estate, they expressed great satisfaction, and said their business was being conducted on business principles. It has been remarked by outsiders in various quarters, however, with more freedom than gallantry, that the association is making too much money, and not expending its revenues wisely. One lady remarked to me "some people are amusing themselves by saying hard things about us. We do not mind it though, for the very fact that the old homestead is attracting more people every year, and never presented a more satisfactory appearance than at present proves that the Regents know how to conduct the affairs successfully.

The usual annual examination of the property has revealed the necessity of extensive repairs, embracing the roof and foundation of the Mansion, draining of the tomb, etc. These and other improvements to be made this year will entail an expenditure of about $6,000. The association is fortunate in having an uninvested surplus of $6,000, including the year's interest upon the endowment.

Letter from New York City.

NEW YORK, MAY 27, 1885.

Decoration Day began in this city last Sunday, when a number of detachments of the G. A. R. visited some of the cemeteries in the vicinity and decorated the graves of their former comrades. Services commemorative of dead heroes were held in various churches throughout the city, which were largely attended by soldiers.

After thirty years of hard fighting victory was achieved at last by the friends of the Broadway Railroad on Saturday. Jacob Sharp has worked long and earnestly in the interest of a Broadway surface road, but has been bitterly opposed by the large property holders along the proposed line. The tracks are being laid as rapidly as possible, and will extend from the Battery to Union Square, there connecting with what is now known as the Broadway Railroad.

Most of the prominent Clergymen of the city who did not preach last Sunday on Decoration Day and its associations, talked about the revised Bible. Dr. Collyer was of the opinion that it was a very liberal version, that it has made the Bible of to-day for people living to-day and that it was such a work as people of this age might take up and read and feel profited thereby. Dr. T. W. Chambers also spoke approvingly of the revision; while the Rev. D. A. McClenahan was quite sure that the revised version would not take the place of King James' translation for many years if ever.

Among the many suggestions in regard to the public health of this city for the coming summer is one which suggests the washing of the city streets with salt water. The suggestion comes from the Fire Commissioners.

YACHTS, ETC. Henry M. Faxon has bought another yacht, the Ruby, of Alfred Schoof. It is an old boat but has a good record, and Skipper Faxon expects considerable from her. It is a deep keel yacht, but we learn her new owner intends to change her to a centreboard.

Crane and Bumpus' new yacht was under sail last Sunday for the first time there was but little wind at the time, but other trials during the week have proved entirely satisfactory.

The opening regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club occurs next Saturday afternoon, off Quincy Great Hill, at three o'clock.

Yachtsmen should remember the sale of sail boats at Quincy Point next Monday afternoon.

Quincy Business Concerns.

F. A. MORELAND & CO., DRY GOODS.

There are no commercial establishments that add so much to the general business importance of a city or large town, or to its metropolitan character, as its modern dry goods stores. At Quincy is the house of F. A. Moreland & Co. in Robertson's Block. It is a model of neatness in all of its appointments. Its immense stock of pretty things in pretty material and pretty colors is arranged in the most attractive manner. Mr. Moreland came here after eight years' experience in a large establishment at Harvard Square, Cambridge. He is quick to perceive the drift of popular approval in patterns and styles and has always something new to offer in the way of novelties. He keeps a full line of standard goods and a fine stock of small wares, hoisery, real laces, ribbons, trimmings, corsets, pocket books and bags, worsteds and yarns, parasols, underwear for men, women and children, and indeed almost everything that one can desire in dry goods and small wares, and everything of the best kind. Mr. Moreland carries a large stock and prices were never lower. He buys as low as the lowest and can sell at a low price. Indeed many purchasers having learned that they can get at this store just what they want, and at Boston prices, come directly here to save the time and trouble of looking elsewhere. Such a broad and comprehensive policy by a young merchant will bring to him a large business and advantage to his patrons. The store of Moreland & Co. has brought strength and character to the commercial interests of the town, and whatever success they have attained may be attributed to a strict adherence to every representation, to giving full value for money, to promoting the interests of others so far as the requirements of trade will permit. Each of their transactions is an exemplification of those principles without which no prosperity or success is ever complete.

CLAPP BROS., DRY GOODS.

This is an old, solid and reliable dry goods store, having been established by Mr. E. Clapp more than thirty years ago. His sons have now succeeded to the business, and they are thoroughly familiar with its every detail. Their store is conveniently located, opposite Roberston's Block and near the Post Office. Their stock embraces a choice line of dry goods, small wares and gents' furnishing goods. As this is the season of the year for ladies' cashmere shawls, they have secured a large stock in bright and handsome patterns, and no lady can hardly conceive of any design for a parasol which cannot be found here. They have all the natty shapes for promenading and driving, in every material at the lowest prices. They have a choice and well selected stock of dress goods, hoisery and lace trimmings. For all these years this store has been kept up to the demands of the place, supplying all the town around with the innumerable articles of a country dry goods store, and so prominent has been its position in the trade that its progress becomes an important part of the town's history.

CHARLES H. ROGERS, PIANOS.

Mr. Rogers has just taken the agency for the famous Guild upright pianos. The Guild upright is one of the best pianos made. It is rich and powerful in tone and susceptible of the most delicate shading. Besides Mr. Rogers keeps a full line of organs, sewing machines and sewing machine supplies. Machines repaired in a skilful manner. He has also a full line of wall papers. Mr. Frank A. Locke has opened an office with Mr. Rogers and will attend to the tuning and repairing of pianos. He is a skilful workman and prices reasonable.

G. R. ENGLAND, D. D. S., DENTIST.

No art or science has made more progress during the last quarter of a century than that of dentistry. What has now become one of the learned professions was formerly only a trade. The college course is almost identical with that required for a medical diploma, and the various operations on the mouth and teeth are performed by a skilled surgeon. Prominent in this profession is Dr. G. R. England, successor to Dr. Bonney. He is a gentleman of liberal education, several years experience, a cool nerve and refined tastes. His delight is operative dentistry and his work is of a high order.

JAMES E. TIRRELL, LAWYER.

From its earliest history Quincy has been known as the home of our greatest statesmen and lawyers. Among the lawyers most frequently seen in our courts is Mr. James E. Tirrell who has always acquitted himself with such marked ability that he has won the unqualified confidence of the public and his opinions are respected by the court and judges before whom his practice may chance to call him.

TIRRELL & SONS,

CARRIAGE MANUFACTURERS.

In writing of the many enterprising manufacturing establishments of Quincy, we refer with pleasure to the carriage and harness factory of Messrs. Tirrell & Sons, established by Mr. Charles P. Tirrell, in 1819. His sons, Mr. C. Phillip and Quincy Tirrell, have now succeeded to the business under the above firm name. The factory is situated on Hancock street, near the centre of the town. The productions of this establishment consist of all the standard patterns of open and top buggies, and wagons of every description. This firm having had a long and successful experience, and employing only skilful workmen, are prepared to turn out carriages of the most approved styles and most superior workmanship. They take pride in showing their materials and carriages in process of manufacture, as all of their lumber is selected long in advance, well seasoned, carefully selected and only that which is perfect being used. Messrs. Tirrell & Sons are also extensive manufacturers of buggy and team harnesses. The stock of which these goods are made is of the highest standard of excellence, and they are able to offer inducements difficult to obtain elsewhere. Such an establishment is a credit to the town.

J. F. MERRILL, BOSTON BRANCH.

Quincy numbers among her chief commercial attractions several important grocery establishments, and we refer with pleasure to the character and extent of the business carried on by Mr. J. F. Merrill at the Boston Branch. Having the largest and finest appointed establishment, Mr. Merrill may be regarded as the leading exponent of the trade in this town. Recognizing the fact that it is impossible to carry in one store a full line of everything that might be found in a country store, as so many attempt to do, he has confined his stock to a straight line of groceries. He is the only dealer here who does this, and the result is that in his specialties he has a larger stock and a more complete assortment than can be found on this side of Boston. He has flour, teas, coffees, canned fruits, condiments and everything in the line of straight groceries. His sales are immense, and as his stock is frequently replenished his goods are always fresh. Mr. Merrill buys all his goods at first hands and never allows more than a single profit to come between the producer and the consumer. He pays no middle profits. His flour comes direct from the mill, his tobacco from the factory, and his canned goods from the packers. He buys his teas one hundred chests at a time, and as he buys at a lower price can sell at a lower figure, hence the advantage. He is considered an expert in sampling tea, and prides himself on selling the finest flavored teas and coffees. But few grocers know a good article when they find it. Mr. Merrill never attempts to compete in prices by selling cheap goods, but actually sells fine groceries at a less price than smaller dealers can afford to. He has such a large trade because the people have learned that he gives them so much for their money. Mr. Merrill having won an enviable reputation for liberality and fair dealing and brought strength and character to the commercial interests of the town he is sure to hold a first place in his line of trade so long as he remains in the business.

Ball and Bat.

To-day six games will be played in the Old Colony League, if the weather permits. The St. Johns play at South Abington in the morning, and in the afternoon at South Quincy, with the Neponsets. The Hyde Parks play at Braintree in the morning, and the Rangers will be there in the afternoon. The Neponsets and Rangers will be matched at Weymouth in the morning, and the Samosets play at Hyde Park in the morning.

The Alerts of Quincy will play at Neponset.

Assessors' Notice.

To the Inhabitants and all other Persons liable to pay taxes in the Town of Quincy.

THE Assessors of the Town of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all persons liable to pay taxes therein, that they will be at the office of the Selectmen, EVERY SATURDAY in May, from 2 to 4 1-2 o'clock P. M. and from May 28th until June 2d, every day from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., to receive the valuation of Estates; and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at said office, a true and correct schedule of the Real and Personal Estates, for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement."—[Chap 175 of the Acts of 1882.] When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sections 14, 15 and 16, of Chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Returns of Property held for Literary, Benevolent, Charitable or Scientific Purposes.

[Chap. 217, Acts 1882.]

"All persons and corporations are required to bring in to the assessors, not later than the first day of July, 1885, true lists of all real and personal estate held by such persons and corporations respectively for literary, benevolent, charitable or scientific purposes on the first day of May, 1885, together with statements of the amounts of all receipts and expenditures by such persons or corporations for said purposes during the year next preceding said first day of May, 1885, such lists and statements to be in such detail as may be required by the Tax Commissioner." Blank forms for the above returns can be had of the assessors.

Persons holding estates in trust are requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from some other causes, the executor or administrator is required to give notice of such change. In default of such notice, he will be held responsible for the tax assessed.

Any person bringing in a list of his taxable property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, be doomed according to the laws of the Commonwealth.

All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the assessors at their office, on or before the 2d day of June; and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board of Assessors, notwithstanding a verbal statement or informal written communication to any one or more of the assessors.

When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax assessed upon such person for such property can be granted, unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per centum the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well." "My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

KEEP IT PURE,

The Life is the Blood—Prevent Disease—Surgery the Last Resort—A Telling Letter.

Here is a fact for you to think over, viz.: Medical science proves that diseases, no matter how great a variety they seem to have, proceed from comparatively few cause. It is for this reason that some single medicines relieve or cure so wide a range of complaints—some of them appearing almost directly opposite in their natures. When a medical preparation acts at once upon the digestive and urinary organs, and also purifies the blood, the list of difficulties subject to its control is astonishing. But, while many things are said to possess the power, those which actually do exert it are very rare.

It is conceded that DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., is the most effective preparation now in use for all diseases arising from a foul or impure state of the circulation. Hence it is more than likely that if the writer of the following letter had habitually taken "FAVORITE REMEDY" ten years ago, he would never have suffered from Cancer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS., March 22, 1884.

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.,

DEAR SIR:—About six years ago I was obliged to resort to external treatment for the removal of a cancerous growth on my lip. On my return home, I became sensible that my blood needed a thorough cleansing. My whole system, too, required toning up. While waiting about for the best remedy to do this, your "FAVORITE REMEDY" was so highly commended in my hearing that I resolved to try it. I did so, and the result surprised me, it was effected so quickly and completely. I soon got over the depression produced by the operation, and since the "FAVORITE REMEDY," which I have continued to take in small doses, has kept me in such health and strength as I never had before, nor expected to have. It is the best blood purifier in the world. I am sure of that. Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW FARRELL.

In all cases when a consultation is deemed desirable,

Address:—Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. But, if you have not done so, adopt "FAVORITE REMEDY" as a household friend.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine
DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S
FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ## It is the Season.

It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand,
And two by two in fairy-land.

The brooding boy, the sighing maid,
Wholly fain and half afraid,
Do meet along the hazel'd brook,
To pass and linger, pause and look.

A year ago, and, blithely paired,
Their rough-and-tumble play they shared,
They kissed and quarreled, laughed and cried
A year ago at Eastertide.

Her, whom with rude, uplifted hand
He did bethreaten or command—
Her, in a somewhat longer dress,
He now would tremble to caress.

Now by the stile ablaze she stops,
And his demurer eyes he drops:
Now they exchange averted sighs,
Or stand and marry silent eyes.

And he to her a hero is,
And sweeter she than primroses:
Their common silence dearer far
Than nightingale and mavis are.

Now, when they sever wedded hands,
Joy trembles in their bosom strands,
And lovely laughter leaps and falls
Upon their lips in madrigals.

Farm and Garden.

The Currant Worm.

As soon as the currant bush expands its leaves the currant worm begins its destructive work, and if left unmolested will entirely destroy the leaves, thus leaving the young fruit exposed to the sun without anything to nourish it. Fortunately this is an enemy that is very easily destroyed when taken in season, but if the first crop of worms should be neglected it is much more difficult to destroy the second crop which will be more numerous.

This worm is covered with a very sticky substance, so much so, that any fine, dry substance will adhere so closely to the skin that it is very sure death to the worm. Air slacked lime, ashes, plaster, or even fine, dry loam sifted over the bushes, will destroy every worm it covers, but as there will be a portion of the worms on the under side of the leaves, there will always be enough escape to lay eggs for another crop, to require the work to be done over again.

It is very important to destroy all of the first crop; to do this it needs something that does not require to be dusted on every worm; fortunately we have a substance which does the work very effectually; a little hellebore dusted on the bushes is sure death to them, and if it be dusted on as soon as the first crop is all hatched, it requires but a small amount to each bush, for when the first crop hatches out they are all in the centre of the bush near the ground, and a little hellebore dusted on them by opening the bush, is just as good as if scattered all over the bushes. Since we have adopted the use of hellebore in this way, we have had no trouble with a second or third crop of worms; but while we used lime, or ashes, there was always enough of the first crop left to secure a second crop, and while we could conquer most of them, when the third crop came it was not pleasant to have the fruit, which was about ripening, covered with either lime or ashes, or in fact, any other material that would destroy the worms, and so they were permitted to have their own way.

The best way is to apply something that will make clean work of the first crop, but if a few of the second crop appear, there is yet a chance to prevent a third crop by the free use of hellebore.

By spending a little time to destroy all of the worms, in a few years but very few will make their appearance.—Ploughman.

Anecdotes.

"You see," remarked the old resident, "before this town got tony, we simply called this thoroughfare the Bungtown Road. Now we call it 'the avenue.'"

"Yes," replied the visitor, "it became necessary to avenue name for it."

A lesson in physics: Teacher—"What is velocity?"

Pupil—"Velocity is what a man puts down a hot plate with."

"My dear," said a father, "you must marry a man of mature age; what think you of a husband of fifty?"

"I think two of twenty-five would be better, papa?"

A minister forgot to take his sermon with him to church, and his wife, discovering the mistake, sent it to him in charge of a small boy, who was to receive ten cents for the job. Presently he returned for the money.

"You delivered the sermon, did you?" she asked.

"No, mum," he replied; "I jest guv it to him; he's a delivering' of it himself."

Recorded by the Pottsville Chronicle: "Now Johnie," said the teacher, "if your father borrows $100, and promises to pay $10 a week, how much will he owe in seven weeks?"

"One hundred dollars," said Johnie.

"I'm afraid you don't know your lesson very well," remarked the teacher.

"I may not know my lesson very well," Johnie frankly acknowledged, "but I am acquainted with pa."

"Might I ask who lives here?" asked a polite gentleman to a stranger he met in front of a handsome mansion.

"Certainly, sir," as politely replied the other.

"Who is it, sir?"

"Darned if I know!" replied the stranger.

Conundrums.

What is the most favorable season to have letters from India? The season that brings them on soon (the monsoon).

If you pull a dog's tail why is that like your tea-caddy? Because you're teasing it (your tea is in it).

Why is a clear frosty night like a hot summer day? It is the best time for seeing the Great Bear (grate bare).

Why are the Queen's pastrycooks like the Canadas?—They are the Queen's dough-minions.

Why do railway men always speak of a locomotive as "she?" Because it suggests tender thoughts and draws men after it.

IN THE VICINITY.

—All the mills in Dedham have closed.

—The Somerville Chronicle has been discontinued.

—The Dedham Directory is fast approaching completion.

—O. L. Dorr, of Sharon, will plant 150 acres of potatoes this year.

—The houses at Nantasket open today, and the season is near at hand.

—Asa P. French, of Braintree, has been admitted to practice at the bar.

—Gen. B. F. Pratt and J. P. Burrell are taking the census of Weymouth.

—An effort is about to be made to establish a Unitarian church in East Weymouth.

—Milford's G. A. R. Post has fourteen members and will to-day decorate the graves of 155 soldiers.

—The Norfolk County Division, G. A. R., will hold its annual picnic at Highland Grove in July.

—Nine two-horse teams plowing recently in one field gave Sharon plain the appearance of a western prairie.

—The Commonwealth has been sold by the heirs of the late Charles W. Slack to Mr. D. N. Thayer of New York.

—Hopedale, a suburb of Milford, wants to become a town by itself, and preliminary surveys are now being made.

—Joseph Sherman of East Weymouth has raised nearly 900 chickens this spring, and he does not use incubators.

—The Columbia roller skating rink of Boston has placed the admission at twenty cents, which includes the use of skates.

—The school committee of Dedham have selected Abner J. Phipps, Ph. D., for the position of Superintendent of Schools.

—Abington talks of getting a water supply from Sandy pond in Pembroke. A town meeting was to be held last evening.

—The Salvation Army arrived in Weymouth Sunday. There were large audiences at their meetings but no converts.

—E. P. Brown, the lawyer who won his fame in the Tewsbury trial, is to erect a large house and barn on Moose Hill in Sharon.

—The Young Men's Christian Union of Boston, will have a special memorial service Sunday evening to be addressed by Hon. John D. Long and Rev. E. A. Horton.

—George M. Towle, Esq., of Brookline, will deliver the Memorial address at Dedham to day. The pupils of the public schools are to take part in the memorial services.

—The Sharon Water Company are putting service pipes into the houses of their patrons in Sharon for twenty-five cents a running foot, including pipe, cost of digging, and ordinary plumbing.

—The Mystic Order of Owls will not present their usual carnival celebration at Charlestown on the 17th of June this year, the parade being given up on account of lack of subscription from those most directly benefited by it.

—Capt. Horace Niles Post, G. A. R., of Randolph will observe to-day about as usual. Accompanied by the Randolph Band it goes to Holbrook in the morning at eight o'clock. At 2.30 P. M. they will march over the same route as previous years. In the evening there will be an address at Stetson Hall by Adjutant General W. W. Blackman, an original poem and readings.

—The Dedham Transcript says: "Although this town voted to grant no licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors during the present year, its good effects up to this date are not very discernible. Saloons which were licensed last year have taken down their signs, closed their doors, and "To Let" placed in the windows, nevertheless men are seen staggering in our highways, under the influence of "tanglefoot." Where is the man who will do for Dedham what Henry H. Faxon has done for the town of Quincy?"

This and That.

☞ As a happy couple were leaving the church, the husband said to the partner of his life: "Marriage must seem a dreadful thing to you; why you were all of a tremble, and could hardly say 'I will.'?" "I will have more courage and say it louder next time," said the blushing bride.

☞ An editor who has probably suffered "some," tells people how to stop a paper. He says—"Call at the office and fork up arrearages, and order it stopped like a man; and not refuse to take it out of the post office, and sneak away like a puppy."

☞ "If a man wants to own the earth, what does woman want?" inquired Mr. Grapp of his better half, after a little family matinee a few days ago. "Well, my dear," responded that lady in a gentle tone, "to own the man, I suppose."

☞ Mr. Brown lately went into the country for the first time in his life, and records it as a singular coincidence in nature that every pond he saw—"and there were many of 'em," had land 'round it. Mr. Brown is evidently a "natural" philosopher.

☞ Didn't require it. A clergyman was attending a soldier on his deathbed, when, observing a drummer in the same ward, whom he took for an invalid, he exorted him to join with them in prayer. "Thank'ee," said the hero of the drumsticks, "I do not require it; the doctor tells me I am getting better."

☞ "Yes," remarked the thoughtful-faced man, "it is tiresome to hear Edgar's conversation; he's forever talking about himself, you know. But I'll say this much for him, he shows himself to be thoroughly in love with his subject."

☞ A colored child had a fall from a second story window the other day, and his mother, in relating the accident at the grocery store, said; "Dere dat chile was a comin' down feet fust, wid every chance of being killed, when the Lawd he turned him over, the chile struck on his head, and there wasn't so much as a button off."

☞ A bottle of medicine was prescribed to a Toledo man, with the directions to take "a teaspoonful in water three times a day." He took it daily in his bath tub—and got well.

☞ The next thing to a funeral procession is to walk behind a love-sick couple going home from a party.

Alcohol. Effect upon Nervous System.

CONTINUED.

In all this there is exhilaration but no nourishment; there is animation, but no permanent power conferred on brain or muscle. Alcohol may cheer for the moment. It may set the sluggish blood in motion, start the flow of thought, and excite a temporary gayety. "It may enable a wearied or feeble organism to do brisk work for a short time. It may make the brain briefly brilliant. It may excite the muscle to quick action, but it does nothing at its own cost, fills up nothing it has destroyed, and itself leads to destruction." Even the mental activity it has excited is an unsafe state of mind, for that just poise of the faculties so essential to good judgment is disturbed by the presence of the intruder.

Johnson well remarked, "Wine improves the conversation by taking the edge off the understanding."

"If women are fit to rule in monarchies, it is difficult to say why they are not qualified to vote in a republic.—Senator Anthony, R. I.

Miscellany.

Supreme Judicial Court.

Before Judge Allen last week, the following cases from Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree were disposed of. They consisted almost entirely of libels for divorce. In all of the following cases decrees nisi were rendered.

Emily A. Packard, of Quincy, brought a suit for divorce against Josiah V. Packard for neglect to support. Custody of children was granted to libellant.

George E Hollis, of Braintree, brought suit for divorce from Lucila A. Hollis, for desertion. Custody of children granted to libellant.

Mary Power, of Quincy, brought a suit for divorce against John Power for desertion. The libellant was granted leave to resume the name of former husband.

Geo. H. Larkin, of Boston, applied for a divorce from Mary A. Latkin, of Braintree, for violation of marriage vows. The custody of children was granted to libellant.

John F. Bates, of Weymouth, applied for a divorce from Nellie M. Bates, of Abington, for desertion.

Louise H. Bradford, of Braintree, applied for a divorce from Albert E. Bradford for gross and confirmed habits of intoxication.

John Wyllie, of Quincy, applied for a divorce from Isabella V. Wyllie for violation of the marriage vows. The custody of children was granted to libellant.

Geo. A. Beedem, of Weymouth, applied for a divorce against Fannie T. Beedem for desertion.

Georgie Howard Drew of Weymouth, applied for a divorce from John Franklin Drew, for violation of the marriage vows. The libellant was granted leave to resume maiden name.

Caroline S. Woodward, of Quincy, sued for divorce from Geo. M. Woodward for gross and confirmed habits of intoxication. Alimony, $600.

Swindles.

Time after time has been exposed through the press the swindling which is practised by advertising work to be done by which parties, particularly ladies, may earn a good living at home. And yet, despite those exposures, the swindlers continue to profit, and profit largely, by the credulity, we may say the gullibility of the public. Within a few days we have, at our own expense—we paid a dollar to the fraud that we might satisfy ourselves that he was a fraud—pricked one of these bubbles, and we will say to every reader of the Journal that in remitting money to any such advertiser as we have described, he or she is not only cheating himself or herself, but is encouraging a swindle. With the particular case to which we refer above we have not yet got through. We propose not to lose our dollar; but even if we do lose it, we shall feel that it is well expended if we shall save any number of our readers from being swindled, as we purposely allowed ourselves to be. Don't take any stock in these work-to-be-done-at-home advertisements. Every one of them is a fraud. The trouble is that each one who gets cheated does not like to tell of it. We paid for our experience on purpose that we might tell of it, and if we can make the swindlers responsible beyond the amount of the sum remitted them, we shall do so. We trust that every one of our exchanges will comment upon this matter and thus save a host of confiding persons of small means from being swindled.—Hingham Journal.

COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum, or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D.

It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. H. A. MOTT, Ph.D.

The Royal Baking Powder has been used in my family for many years, and these practical test, as well as the chemical tests to which I have submitted it, have proved it perfectly healthful, of uniform, excellent quality, and free from any deleterious substance. WM. McMURTRIE, E.M., Ph.D.

I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal indorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and boards of health all over the world.

NOTE.—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders as shown by the chemical analyses and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, besides affording the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the Diagram shows some of the Alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

REGULATIONS
[OF THE]
Board of Health
OF THE
TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy v

The Quincy Granite Co.,

F. J. FULLER, PROP.,

West Quincy, Mass.

ONE of the oldest and most reliable firms in New England, would respectfully inform the public that they are better than ever prepared to furnish the finest quality of Granite work that can be produced. Our facilities are such that we can furnish all work in this line at the lowest prices. Being the entire owner of one of the oldest Dark Blue Granite Quarries in Quincy, Mass., our Quarry has a reputation far above any other of its kind, and the stone being procured from so great a depth (having been worked down about one hundred and fifty feet) we obtain a richness and purity of color that cannot be excelled. We guarantee that this stock will retain its rich color and polish longer than any other Dark Blue granite that is now produced. We have also control of a superior White Granite Quarry in New England, and with our constantly improving machinery, are doing the best quality of work.

All our stock is carefully selected from the quarries, and as the most skilled workmen are employed to oversee the work, we are willing to guarantee entire satisfaction in all cases before the work is accepted. Persons wishing to purchase any Granite Memorial Work, such as will find it decidedly in their interest to communicate with us for any information desired, as we keep on hand a large supply of designs, which we will furnish for the inspection of our patrons.

Parties can order work of us at much less expense than of dealers in their own vicinity, many of whom buy their stock and work of us. We will gladly answer all communications and submit designs if required, with confidence that our prices and workmanship will secure for us an extended patronage.

We make a specialty of all kinds of

and can supply any demand at short notice. Also Polished Columns of all sizes for building and other architectural purposes.

We furnish large quantities of Granite Pavements, and are prepared to contract with cities or corporations to supply the same or to construct and pave streets.

Thankful for the liberal patronage which we have received during the last ten years, we expect a continuance of the same and respectfully solicit your orders.

New Moon, June 12th, 5.42 P. M.

WHAT a pity it is that the opponents of civil service reform should try to make a catspaw of our honorable veteran soldier! He does not crave exemption from the reasonable tests that are applied to others. In the field over and over again he accepted heavy adverse odds and won, and now in civil life he cares for no privileges above those enjoyed by his fellow citizens. Politicians and pension agents have gone too far in assuming that his spirit is mercenary, that he is ever ready to "sell the mighty space of his large honors for so much trash as may be grasped thus." Money can never repay the debt the country owes him. And all this talk about exempting him from civil service examinations, and giving him a pension whether he needs it or not, is simply putting him in a wrong and degrading attitude. The union soldier resents any such assault upon his dignity.

IN the realm of morals the victory lies with England, while the lies and the land are with Russia. That is about the present state of the Anglo Russian conflict. The higher civilization has been honored in the statesmanship of Gladstone, but with cynical indifference to sentiment of that sort the Czar, the anointed head of the Eastern Church, flatters himself that he is a "practical man" in getting what he coveted. The Czar is not the only "practical man" who thinks that success is its own reward.

Memorial Day in Quincy.

Again has the day which is hallowed to the brave defenders of the Union been commemorated throughout the country, and never were the ceremonies more universal or extensive. In Quincy many of the places of business were closed the entire day, and of the others there were very few exceptions where the stores did not close in the afternoon.

Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., assembled at its headquarters in good numbers early in the day. A detail of comrades under the command of Junior Vice Commander George H. Osborn, accompanied by Rev. D. M. Wilson, Chaplain of the Day, visited the cemetery at the National Sailors Home, and deposited floral offerings on the graves of seventy-five departed comrades. A detail under command of Adjutant W. P. Martin decorated one hundred and twelve graves at the Mt. Wollaston Cemetery, and another detail in command of the Officer of the Guard, paid tribute to the memory of sixteen soldiers in the Hancock Cemetery and one in the English Cemetery.

Shortly after nine A. M. the Post formed in front of its headquarters, under the command of Isaac M. Holt, and escorted by Stetson's Weymouth Band, Francis P. Loud of Quincy, leader, marched to the junction of School and Granite streets, where carriages were in waiting to convey them to the west part of the town. The streets being extremely dusty, and consequently very disagreeable marching, the barges conveyed the passengers direct to the Hall Cemetery, instead of the junction of Copeland and Cemetery streets as usual.

At the Hall Cemetery, prayer was offered by Rev. D. M. Wilson, Chaplain of the Day, and Adjutant W. P. Martin spoke briefly in eulogy of the soldiers, and of our common flag and nation. There was also a selection by the band. Fourteen graves of deceased comrades were decorated with baskets of handsome plants and flowers.

The Catholic Cemeteries in this part of the town were next visited, and at each of them services were conducted by Rev. F. A. Friguglietti, and the band rendered fine selections. In the old cemetery sixteen graves were remembered, and in the new cemetery thirty-eight, making a total of sixty-eight in West Quincy.

The Post and Band returned to the Center in barges, and at twelve o'clock partook of a collation at Revere Hall, which had been supplied by the lady friends of the Post.

At one o'clock the procession again formed, and marched to the junction of Hancock, School, Elm streets and Quincy avenue, where Quincy's well-known photographer, A. F. Bussell, secured pictures of the group.

The line of march was again taken for the Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The morning had been hot and dusty, but the threatening clouds which had commenced to gather before the noon hour, opened their portals when the procession reached the Square, and although the rain did not pour in torrents yet it had the effect to keep many away from the cemetery. The usual ceremonies were, however, performed. Rev. D. M. Wilson offered prayer, there was a selection by the band, and the four emblematic wreaths were placed on the Soldiers' Monument, accompanied by brief appropriate remarks. Junior Vice Commander Osborne deposited the red wreath in the name of Fraternity; Officer of the Guard Dunbar the white wreath in the name of Charity; and Adjutant Martin the blue wreath in the name of Loyalty; while Commander Holt deposited the red, white and blue wreath, emblematic of the order, Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty.

The procession reached the Town Hall nearly an hour ahead of its scheduled time, 3.30, and soon a large audience assembled. The exercises consisted of a selection by the band; prayer by the Rev. D. M. Wilson; selection by the band; address by Theophilus King, Jr.; and selection by the band. The address by our townsman, Mr. King, was a noble effort, the speaker putting his whole soul and heart into his remarks. We were in hopes to have been able to present it in full to our readers, but as the address was mostly extemporaneous, we are unable to do so. He spoke feelingly of General Grant and Abraham Lincoln; also of the importance of the battle of Gettysburg, and paid the soldiers a deserved tribute for their sacrifice, their valor and their patriotism. But as any attempt of ours to review his address would not do it justice, we will not attempt it. Round after round of applause greeted the orator as he finished, having occupied thirty-five minutes, and so well pleased were his hearers that they insisted on his continuing, which he did, although briefly.

The exercises at the hall concluded the ceremonies of the day.

CRICKET.

QUINCY vs. ROXBURY.

The first match of the Cricket Commercial League, was played on Saturday last, between the Roxbury and Quincy, on the West Roxbury Park, in the presence of a large number of spectators, including a great many from Quincy. The Roxbury captain having won the toss, sent the Quincy team to the bat. Caven and H. O'Neil defending the wickets against the bowling of McCarty and Gurry. The runs came very fast until the score had reached 21, when Caven was bowled for 8; Grierson now went in, but was bowled without scoring. W. Carson then took the bat and the score was run up to 42, when he was caught out after scoring 6. T. Carson now became H. O'Neil's partner, and some lively playing took place until the score had reached 59; when O'Neil was bowled after playing a steady and careful innings of 28. Burnie now joined Carson and after driving his second ball clear out of the grounds for 6 runs, was bowled in the third ball. Graham now went in and by some good play very quickly scored 11, when he was caught out. Stewart now took the bat but very soon lost Carson, who was caught out after playing a very fine innings of 15. J. O'Neil, Gordon and Duncan failing to make any scores, the innings closed with the respectable score of 93, Stewart carrying out his bat for a very useful eleven.

Roxbury now took the bat, but owing to the splendid bowling of Grierson and Burnie they were unable to make any show, and the innings closed for 21, this being more than sixty runs behind, they had to follow their innings, this time to face the bowling of the O'Neil brothers, who in time were relieved by Gordon and T. Carson. The rain was now falling heavily, which made it very difficult for the bowling and fielding of the Quincy team, but all the bowlers keeping well to their work they again disposed of the home team, this time for 35, Garry alone showing any defense, thus leaving the Quincy team victorious in one inning, and 37 runs. The fielding of the Quincys was good, Caven's wicket keeping, and Duncan's long stopping being greatly admired. Score:—

Trees.

CANADA, MAY 29, 1885.

When we think of our poor little sticks on Washington street that cost so much, we wish the Village Improvement Society could see maples that grow in these Canada woods, —sturdy and gaining sufficiently in their short, hot summers, to compensate for the winter's length. Then they are sturdy because they can bear the cold.

At Manchester, N. H., along the banks of the Merrimac, fronting some large mills, some kind hand had set out a row of maples, which are now, as we passed by in the cars, some of the most wonderful maples we ever saw. May be their roots have taken in the moisture, but they have grown in height to, we dare not say how many feet, lest we set it too low, but the trunks are perfectly straight, and very large, and then comes a perfectly compact cone of green, that hardly lets light through. All these trees of uniform size and shape, are such masses of beauty that the tired eye in the factory window must rest gratefully upon them, and insensibly thank the one who planned such beauty.

At Newport, Vt., we noticed a new kind of tree protector, that did not allow room for horses' heads to gnaw the trees. The Village Improvement Society is young, and can learn much yet, and, like all youthful societies, must learn by experience, and it must evidently improve its protectors.

We wish the members of our society could see these Canadian forests where nature yields such a harvest.

The lady we visit is a native of Quincy and wishes to give some tangible proof of her loyalty to our dear old town. Her husband, Mr. Peebles, would give the Quincy Society a large number of rock maples, as large as ours, next spring. On two days in the week these would go through to Boston with no change of cars. As he is away from the line of railroad there would be the expense of packing; as they are a gift the Custom House officers could not trouble them, and they could be transferred easily to Quincy at a small expense compared to what ours cost. They would bear the change from a soil impregnated with monarchial sentiments to one filled with the elements that stimulate individuality with no loss and the Village Improvement Society could still keep its bank account. All this is for the society to decide upon.

Letter from New York City.

NEW YORK, JUNE 3, 1885.

The first of the Sunday concerts in Central Park for this season was given last Sunday. There were estimated to be nearly 30,000 present, and when the Star Spangled Banner was played all ages and sexes sang the words to the accompaniment of Cappa's brass band. Other pieces played were Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Adeste Fidelis, Coronation March, and Old Hundred.

At last the Stewart Memorial Cathedral of the Incarnation at Garden City, L. I., is consecrated. Grand and imposing were the ceremonies held in the sacred edifice last Tuesday, and the Cathedral was formally handed over to be used forever for the worship, of Almighty God, and as the deed and the bond of endowment for $15,000 a year were laid upon the altar, the seven organs and the chime of bells made a fitting accompaniment to the doxology which was sung by the congregation. Bishop Littlejohn is the Rector.

The first session of the annual council of Freemasons was held yesterday morning at the Grand Lodge room. The ceremonies offered a strong contrast to those being held at Garden City at about the same hour. A number of prominent Masons were present at the Council, and the usual annual business was tranacted.

A number of French Societies met last Sunday at Tammany Hall to honor the dead Victor Hugo. The floral decorations were very beautiful, while in the center of the hall stood a catafalque upon which rested a casket covered with a pall.

NEW GOODS. A good reliable place in Boston to buy handsome glass and crockery ware is at Guy Brothers, 33 Bedford street. Their large spring importations are attracting much attention.

Base Ball Surprises.

The games in the Old Colony league on Memorial Day will be memorial to the various clubs but in different lights. To the Neponsets for their two victories, which place them a close second in the race. To the Braintrees because they then suffered their first defeat. To the Rangers who were whitewashed twice, and obliged to step down from the second to fourth position. To the Samosets because of their first victory. To the Hyde Parks because of their victory over the Braintrees. And to the St. Johns as they were unable to get a game. What looked like a complete walk-over for the Braintrees two weeks ago, has a different aspect to-day, and should they lose to-day's game with the Samosets at South Abington, either the Neponsets or Hyde Parks will pass them in percentage. Below is the summary:

| | Played | Won | Lost | Per cent |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Braintrees, | 5 | 4 | 1 | .80 |
| Neponsets, | 4 | 3 | 1 | .75 |
| Hyde Parks, | 3 | 2 | 1 | .66 |
| Rangers, | 5 | 2 | 3 | .40 |
| Samosets, | 3 | 1 | 2 | .33 |
| St. Johns, | 4 | 0 | 4 | .00 |

SAMOSETS VS. ST. JOHNS.

The game at South Abington last Saturday morning resulted in a defeat for the St. Johns by the Samosets. Our team made thirteen errors, while Samosets made twenty-two, but they were unable to get over four base hits while the Samosets secured ten. The St. Johns earned five of their runs and their opponents six. The fourth innings was too much. The score by innings was:

| Innings, | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Samosets, | 0 | 0 | 0 | 8 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | — | 9 |
| St. Johns, | 0 | 3 | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 | 0 | 0— | 8 |

NEPONSETS VS. ST. JOHNS.

The game at Quincy, Memorial Day, afternoon, between the St. Johns and Neponsets was played under unfavorable circumstances, it being slightly rainy. The game started off briskly, and at the end of the fifth innings was a tie at six, as will be seen below. The catcher of the Neponsets put out thirteen and the first baseman eleven, while for the home team the catcher captured nineteen and first baseman six. The batting and errors were nearly evenly divided, although Neponset earned four of their runs while their opponents earned but one. The score by innings:

| Innings, | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Neponsets, | 2 | 2 | 0 | 0 | 2 | 0 | 1 | 3 | 1— | 11 |

MOHAWKS VS. ALERTS.

At Neponset last Saturday morning the Alerts of Quincy defeated the Mohawks of that place by a score of 26 to 10. The members of the Alerts are Merritt, Spear, Swift, Sanborn, Taylor, Hall, Gifford, Merrill and Page. The Mohawks made but two base hits, and were whitewashed four innings. The Alerts made eighteen base hits and two doubles, and scored in every innings as will be seen below:

OTHER GAMES.

At the South Quincy grounds last Saturday morning the second nine of the St. Johns were defeated by a club from Harrison Square; score 12 to 11.

Saturdays game at Atlantic on Billings Field, between the Professionals and Scrubs, resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 19 to 13.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

There will be no games in the Old Colony league at Quincy or Braintree to-day. The St. Johns play the Rangers at East Weymouth this afternoon. The Braintrees play the Samosets at South Abington, and the Hyde Parks and Neponsets will be matched at Readville. Next Saturday afternoon the Braintrees play the St. Johns at South Quincy.

This afternoon the Alerts of Quincy will play the Neponsets at the Hancock street grounds, Wollaston.

NOTES.

Barges for the East Weymouth ball grounds leave Hardwick's hall at two o'clock this afternoon.

The St. Johns are to be again reorganized, and we learn several good players have been secured.

Barrett, the pitcher of the St. Johns, struck out sixteen men in the morning game last Saturday, and twenty in the afternoon.

SCHOOL BOOKS. By an act of the Legislature, which has just been approved by the Governor, relating to the purchase and sale of books by school committees, the power to buy and keep for sale school books is taken from them. The act supplants the free text book act and harmonizes the Public Statutes with it.

☞ The purchase by the Old Colony Railroad of the whole property of the South Boston Iron Works has been consummated and is regarded as very favorable for the company. The Old Colony is acquiring, as fast as can be done on reasonable terms, the property between its station and Federal street. —Stoughton Sentinel.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate AT WOLLASTON.

BY virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by William C. Pierce and Anna M. Pierce to the Plymouth Five Cents Savings Bank, dated the first day of August, A. D. 1883, and recorded in Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, Lib. 549, fol. 150, and for breach of the condition of said mortgage deed, will be sold by public auction on the premises, hereinafter described, in the town of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, State of Massachusetts, on THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1885, at half past eleven A. M.

All and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, to wit:—a certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon standing, situated in that part of said Quincy called Wollaston, being the lot numbered five (5) in Block Seven (7) of Section Six (6) of land of the Wollaston Land Associates, as shown upon a plan of said Section Six (6), recorded with Norfolk Deeds at the end of Lib. 406, and bounded and described as follows, viz.: Southwesterly by Arlington street, fifty (50) feet; Northwesterly by the lot numbered four (4) in said Block Seven (7) one hundred (100) feet; Northeasterly by the lot numbered twelve (12) in said Block Seven (7) fifty (50) feet, and Southeasterly by the lot numbered six (6) in said Block Seven (7) one hundred (100) feet, containing 5000 square feet of land, and being the same premises conveyed to said Anna M. Pierce by deed of said Savings Bank dated August 1st, A. D. 1883, and recorded in said Registry of Deeds.

The said premises to be sold subject to the restrictions in deed to Joseph H. Beale from Wollaston Land Associates dated March 1, 1871, recorded with Norfolk deeds, lib. 412, fol. 128, and also subject to all unpaid taxes if any.

Fifty dollars to be paid at the time of sale, balance within ten days thereafter.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT

DR. R. C. FLOWER'S REMEDIES.

Bridgeport, Conn., March, 1885.

"Dr. Flower's Liver and Stomach Sanative cannot be too highly recommended to those suffering from dyspepsia and kindred troubles. I have used it myself, and know whereof I speak."
Rev. SYLVESTER CLARK
Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church.

12 Prospect St., Bridgeport, Conn., Feb'y, 1885.

"Dr. Flower's Nerve Pills have been of great benefit to me. They are simply invaluable."
Mrs. CHARLES E. WILMOT.

Norwalk, Conn., March, 1885.

"Dr. Flower's Liver Sanative is the best medicine for stomach troubles I ever saw. It has cured me of a case of long standing and gladly testify to its merits."
Mrs. A. G. BETTS.

GEO. T. MOFFATT, M. D., D. D. S., 132 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass., writes:

"I have found in Dr. Flower's Nerve Pills a remedy that I can heartily recommend. Their action is perfect, and their good effects permanent."

Brewster, N. Y., April, 1885.

"I have been troubled with a torpid liver for years, and have never found permanent relief until I commenced using Dr. Flower's Liver Sanative. I am happy to be able to add my testimony to its worth."

DO THE RIGHT THING.

Common Sense Talk to Bilious People, Clear Testimony of a Witness.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: About 8 years ago I began to suffer from a Liver difficulty. During the attacks I experienced severe pain, accompanied by what I cannot describe better than by calling it a drawing in sensation. The agony of it was almost beyond endurance. None of the usual medicines employed in such cases had any effect upon me. From time to time I was laid up and unable to attend to any business. This covered a period of a year.

Finally Mr. Lloyd, a druggist of this city suggested your FAVORITE REMEDY as an excellent thing for the Liver. I had not taken the whole of the first bottle before I found most decided relief; the pain passed away, and to my delight I regained the power to enjoy and digest my food without the former distress. Nature seemed to be set going again. I cannot better express my appreciation of Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY than by telling you that since my personal knowledge of its virtues I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and acquaintances.

Yours truly, S. PEPSON.

222 Alexander Avenue.

Mr. Pepson is one of Albany's old and respected residents, and consents to the publication of the above letter.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex, Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ### THE HOME FARM.

A few miles from the city
On the "Lilac Hedge" farm,
Nature wears her brightest green
And fills the air with balm;
The clustering elms at the "Grotto,"
Beside the running brook,
Spread out their graceful branches
O'er this sequestered nook.

The big elm at the corner,
The cherries near the door,
Were set by hands now folded
To rest forevermore.
Beyond the north room window
The lilac bushes grow,
While fragrant cinnamon roses
Are planted just below.

The house is large and painted white,
Old fashioned rooms low built,
With all the modern draperies,
And parlor paper "gilt;"
Three generations in pictures
Are hanging on the wall,
Their interest at the homestead
United one and all.

"Little Grandma" at eighty five
Sits in her easy chair,
Quoting scripture passages
For every daily care;
She will tell you where Grandpa sleeps,
That "all his life was good,"
How she had for consolation
"She hath done what she could."

The youngest son to the farm house
Has brought his handsome bride,
They are honest true and loving,
And walking side by side;
All are welcome to the table,
Nora, Fred, "witty Will,"
And the new boy from the city,
Who yet is very still.

Oh, the merry life of farmers,
From the fountain drink their health,
Crowned with nature's bounteous blessing
Richer far than city wealth.

—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Farm and Garden.

Summer.

We have come to the very end of spring; and a more cold, wet and backward spring, so far as planted crops are concerned, has rarely been known. The wet weather, however, so persistently continued, has done a good work for grass, which never looked more densely matted at the roots, and consequently never promised a better crop for cutting or pasturing. There is no danger of grass coming up spindling, this year. Tree vegetation appears vigorous and abundant. The foliage promises a density that will not fail to be appreciated when the heat of the summer suns prevail. The fruit prospects it is premature to conjecture. As this is known as the odd year for apples, it is not reckoned the bearing year. Some people say that such a thing was not heard of when they were young, but that may be owing to the comparatively lax observation prevalent in those days respecting such matters. The farmers will be as busy as bees now for the coming month, when the vegetation in the tilled grounds will literally walk up into their glad recognition. June is the superb month, and here we stand right at its open gate.

TESTING EGGS. An egg tester has recently been patented in England. It consists of a cubical box, with central funnel shaped openings in two contiguous sides, opposite which a mirror is placed at an angle of forty-five degrees. On looking into the box through either hole the image of the other hole reflected by the mirror, appears directly opposite. To test eggs, the box is placed with one of the holes uppermost, in which the egg is placed. The light, then transmitted through the egg, forms a sharply defined disc. If the egg is fresh, the illuminated circle will be clear, if stale, the disc will be cloudy, and if bad, the image will be dark and unsightly. The apparatus it is stated, may be used by daylight or candlelight. The light reflected by the mirror to the eye passes entirely through the substance of the egg, and consequently every change from the perfect translucency to thorough opacity can be observed.

☞ A writer in the Home and Farm used about a quart of sawdust in each hill of one plot of potatoes and none in another plot. The sawdust hills yielded nearly twice as much as the others, and the potatoes were larger and smoother.

☞ One of the best coatings for tree wounds is gum shellac and alcohol. It excludes air and the wound quickly heals over.

Anecdotes.

"Yes," sighed the fashionable maiden as she applied her handkerchief to her eyes, "my poor little doggie, my Carlo is dead."

"It is very sad," said a sympathizing friend, "and all the more so as the loss occurs just on the eve of your marriage."

"Yes, it is too bad to think that the wedding must be postponed after all the preparations being made."

"Postponed? Surely you do not think of postponing your marriage because of the death of your dog!"

"Why, certainly. How heartless you must think me. I could not think of getting married within a year after such a distressing bereavement."—Boston Courier.

"Hello, Smith! Suppose a man marries his first wife's step sister's aunt, what relation is he to her?"

"First wife—um—step-aunt—er—let's see.—I don't know."

"Bright fellow! He's her husband."

Household Receipts.

RHUBARB PIE. Wipe the rhubarb clean, but do not skin it. Chop about the size of peas. Do not be afraid of too much juice. Take one cup of the pie plant to two-thirds cup of sugar, one-half cup of cold water, one tablespoonful of flour. Stir all together and bake between two crusts. This is for one pie. Some may like it sweeter; if so put in a full cup of sugar.

JOHNNY CAKE. One egg, four large spoons of sugar, two cups of flour, two cups of corn meal, two cups of sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls of cream tartar, one teaspoonful of saleratus. Pour into a dripping pan and bake.

NICE GINGER BREAD. One cup of molasses, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of warm water, two teaspoonfuls of saleratus, ginger to the taste. Mix as soft as possible to roll and cut in squares. Bake in a hot oven.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union

Alcohol. Effect upon the Brain.

Alcohol seems to have a special affinity for the brain. This organ absorbs more than any other, and its delicate structure is correspondingly affected. The "vascular enlargement" here reaches its height. The tiny vessels become clogged with blood that is unfitted to nourish, because loaded with carbonic acid, and deprived of the usual quantity of life-giving oxygen.—Hinton.

The brain is, in the language of the physiologist, malfunctioned. The mind but slowly rallies from the stupor of the fourth stage, and a sense of dulness and depression remains to show with what difficulty the fatigued organ recovers its normal condition. So marked is the effect of the narcotic poison that some authorities hold that "a once thoroughly intoxicated brain never fully becomes what it was before."

"I go for all sharing the privileges of the government, who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women."—Abraham Lincoln.

IN THE VICINITY.

—A Brockton grocery sold 600 dozen eggs at retail the other day.

—The Randolph Transcript came to us enlarged last week and the subscription price increased.

—The new superintendent of schools at Dedham commenced his duties last week at a salary of $1600.

— The Neponset station has been improved by a concrete platform, etc., and is a credit to the Old Colony Railroad.

— A little over five miles of water pipe has thus far been laid in Weymouth. About 300 men are now employed.

— Notes from the Scituate beaches indicate that the Summer business there is to outdo that of former seasons, and there is a hopeful feeling on all sides.

— North Abington has a new paper, The North Abington News. It is published by Osborne & Barry of the Rockland Independent, and its editor is M. M. Loud.

— A subscription paper is in circulation for a public clock on the new school house at Neponset. The cost will be about $300, of which sum about half is already subscribed.

— The East Weymouth News says that some of the Italians employed there on the water works eat alewives raw, taking them from the river and chewing them down as a cat would do.

— The Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance Company have just issued to their agents a very elegant little ornament, suitable for the mantlepiece or centre-table. It is manufactured by Messrs. Chas. Taber & Co., art publishers of New Bedford, and reflects great credit on their house.

Miscellany.

DISTRICT POLICE. The Legislature has this year increased the number of the district police by four, and there being one vacancy the Governor has recently appointed the following gentlemen: Joseph A. Moore, ex-City Marshal of Gloucester; Frederick A. Rhoades, now a member of the Malden Police, and a son of ex-Chief Rhoades of that city; Benjamin F. Dexter of Boston, formerly a member of the Boston force; James H. Chadwick of Dedham, now a member of the Dedham Police, and David H. Hayter, a Constable in Clinton.

The officers commenced their duties on Monday last.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE. Hon. Edward J. Phelps, Minister to England, recently appointed by President Cleveland, is reported as saying: "As to the right to vote, it is not a natural right. It is something to attain to, and so far from extending it, it ought to be made a distinctive privilege; and the government has the moral right to put all safeguards around this privilege; to exact not only certain age, but educational qualification; and there ought to be added a moderate property qualification, not because the person has the property, but because generally, if he has property, it is evidence of intelligence, industry and thrift."

A JOINT SERVICE. A very notable and commendable instance of sectarian toleration is reported from Aaron, in Switzerland, where the Protestants and Catholics have recently held a joint service. The church echoed with a hymn sung by the Protestants, after which the Catholic choir sang a selection, and the priest and the pastor delivered alternate addresses to the congregation, each endorsing the other's advice for the common good.

GAS COMPANY. A new gas company has been formed in Brockton by Messrs. J. J. Whipple, W. W. Cross, C. F. Porter, H. E. Lincoln and F. A. Hobart, the latter of Braintree. They have a capital of $50,000 and propose to enter into active competition. They will manufacture fuel or water gas and will soon commence the erection of proper buildings. They expect to furnish an elegant illuminant for $1.50 per 1000 feet.

COUNTERFEITING BALLOTS. Representative Rantoul, of Salem, has proposed to the Legislature the wise measure of having printed on election ballots a certificate from some two members of party committees, that ballots bearing the same are the regular party tickets; and that any one counterfeiting such certificate shall be liable to heavy fine and imprisonment.

NATIONAL DEBT. The United States debt has now gone below $1,500,000,000 for the first time since the war. Twenty years ago it was $2,700,000,000. Nobody in those days expected to live to see it extinguished.

Conundrums.

Why is a halfpenny like an Alderney cow? It has a head, and a tail, and two sides.

What great Scotchman would you name if a footman knocked at the door? John Knox.

Why is a row, like railway traveling? Because it is low commotion (locomotion).

When does a ship become a horseman? When it rides at anchor.

To which of our English poets can a mummy be compared? Dryden (dried' un).

The Woman's Reformatory.

A few days since I was called to make a visit to the Woman's Reformatory, at Sherbon, this state. I went over the Albany railroad to South Framingham, where I landed, and on enquiring of the very courteous depot master there, I found the direction to be eastward, distant a good mile, over an excellent road, with pleasant country surroundings. The first glimpse of the buildings showed of larger extent than I expected, and in excellent keeping on all the exterior; surrounded by a neat wood fence, painted a color in keeping with the fine brick buildings; also, fine lawns and neatly kept drive ways, all on a pleasant and elevated situation. Being an entire stranger here, and to every one herein, my rambling thoughts were, I wonder who and what I shall see. The very odors of neatness and cleanliness, order and system were apparent at a glance; on entering I was accosted by Mrs. Johnson, the general manager and superintendent of all the premises. After informing her who I was, and resting awhile, and taking a very acceptable cooling drink of lemonade, and a short rest, (for the day was hot,) I accepted the pleasant invitation from Mrs. J., to go over the place with her; and such a pleasant sight on all sides and in all directions from basement to attic, stables and animals, and all over the farm of large extent, of large open green fields; also remember here with this "one lone woman," Mrs. Johnson, as general manager in her large family of over two hundred and fifty women, wards of our state, (and helpers as teachers and superintendents,) all under her especial care and trust, her steps unhampered by any one save our good Chief Magistrate; all running on her instructive and naturally well organized and executive business faculties of this one woman. In all directions the features of a paternal and motherly care are uppermost.

The chapel shows a fine large room, finely equipped and furnished with everything needed, even with flowers of which they have large supplies, also handsome paintings. The sleeping rooms are very clean, one bed in each, with its clean clothes and white spreads.

The two large sewing work rooms contain fifty or more machines in each room, one devoted to shirt making, one to seersucker and linen coats; as good work here as can be found. The value of learning to make garments to the inmates as industrial pursuits is not to be overlooked. The laundry not only supplies for the place, but does a large amount of outside work, from which a handsome yearly income is derived. To the room devoted to dry goods supplies, and as a store is a model for many city stores to copy. The provision rooms, dairy rooms, ice rooms, the dining rooms, pantry, kitchen, the most matchless white tables and floors all indigenous to the very place itself and its management. The engine room and three large boilers supply steam heat and power to the whole place constantly, and the same clean air prevails here too. Arriving at this place my guide prevails on me to see the stables and animals. The cows ten as handsome Alderneys and Ayrshires and bosses, too, as can be picked from a large herd, all under the same kind and gentle treatment, which they ever knowingly appreciate; all round here the same unsparing hand of cleanliness and neatness even to white sanded floors, which reminds me of Holland cattle raising. The remarks of my guide here that all of last year's cream, every drop, was skimmed by her own hands; and when she took charge of this place a few years ago, not one cow prevailed on the place. She began with only one cow, and now it has ten, and no more grass is given away or sold in lumps or lots to get clear of it. Now it has lots of grass and new milk and butter for all this large family.

It is Mrs. not Miss Johnson, to my enquiries, and as she said, neither chick nor child to care for, or hardly any one else, only this large family I care for and it suits me and I like this care.

The inmates are graded into classes of four divisions, from number one the best, to number four: this promotion prompts their best respects, and the best wear a small decoration as a mark of merit, and many of these go out into the surrounding neighborhood to fill domestic places.

From the stable we passed to the bakery and kitchen. Here was a cart load of handsome browned white bread, fit for a Queen. From here we carried our steps to another wing of the premises, which in former times used to be over crowded with occupants who were thought to need close restraint, but under the present care is but little used; this part speaks plainly for itself. No special police can be seen; no man could I see about the premises, a few are employed on the outside on farm work. From one of the upper stories we looked out on one of the court yard lawns covered with a velvet green sward, some small mulberry trees are here just set out to give another pleasant diversion to silk worm raising; also dotted around were several neat chicken coops and houses, where large numbers of chickens are cared for by one of the girls who, bestows real affectionate care on her family of little chicks; in fact, no light and profitable interesting work is omitted for pleasant diversion for those under Mrs. J's. good care.

If any one thinks harshness is the rule here, let them go and see with their own eyes. As I said I entered here a perfect stranger, with rambling thoughts who and what to see, and not expecting to write a word, I came away with thoughts pretty well settled that in the matchless care after organizing and executing well, the system, order, neatness, cleanliness and good harmony prevailing all throughout this place takes the lead of all I have seen in an extensive travel of over thirty years.

To all persons having, as superintendents of positions, number of inmates under their care, they may go here to get the best example I have seen; it is a credit to any town in which such a place is located, they can point with pride, and sustain strongly the person that administrates so well even to the smallest details. EYEBOLT.

MISS CLEVELAND. The most powerful temperance document recently published is from the pen of the President's sister. Miss Cleveland utterly demolishes Rev. Dr. Crosby with her argument, sarcasm and scorn. The women are to be congratulated that the election of Grover Cleveland has brought into prominence a woman of such mental power and literary ability.—Southbridge Journal.

Three Reasons

Why every one needs, and, should take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:—

1st: Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.

2d: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.

3d: Because from the above facts, Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a greater amount of good now than at any other time. Take it now.

Poetry.

COMPENSATION.

The truest words we ever speak
Are words of cheer.
Life has its shade, its valleys deep;
But round our feet the shadows creep,
To prove the sunlight near.
Between the hills those valleys sleep—
The sun-crowned hills.
And down their sides will those who seek
With hopeful spirits, brave though meek,
Find gently flowing rills.

For every cloud a silvery light;
God wills it so.
For every vale a shining height;
A glorious morn for every night;
And birth for labor's throe.
For snow's white wing, a verdant field;
A gain for loss.
For buried seed, the harvest yield;
For pain, a strength, a joy revealed,
A crown for every cross.

Miscellany.

A Domestic Experiment.

"I don't think," said Mr. White, "that the hay crop ever promised so finely."

"Indeed !" said his wife, absently.

"And if there isn't any fall in the price of fruit," he added, "our peach orchard is going to net us a cool hundred dollars."

As he spoke, he flung the homespun towel with which he had been wiping his hands over the back of the kitchen chair.

"Oh, George, do hang up the towel!" said Mrs. White. "The nail is just as near as the chair-back, and I have so many steps to take in the course of the day."

"You are always grumbling about something," said the young farmer, as he jerked the towel on to its nail. "There ! Does that suit you ?"

"Here is a letter from Cousin Dora, George," said Mrs. White, wisely avoiding the mooted question. "She wants to come here and board for a few weeks."

"Well, let her come !" said White. "It won't cost us a great deal, and a little extra money always counts up at the year's end."

"But, George, I was thinking"—

"About what ?"

"Why, I am so hurried with the work, and there is so much to do"—

"That is the perpetual burden of your song," said Mr. White, irritably. "Women do beat all for complaining!"

"Won't you hear me out ?" said Mrs. White. "So I thought it would be a good plan to give Dora her board, if she would help me with the housework a little. It will accommodate her, and it will accommodate me."

"But it won't accommodate me !" said George White, cavalierly. "Really, Letty, you are getting absolutely lazy."

Mrs. White crimsoned.

"No one ever said that to me before," said she.

"Now just look at it," said the farmer. "Tell me of any other woman in the neighborhood who keeps a girl ! Why, they make a boast of doing their own work."

"They all have sisters, or mothers, or grown daughters; I have none."

"Pshaw !" said White. "Ridiculous! Of course you have to work. We all do, don't we ? But your work don't amount to a row of pins. I don't know of any one who has an easier time than you do."

"That is all that you know about it !" said Letty, in a choked voice.

"Write to Dora that we'll board her for five dollars a week," said White, authoritatively. "We must earn all the money we can while there is a chance. Make hay while the sun shines, eh ? And I guess you'll manage to get along as well as others do, Letty. Now run upstairs into the garret, my dear, and get me my blue jean overalls, that's a good girl."

Letty obeyed, but the tears were in her eyes, and a big, round ball was rising up in her throat, and she could hardly see the jean overalls, as they hung up high on one of the beams.

As she reached up a loose board in the garret floor tipped; her foot slipped through on the laths and plaster below, and with a groan she sank to the floor.

The time passed on, and George White grew tired of waiting.

He shouted up the garret stairway:—

"Look alive there, Letty ! Do you mean to be all day ?"

But no answer came. He ran up stairs to find Letty lying senseless on the floor, with one leg broken, just above the ankle.

"Now you'll have to get some one to do the work," said Letty, not without a spice of malice, as she lay on the calico-covered settee, with her poor ankle duly set and bandaged.

"Not if I know it," said George White. "Hire a lazy woman who'll want a dollar and a half a week, and her board into the bargain, to do the work of this house ? I guess not.

"But what are you going to do ?" asked Letty.

"To do it myself, to be sure. Half an hour every morning and half an hour every evening ought to be enough to square up accounts.

"Well," said Mrs. White, "I shall just like to see you do it !"

"Then you'll have your wish !" said her husband.

He rose early the next morning and lighted the kitchen fire.

"Pshaw !" said he, as he piled on the sticks of wood, "what does a woman's work amount to, anyhow ? What's the next lesson, Letty ?"

"I always skim the cream and strain the milk, said Letty, who, bolstered up on the lounge, was combing her hair with more deliberation than she had practised for a year.

"Well, here goes then," said George. And a period of silence ensued.

"I haven't got milk-pans enough !"

"Of course you haven't ?" said Letty. "You must scald out yesterday's. You know you said you couldn't set up a tin-shop when I asked for a dozen more last month."

"They smell like a fat-boiling factory. What ails 'em ?"

"You should have scalded them out last night," sighed Letty," wishing that she had wings like a dove, that she might soar into the milk-room and restore order out of chaos.

"Here's a go !" said George. "There isn't any hot water."

"O George, you've forgotten to put the kettle on !"

"So I did," said her husband. "And the sticks, hang 'em, are all burned out !"

"You know I wanted you to get a ton of coal," said Letty, "but you said that as long as wood costs nothing but the chopping and hauling, wood it should be."

"Have I got to wait for that confounded water to heat ?" groaned George.

"I don't know anything else for you to do," remarked Letty, drily.

"Humph !" observed her lord and master. "What's for breakfast ?"

"Ham and eggs," answered Letty.

"Well, I'm up to that part of the programme, at least," said he, cheerfully. "Oh, the dickens ! What is the use of keeping your knives so sharp ? I've nearly cut my thumb off! Where do you keep the oat-meal ? I can be attending to your old milk-pans while the breakfast is cooking, I suppose. There is nothing like economy in work !"

But it was a mortal hour before the milk was strained and the pigs fed, and by that time the house was blue with a smudgy smoke.

"Hullo !" shouted George, coming in. "What's all this ? is the house on fire ?"

"No," said Letty calmly; "only the breakfast has burned up."

George uttered a long sigh.

"Who'd have thought the fire was so hot ?" said he. "What am I to do now ?"

"Cook another, I suppose," answered Letty.

"And what next ?" demanded George, fiercely tugging at his moustache.

"Why, set the table, and then clear it away and wash the dishes."

"With this cut finger ?" complained the husband.

"I was obliged to do it all the weeks I had that sore felon on my middle finger," remarked Letty. "The young turkeys and geese ought to have been let out and fed long before this; and the three calves in the barnyard must be attended to. And then there are the kitchen and sitting-room to be swept and dusted, and the beds to make, and string-beans to be picked, and bread to bake, and the huckleberry pies to make, and your white vest to be ironed, and potatoes to be peeled, and the preserves to be scalded over, and the cheeses to be turned, and the dinner to get, and the table to be cleared, and the dishes to be washed"—

"Hold on !" cried George, "you've said that once."

"Very likely, but it has to be done three times a day—and the chickens to be looked after, and the linen pillowcases to be put bleaching, and the south windows to be washed, and your trousers to be patched, and the stockings to be darned, and the fire to make up again, and tea to be prepared—you know you always like something hot for supper. And then the night's milk to be brought in and strained, and the pans scalded, and the geese and turkeys fed and shut into their coops, and —oh, dear ! I entirely forgot the churning ! That will take an hour at least. But, dear me, George, I am getting so hungry !—and I don't see the least signs of breakfast. George ! where are you going, George ? I—want—my—breakfast !"

But George had disappeared in the midst of her exordium.

In twenty minutes or so he returned, and by his side trudged Mary Ann Pult, the nearest neighbor's twenty-year-old daughter.

"I take it all back," said Mr. White. "I lower my colors, Letty. Your work is harder than mine. I'll be everlastingly blest if it ain't. Why, I couldn't take care of the milk and cream and cheeses for the wages a girl would ask. I never realized before how much a woman had to do."

"Are you quite sure you realize it now ?" said Letty, mischievously.

"Well, I've got a pretty fair idea on that subject," nodded George.

"But you should be here on washing-day," said Letty, or on ironing-day, or on the day when we chop sausage-meat, or make soft-soap, or"—

"Stop, stop !" shouted George. "If you say another word, I'll go to Mahala Binks too. Haven't I said that I'll take it all back ! What more would you have ?"

"Wal, squire," said Mary Ann, who had by this time removed her hat and shawl, "what'll I do first ?"

"Do !" echoed Mr. White. "Do everything, and let me get off to the hay-field as fast as I can."

"Jes' as your orders is," said Mary Ann.

"And I say, Letty," he added.

"Yes, George."

"Write to your cousin Dora. Tell her we'll be glad to board her, if she will assist you about the house."

"But you've hired Mary Ann !"

"There's work for 'em both," said Mr. White.

And he sat down and took refuge in last week's paper, while Mary Ann wrestled with the charred remains of the breakfast, and cut fresh slices of home-cured ham.

In this world there are bloodless battles and victories won without the clash of steel; and in this category may be classed Mrs. White's victory over her husband, in respect to the question of hired help.

Sewerage Gas and its Effects.

AS NOTED BY A SANITARY ENGINEER.

This is a question that perhaps the least attention is ever given, and also thought the least of, by the majority of house owners, and little cared about by tenement house owners; but it is by far the most important.

When a contractor or builder erects a house, little he ever cares how the putrid gases are to escape, or to where, but simply to make the sanitary part passable is his sole object. Too often he visits a yard, and orders seconds for drain pipe, and in consequence no joints fit perfectly, or perhaps a leak is left, and when once laid and full, the soakings go to his or a neighbors well, and gases constantly rise, contaminating everything within its reach.

A noticable instance was when a eves pipe emptied into a cesspool in the yard, when there was no rain, the gutter pipe paid a double debt acting as a chimney for the cesspool and opening near a chamber window, filled the bedroom with its filthy gases by night and day. Three small children occupied the room, and in two weeks all three were taken with typhoid fever, and two died from its effects.

Again, a drain made across a cellar to drain it emptied into the sewer with no provision for the closing of its mouth. The house became damp, clothes mildewed in the closets, and family after family moved, and three deaths occurred in as many months. Finally a physician discovered the trouble, and sealed it up, and from that time no trouble has been found.

A new house was built according to the latest style of architecture, but the well was made blind, and within three feet from a thinly cemented vault. No questions were ever asked as to where the water came from, till suddenly five of the family were taken with the dysentery, which led to typhoid and in one case death. The attending physician was puzzled, till he examined the water and found the well which he ordered closed up.

A sink located in a buttery was the cause of a death. The waste pipe ran into a cesspool near the barn. A young child drank some milk that had stood one night there, and was taken with the diptheria, and died from its effects. The cover to the sink pipe had been lost early in the fall, and the housemaid had not thought it worth while to ask for another or to mention it.

Two families were constantly having sick spells, and the dysentery, and finally one was taken down with the most virulent form of typhoid. A physician was sent for, and every means failed him to discover the cause. The house was searched from cellar to attic for the cause, but at last a happy thought struck him to examine the milk which he found was diluted with water, and on visiting the farm found the cause. The milk (as it too often is,) was watered from a well back of the barn, which was contaminated by the washings of the pig pen and barnyard. This state of things is to be sadly regretted, but nevertheless is too often done by penurious milk dealers, who bring their produce in to the city folks.

The proper ventilation of cesspools and privies must necessarily vary according to their location. A privy or vault may be kept comparatively clean by each day throwing a quantity of fresh earth into it, and a cesspool may be somewhat modified by throwing into it a gallon of sulphate of iron water, which is common coperas, dissolved in rain water, and is very inexpensive. A pound costing ten cents, will make five or six gallons of solution sufficiently strong; or chloride of lime may be used. Let every man that this article reaches, see that he is not drinking sewerage, or breathing by night or day sewer gas; see that his cellar drain pipe emptying into cesspools have the proper cap over their mouths that will not allow gases to escape into the house, be prompt to look after all offensive smells, and to their origin, for by so doing you may save severe fits of sickness and life.

The following are a few of the many diseases caused by sewer gas, and by drinking contaminated water, which is many times done without your suspicion: Cholera, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Small Pox, Typhoid Fever, Diptheria. These are not by any means the limit to the list of sickness caused by sewer gas. I know houses can be properly drained into sewers, and even into foul and unventilated sewers, without bringing sewer gas into them. The existence of a foul sewer is in itself a perpetual danger to the public health.

I have no hesitation in saying that when tenants of houses demand immunity from the danger of unhealthy and damp houses, that property owners will quickly find out the proper remedy.

Sanitary reform in towns and cities only wait until those who are to be benefited by it, shall demand it.

The effects of sewer gas on the human system is very unlike that produced by other gases where the results are by no means uniform, nor do they appear to be at all proportionate to the amount of the gas breathed, nor to its degree of concentration. More than this the results do not stop with the victim; typhoid fever once started may extend to, we know not how many other victims, if the right conditions exist to carry it, and this brings us face to face with the mooted subject, (the germ,) theory of zymotic diseases, a theory so generally accepted by chemists and so strongly combated for by some of the most eminent physiologists.

In looking over the statistics of various large cities, we find that in Pittsburg 35 per cent.; Chicago 34 per cent.; Boston 33 per cent.; Washington 30 per cent.; Philadelphia 20 per cent. of all the deaths have been caused from sewer gas and its relation, in the past 10 years, from 1866 to 1876.

I have in this article tried to portray the importance of nipping in the bud all causes of the rise of sewer gas, and smells that rise from vaults and cesspools, and to show by actual facts how typhoid fever and kindred diseases are caused by thoughtlessness.

ANNALS OF QUINCY,--1800.

NUMBER VII.

February 5, Rev. Peter Whitney, having been settled as colleague with Mr. Wibird, was ordained.

February 22, Observed as a day of National mourning in honor of the memory of Washington, who died on the fourteenth of December previous. The cloth which covered the pulpit of the church on this occasion was donated to Rev. Peter Whitney, by vote of the town, passed May 5.

March 3, Annual town meeting. Moses Black chosen Moderator. Mottram Vesey was elected Town Clerk, Moses Black, Town Treasurer, and Deacon Elijah Veasey, Lieut. Jonathan Baxter and Lieut. Stephen Carey, Selectmen. $3,000 were raised for town expenses the year ensuing, $400 to be raised for schools. The town voted "That the floor where the old stairways were in the meeting house, and the vacancy in the gallery be appropriated for the use of the black people to set in." It was also voted, "That the geese shall not run at large in the highways the present year."

April 7, The following vote was cast for Governor: Caleb Strong, 55; Elbridge Gerry, 11; Hon. Wm. Heath, 1.

April 7, Voted to widen Old Field Road one and one-half rods.

May 5, The vote for Representative to General Court at a meeting held today, was: Moses Black, 58; Benjamin Beale, 16; James Brackett, 1.

May 5, The Selectmen were instructed to build a chimney in the schoolhouse.

June 4, Rev. Anthony Wibird died. He was pastor of the church nearly forty-six years. A learned man, eccentric in his habits, but loved and respected by his townsmen.

During this year Quincy and Randolph built a stone bridge over Blue Hill River.

The taxes this year were collected by Joseph N. Arnold and he received ten cents per pound.

1801.

March 2, Annual town meeting. Moses Black, Esq., Moderator. Mottram Vesey was re-elected Town Clerk, and Moses Black, Esq., Town Treasurer. The same board of Selectmen were elected as last year. Among the votes was the following: That cattle shall not be permitted to run at large in the woods the ensuing year.

Joseph N. Arnold again collected the taxes, but he received nine cents per pound instead of ten as the previous year.

Moses Black, Esq., represented the town in the Legislature.

September 21, Norton Quincy died, aged 82 years.

1802.

January 11, Benjamin Beale, Esq., and Gideon L. Thayer, were chosen as agents of the town, to assist with the Representative, Moses Black Esq., in favoring the petitioners for a bridge across Neponset River. They appear to have been successful, as on the 11th of March following, a charter was granted for a toll bridge from Preston's (now Commercial) Point, in Dorchester, to Billing's Rocks, in Quincy. It was subsequently found that the location was inconvenient, and that the length of bridge required would be an expensive experiment, therefore the next year the company petitioned the General Court for a change of location, that they might cross the river at a point near "Horse hummock."

At the annual town meeting Benjamin Beale, Esq., was chosen Moderator, and the same Town Clerk, Town Treasurer and Selectmen were re-elected.

Frederick Hardwick collected the taxes this year for seven cents per pound.

April 3, The committee appointed to examine the Treasurer's books for ten years past, reported that during the first four years there were paid into the Treasury, the following sums: on account of taxes, $4,170.33; Rent of town land, $162.83; Pews, sold $462.78; Total $4,795.94. During the last six years: on account of taxes, $12,637.60; Rent of land, $450; Pews sold $249.14; Total, $13,336.74.

April 5, The Selectmen were authorized to purchase a hearse, which they undoubtedly did, as on the first of November following they were empowered to build a hearse house.

September 21, a committee was chosen to decorate the green around the meeting house "with roes of trees set out."

The Same Old Story.

A great newspaper reader was out hunting recently, and a storm coming he crept into a hollow log for shelter. After the storm abated he endeavored to crawl out, but found that the log had swelled so that it was impossible to make his exit. He endeavored to compress himself as much as possible, but with indifferent success. He thought of all the mean things he had ever done until finally his mind reverted to the fact that instead of subscribing for his local paper he was in the habit of borrowing it from his neighbor, and thus defrauding the printer. On this he felt so small that he slipped out of the log without an effort.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1885.

THE COMING FOURTH.

Yes, Quincy is to celebrate, and in a style that will be a credit and honor to herself. Another meeting of the committee was held at the Lyceum Room on Wednesday evening, and was largely attended by enthusiastic men; men who are in the habit of encouraging all good times, both with money and hard work. George H. Field, one of our Town Fathers was chairman of the meeting, and Warren W. Adams its secretary. Edward Whicher, who has given the celebration much thought, and has had experience in past years, had drawn an outline for the features of the day and his ideas were generally adopted.

PROCESSION.

It is proposed to have a procession in the morning, to include comic and burlesque features, elaborate features, tableaux and trades, which is expected to be the grandest ever attempted in Norfolk County. Everybody young and old will be invited to take part, and $75 in gold is to be given in prizes for best features, as follows: $30 among the comic, $30 for tableaux, and $15 for trade; Messrs. John H. Dee, Warren W. Adams and Frank F. Prescott were selected as a committee to have charge of the prizes and to select the judges. There will be three sets of judges, one for each department.

Edward Whicher was elected Chief Marshall of the procession, and a marshall was appointed for each district as follows: Centre, Fred. Tirrell; South, Emery L. Crane; West, John E. Burns; Point, Isaac M. Holt; Atlantic, John A. Duggan; Wollaston, A. G. Olney; Neck, Bryant N. Adams.

A committee on music was chosen as follows: Fred. F. Green, Albert Keating, W. H. Price and Thomas H. McDonnell.

The committee on Fire Department, to see the Chief Engineer and attend to other matters in relation thereto, will be Thomas H. McDonnell, P. F. Lacy and George H. Field.

It was voted that the procession should form or march to West Quincy, provided $100 was raised there toward the celebration.

Headquarters will soon be established in the old library building on Hancock street, where all interested can meet and consult. The procession will of course be the feature of the day, and on the marshals in a great measure will depend its success. There should be no objection to features from our sister towns of Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and other places. Awaken an enthusiasm among as many as possible and success will follow in proportion. Routes, time, and other information will be given later.

LITERARY EXERCISES.

In the afternoon, probably, there is to be exercises at the Coliseum, Town Hall or Unitarian Church, as may be determined by the following committee Messrs. E. C. Bumpus, John H. Dee, W. W. Adams, Charles A. Foster, Henry McGrath, Edward Hewitson and Dr. J. F. Welch. It is hoped that Josiah Quincy will consent to read the Declaration of Independence; that Dr. Everett and others will deliver short addresses; that a good original poem may be read, and this, with selections from the band, singing of patriotic songs, etc., will make a desirable entertainment.

FIREWORKS.

In the evening there is to be the grandest display of fireworks ever witnessed in the town. Two desirable localities have been suggested—one the lot on the north side of Greenleaf street, near Black's Creek, and the other on Canal street, near Brackett street. The following gentlemen have the fireworks in charge: Messrs. Edward Whicher, W. G. Spear and C. Philip Tirrell, and they will probably expend about $400.

OTHER FEATURES.

The bells are to be rung morning, noon and night.

A Thief Attempts Suicide.

In the District Court Tuesday morning T. J. Welch of Boston was arraigned for the larceny of a horse, sleigh, harness, robe, etc., in Boston in March, 1884, since which time he has eluded arrest. But Officer Furnald at last captured him. The evidence presented was doubtless positive guilt for Judge Humphrey sent the case to the September term of the Superior Court at Dedham, and placed the bonds at $800. The defendant was unable to furnish these, and was accordingly committed to Dedham. Previously, however, he was placed in the Quincy lockup. About one o'clock, when Officer Locke went to the lockup he saw Welch hanging to the door of his cell. He immediately cut him down and summoned a doctor, who said that five minutes more would probably have fixed him and that he had been hanging about an hour. He was unconscious and it was some time before he came to, and sometime after before he was able to stand or be moved, when he was conveyed to Dedham by Officers Furnald and Locke.

IMPROVED MOWING MACHINE. At the Mount Wollaston Farm in Quincy, on Tuesday afternoon, a number of our citizens witnessed the exhibition of Brown's Endless Cutter, which was there on trial. The principle on which it acts is entirely different from all others, being of the rotary principle. Several have attempted to accomplish the result which Mr. James O. Brown of Bangor, Maine, has perfected, but on which they had all failed. Early June may not be a favorable time for experimenting, but still very satisfactory work was done. It worked on rough ground, in grass where there was considerable old, dead grass, and where there was a heavy growth of wet clover. The machine tried was a one-horse one and was drawn comparatively easy and without the noise and shake so common with others. Success seems assured for this new machine.

RUNAWAY. On Saturday last, what might have been a serious accident, occurred on Copeland street, Quincy. As two little boys, Johnnie Deasy and George Mitchell, were riding in the latter's pony cart, the pony became balky. George got out to lead him when he started at full speed with Johnnie in the carriage. He jumped, however, just in time to escape being dashed against a telephone pole. An unknown gentleman led the pony and boys home, and he will please accept the thanks of the boys' parents.

Brief Locals.

☞ Soda.
☞ Ice cream.
☞ Beautiful weather.
☞ June 17 comes on Wednesday.
☞ Vacation season will soon be here.
☞ Mosquitoes are getting in their work.
☞ Straw-b-e-r-r-i-e-s! Straw-b-e-r-r-i-e-s!
☞ The cold wave flag was flying Tuesday.
☞ The foliage is very abundant this year.
☞ Are you going to the mountains or seaside, or—
☞ Thunder was in the air the first of the week.
☞ Three weeks from to-day is the glorious Fourth.
☞ This is said to be the "off year" for apples.
☞ Strawberries promise to be unusually plentiful this season.
☞ The days commence to decrease the twenty-second of this month.
☞ Clapp Bros. have put a neat awning over their show windows.
☞ And now the class of '85, Q. H. S., are thinking about graduation.
☞ Have you contributed your mite toward the Fourth of July celebration?
☞ The High School graduation will take place Tuesday evening, June 30.
☞ The First Presbyterian Society are to have a sociable one evening next week at Faxon Hall.
☞ A dry goods and dress-making store is to be opened in Mitchell's block, South Quincy.
☞ John Fallon & Sons have got their new engine in working order at their quarry this week.
☞ Four or five dozen of small ivies have been planted near the granite walls of the Public Library this week.
☞ Scholars and teachers are counting the days which they will have to attend school previous to the vacation.

☞ George Q. Tirrell was severely burned about the head Tuesday at the blacksmith shop of Tirrell & Sons, by the fire blowing out.
☞ It is noised all over the country that Quincy is to celebrate, and several of our exchanges have commented on it. Let them not be disappointed.
☞ The speaking for the Adams Gold Medal by the students of the Adams Academy takes place at the Academy next Wednesday morning at 10.45 o'clock.
☞ Flowers and fruits for the Boston hospitals may be left on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday next, at the house of Mrs. W. S. Morton, on Spear street.
☞ A very interesting story about Cape Cod folks, issued by the Old Colony Railroad, will be sent free to any of our citizens, as will be noticed by a notice in another column.
☞ The three mile race at the Coliseum Tuesday evening for the championship of Nepouset, resulted in the awarding of the honor to A. T. Newcomb. There were five entries.
☞ A most generous contribution from John Quincy Adams, representing himself and honored father, was received by the Fourth-of-July Committee on Thursday.
☞ William H. McIntyre, who started in the tailoring business four months ago, has been missing since Monday, and on Thursday Officer Furnald attached his goods and effects.
☞ Several of our bicycle riders have suggested bicycle race and other sports around the Unitarian Church Fourth of July morning, and we would recommend the idea to the celebration committee.
☞ At the Stone Temple a week from Sunday the Rev. Kristofer Janson, the Norwegian poet and preacher will conduct the morning service. He would be pleased to meet any Swedes and Norwegians who may be in Quincy.
☞ Children's Day will be observed at the Congregational Church next Sunday, the Floral Festival occurring in the morning instead of the evening. An interesting letter from Rev. Mr. Norton will be read.
☞ The closing entertainment of the season at the Universalist vestry on Wednesday evening was largely attended, and very much enjoyed. The little elocutionist was both a surprise and a pleasure; the singing was excellent, and the entire entertainment was unusually fine.
☞ Among the death notices this week will be found that of a former resident of Quincy, Mrs. Jonathan Cook, who died at the residence of her daughter in Oakland, Cal. Mrs. Cook at the time of her husband's death lived in the house on Washington street next to the Universalist Church, now owned and occupied by Mrs. C. A. Spear.
☞ Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., of this town, start from Quincy at 6.48 on the morning of June 22, to attend the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Portland, Me. In Boston they will take one of the Portland steamers at India wharf. They will be accompanied by a band. At Portland they will take their meals at the Chadwick House, and pitch their tents on the Eastern Promenade.
☞ The Exibition of Drawings by pupils of the Quincy Schools will open at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, June 18, with a private view. Tickets may be obtained of the teachers. The Exhibition will be open to the public Friday, June 19, 1 to 6 P. M., and Saturday, June 20, 8 A. M. to 12 M. An interesting feature of this year's work will be various objects made by pupils from their drawings, some of which represent original designs.
☞ New moon last evening.
☞ The troublesome mosquito has found us out.
☞ Monday was very hot, and Tuesday decidely cool.
☞ Mt. Wollaston Lodge, I. O. O. F. elect officers June 24th.
☞ One of the large elm trees near the Stone Temple is dead.
☞ The mornings commence to shorten a week from to-morrow.
☞ The longest days of the year are from the 17th to 24th inclusive.
☞ Rogers Bros. intend having their new store on Temple street open next week.
☞ The pump at the pumping station of the water works is now run about three hours per day.
☞ The First Church Sunday School is to have a picnic this season, and will probably go to White Head, Cohasset.
☞ The Steamer Company would like to have a contest with a steamer from another town on the Fourth of July.
☞ Seventeen of the Cambridge Bicycle Club rode to Quincy Sunday and took dinner at the Robertson House.
☞ Quincy is to have several electric clocks. The wires have been stretched. George T. Magee has the enterprise in charge.
☞ McCabe & Rich are building a small shed near the former's residence on Penn street, where they intend starting in the granite business.
☞ Monday evening a crayon portrait of Rev. A. T. Roche was presented to St. John's Catholic Athletic and Literary Society by Daniel McCarty.
☞ Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hall were surprised at their residence Tuesday evening by fifty or more of their friends. Charles W. Carter, the spokesman of the party, presented the couple with an elegant silver water pitcher and cake basket.
☞ Mrs. Thomas Crane was in town a few days ago, and presented the Thomas Crane Public Library with a very life-like and life-size picture of her late husband. It was handsomely framed in gilt and will be an ornament to the library.
☞ The School Committee say the town will have to take immediate action for more school accommodation. It is probable that a special meeting will soon be called to consider the building of the proposed school house on the Granite street lot.
☞ A horse attached to a buggy and left standing in front of P. H. Gavin's, on Tuesday morning, runaway down Washington street, badly smashing the vehicle, which belonged to Levi B. Curtis, superintendent of Bradley's Phosphate Works in Weymouth.
☞ The estate of the late Timothy Segrue, on Hancock street, has been purchased by Joseph W. Lombard, who is repairing and improving the same and intends soon to make it his residence. The property is in a good neighborhood, and offers a grand chance for improvement.
☞ The very attractive estate on Railroad street, occupied for several years by George H. Hitchcock, is advertised to be sold at auction, by Joseph W. Lombard. It is very pleasantly situated near the centre of the town, and beautifully shaded by young and thrifty trees that give it a most charming appearance. It has a furnace, gas and other conveniences which make it a very desirable place for any one doing business in this town, or in the city.

Quincy Personals.

Mrs. William S. Pattee is at the Robertson House.

Mrs. Washington Hayden has been very sick this week.

Mrs. C. M. Tuckerman has gone to Vermont for the summer.

Dr. Everett presided at the meeting of the Massachusetts Reform Club at Parker's, Boston, last Saturday.

George Monk has completed his season at the Park Theatre and we may soon expect to see him camping.

Mrs. Lydia A. Follet, who went West in the winter to visit her sister, returned home on Friday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Prescott leave this morning on a four days' outing by the Suburban Press Association.

Dr. F. E. Buck, formerly with Dr. F. J. Bonney, has been in town this week. He talks some of locating in Bath, Me.

Arthur E. Sproul started Thursday morning with a party of gentlemen for the cattle region of the West. He will be gone about three weeks.

Isaac M. Holt was in Portland, Me., the first of the week and made arrangements for the accommodation of Paul Revere Post on their visit.

Josiah Quincy was present at the meeting of the Massachusetts Reform Club last Saturday and took part in the discussion of "Congressional Legislation."

W. G. Beal, wife and son, of Havanna, Cuba, were registered at the Robertson House Wednesday. Mr. Beal is a brother of Mrs. John O. Holden.

Rev. P. B. Davis, of Hyde Park, who was accompanied by Rev. Edward Norton of Quincy, was at last accounts at Constantinople, on his way to England. He sails from Liverpool July 21st, on the steamer City of Chester.

Miss Mehitable Walker, aunt of Mrs. M. J. Carlton who resides on Quincy street, left her neice's residence last week for her annual summer visit to West Townsend, where it is her intention to remain until the first of September.

Mrs. Jane B. Pope, mother of Mrs. Henry Edwards, who for the past three years has been residing with her daughter in San Francisco, Cal., visited Quincy on Tuesday, completely surprising her many friends in this town. We are pleased to say that Mrs. Pope, although feeling quite tired after her long journey, was looking well. She expressed much pleasure in being able to see her old home once more, California having no charms for her.

We find in the Dedham Gazette a short account of the fine oration delivered by our townsman, at Norwood, on Memorial Day:

"Col. Charles H. Porter of Quincy was introduced as orator of the day, who addressed the members of the Post on that portion of army experience in which he and they were participants during the war. He dwelt particularly upon the battle of Gettysburg, the field of which he had recently visited in person. The discourse was very interesting to civilians as well as soldiers. He asked the people to consider the question of what might have been the condition of the country to-day had the rebels won; and before he got through he intimated that from certain indications at the present time, you would be led to think they did win. It was a loyal discourse bordering not at all upon anything partizan."

Wollaston.

The Musical Association closed its meetings for the season on Monday, when about one hundred assembled at the house of Rev. William Lord and enjoyed a rich musical treat. Mendelssohn was the composer whose productions were discussed, played and sung. Mr. Albee, the essayist, in his fifteen-minute sketch of the great musician was very interesting. The following excellent programme was presented:

Overture, Midsummer Night's Dream.
Mrs. Henry Litchfield and Mrs. Chas. Baker.
Cradle song.
Miss Wight.
Variations Sirieuses, Op. 54 in D minor.
Mr. Langley.
"Home far away."
Miss Laura King and Miss Annie Miller.
Songs without words, { a Morning song, b Duetto, c Spinning song.
Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith,
Andante, from Trio in D minor Op. 49.
Mrs. Smith, Mr. Langley and Mr. Emerson.

PART II.

"All ye that cried unto the Lord," Hymn of Praise.
Chorus.
"O rest in the Lord," Elijah.
Miss Parker.
Song without words, Op. 109, for Piano and Cello.
Mrs. Smith and Mr. Langley.
Rondo Capriccioso.
Mrs. Smith.
Andante Expressivo, from Trio in C minor, Op. 66.
Mrs. Smith, Mr. Langley and Mr. Emerson.

Between the parts remarks were made by Mr. Lord and Rev. F. E. Dewhurst congratulatory to the association and its officers, and expressive of thanks to those who had participated in furnishing the entertainment, and especially to Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith and Mr. Langley, whose productions were of a high order and could not but be enjoyed by all. The present officers of the association will continue to fill their respective positions during the recess, and will prepare the programmes for the first two meetings in the autumn. The election will take place at the first meeting. What started out in a small way among a few lovers of good music, has become a large, flourishing profitable association, and its music enjoyable, lofty and inspiring, and we endorse the remarks of one of the members: That the minds of the people will be as truly elevated as the land in which they live, and as thoroughly cultivated.

Among the arrivals at the Wollaston Hotel this month we notice C. B. Bradbury, wife and daughter, of Boston; William Capen and Miss H. Capen, of St. Louis, Mo.; Chas. H. Dow and wife of Boston, and others.

The Wollaston Mock Trial was a success in every particular and even if the umbrella is not really a plant the results will bear fruit to be relished by every citizen. Messrs. Boynton & Russell gave the use of their hall. Friday evening was stormy and the hall was comfortably filled, but on Saturday evening every seat was occupied.

Mr. W. E. Simmons in the character of an Irish judge filled the bill. The play was produced under his immediate supervision, ably assisted by Messrs. Baker and Fairbanks. Messrs. Chas. T. Baker and Henry O. Fairbanks as prosecuting and prisoner's counsel, respectively, made perfect success of their parts. Their "make-up" was excellent, and the audience fully appreciated the points and arguments of each. Mr. W. C. Pierce, the clerk, should secure a copy-right on his costume, especially the nether garments; even Dickens would fail to perfectly describe those unmentionables. Mr. W. H. Brasee, the prisoner, looked as guilty as any umbrella borrower, the result of a careful disguise, and his counsel's allusion to his constantly increasing family brought tears to his well-blacked eye.

The jury deserve especial mention for the variety of their costumes and their unwritten by-play added to the interest of the scene and the audience "caught on" to each point. Mr. Samuel Brown, the Dutch foreman, explained to the judge his business experience with the prisoner in characteristic brogue. Mr. A. F. Poole was a "truly nigger." Mr. H. T. Whitman's disguise was so complete that his friends would require a chart and compass for his identification. Mr. J. C. Bates, the sheriff, dressed his part well and looked out for the comfort of the prisoner.

Mr. Moses V. Swift, as Mr. Ferrule, the umbrella manufacturer, while giving his testimony, solicited the patronage of the jury and extolled the virtues of his wares in a manner which "took" immensely. Mr. George A. Bicknell, as Jay Bird Charley, dressed and acted the character well, as also did Mr. C. A. Price as Polhemus Redtop.

The witnesses for the defence were Mr. Howard M. Wing as Richard Storrs, Mr. George A. Lord as C. Herbert Hunt, Mr. C. W. Jones as Edgar F. Robinson, Mr. C. R. Sherman as Prof. Girlygirl, and Mr. H. W. Marshall as Emerson Brown, the man who once owned a five dollar bill.

Mr. E. C. Blossom, as "One Lung" made a capital Chineeser. Mr. W. P. Chase, Jr., dressed as a Nihilist with bomb in hand, terrified the entire court. Mr. W. T. Pinkham, as Charles James Augustus Southgate, the original owner of the umbrella, kept the prosecuting attorney well posted and explained to the court his numerous inventions for preventing umbrella theft. During Girlygirl's tiresome testimony the entire court fell asleep and the scene furnished great amusement to the audience.

The Wollaston Village Improvement Society may well feel proud of their closing entertainment and if rumors prove as prolific as Girlygirl's umbrella plant, the series of entertainments contemplated by the Improvement Society for next winter will be both popular and remunerative.

Children's Day will be observed at the M. E. Church, Wollaston to-morrow. A sermon to the children will be delivered by the pastor at 10.45 A. M. In the evening at 7.30 a Sabbath school concert will be given. The church will be decorated with flowers and birds in cages. Seats free. All cordially invited.

Mr. F. A. Noa gave an interesting sketch of Victor Hugo at the Baptist Church Thursday evening. He occupied about three-quarters of an hour. The attendance was not very large.

Benjamin Kingsley was kicked in the head by his father's horse, while he was attempting to catch him on Monday. Four stitches had to be taken by the doctor, and now young Kingsley is about as usual.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Washington Hayden, a Neck resident had a severe stroke of paralysis on Friday of last week, and is still very ill, having been conscious but a few moments at a time, since first taken sick.

Mr. Charles Hall had a serious accident happen to his finest horse, during Saturday night of May 30th. On Sunday morning the horse was found loose in the stable, sick and with a bullet wound in his back. The animal had the appearance of having been taken from the stable—driven hard, left to stand in the cold and shot—and whoever used the horse must have known him and the premises well, as both of the other two horses stood nearer the door and would have been more easily taken. Up to the present time the horse has been sick.

Rev. Mr. Benedict, of Hanson, filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church on Sunday last and preached two excellent discourses. In the morning his sermon was Christ's talk with the woman of Samaria, and in the evening he chose for a text, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God?" He was generally liked, and will preach again to-morrow.

Miss Etta F. Lapham is visiting in Marshfield.

A class from the N. E. Conservatory of Music, under the direction of Dr. Eben Tourjee, will give a concert in Faxon Hall, next Friday evening, which promises to be a very enjoyable affair. The Point people should make an effort to attend the same, and we feel sure they will be well entertained. The Misses Carter of this place, pupils of the school, will take part. Tickets for sale at the Point Post Office.

Mr. Wilson Tisdale has placed two new summer barges on the Point line which make travel over the road very pleasant. The large one especially is handsome and commodious, accommodating thirty. Mr. Tisdale seems to be doing everything possible to make the line perfect, and patrons are pleased with the barges and drivers.

Mrs. John Federhen, 3d, and Mrs. Luther M. Hersey are enjoying a few days in New York and Brooklyn.

Mr. Chas F. Wrisley, Quarter-master Sergeant on Col. Green's staff, is attending muster this week at South Framingham.

Mr. Charles Sherburne has been confined to the house a few days this week by sickness.

Mr. Esborn Hall is absent from home on a five days' trip in Maine.

THIS AND THAT.

On Saturday evening, Quincy Stone Division, S. of T., held a public temperance meeting, which was addressed by Mr. J. M. Ford of Boston—in place of J. W. Cameron who was expected to be present.

On Thursday evening the society held a festival, enlivened by a good entertainment. C. C. Jordan's ice cream was a pronounced success.

The Point is being quite thoroughly looked up this week between the agent of the Board of Health and the census taker. The former tells us where we are wrong and shows us how to spend our wealth, the latter unblushingly demands the age of our spinsters, and being sworn to secrecy is told accurately somewhere within twenty years of the correct date.

Hose 4 held a special meeting on Wednesday evening.

Probably the Washington School nine will play a matched game of ball on Saturday with the Coddingtons at Point Holes.

SHIPPING.

Arrived, 10th, sch. Rival, Capt. Kempton, from Liverpool, N. S., with 55,000 ft. lumber for B. Johnson.

Atlantic News.

Charles C. Robinson has sold to George H. Abbott, land and buildings on the south side of Walker street, for $1800.

Several Atlantic gentlemen were on the early morning train Monday and were injured more or less by the accident, as will be seen elsewhere in this issue.

T. B. Emery's house has been painted this week and is looking finely. Sawtelle was the artist.

Engineer Jenkins was the victim of a practical joke last week, paying an expressman for a bundle brought him, which was only worth its weight in sand. It was his birthday.

Wednesday evening the hydrant at the corner of Newbury avenue and Billings street was tested by Engineer Jenkins, and he was very well satisfied with the result. With 500 feet of hose laid in the direction of Gurney's store, and with a head wind a stream was played about 65 feet. With 100 feet laid in the opposite direction nearly 100 feet was played.

A reception was given to Rev. Mr. Bristol and family on Wednesday evening at the chapel. Selections were read by Misses Emery and Knowles and two songs were finely rendered by Mr. Owen and sister. An abundant collation was served of cakes, lemonade bananas and oranges. Quite a large company were present and a very pleasant time enjoyed. The new pastor and wife seem to be fast gaining the esteem and affection of the people.

West Quincy.

Now that the committee has decided that the Fourth-of-July procession shall go to West Quincy provided $100 are raised among the citizens of that village, it is a sure thing it will come, for West Quincy can and will raise over $100. It is not yet decided whether the procession will be formed here or not, but probably not, the chief marshal preferring to start from the South District in which case the procession will come as far as the West Quincy depot and then return. Already we have heard several talking of features to be presented, and there is no doubt but West Quincy will take an active part.

To-morrow is children's Sunday at the M. E. Church. A sermon of interest to children, will be preached in the morning, and in the evening there is to be a Sunday School concert.

Dr. George W. Huse attended the 250th anniversary of Newbury, his native town, on Wednesday.

William Lyons while practicing base ball, Wednesday evening, broke one of his fingers.

An addition is being built this week to the apothecary shop of F. A. Read.

It is rumored that West Quincy is to have a tavern.

Complaint is made of rowdyism about the Granite Hose house, such as encouraging dog fights, etc.

The first quarterly conference of the Methodist Church took place Tuesday evening. The Presiding Elder of the district was present.

Mr. Dennis Pettijit is going to build a house on West street.

Mr. W. Williams, of New York, is going to build sheds for cutting stone on the common.

John T. Dunn has put up a new derrick and it's a daisy.

Thomas Quinn is starting in business.

Bryant Beard is spending a few weeks in West Townsend, Mass.

Dr. Webster and a party of ladies from Harrison Square, visited the hill of this village Monday afternoon.

The St. Mary's C. T. A. Society have elected John Early, J. A. O'Brien and T. H. McGrath delegates to attend the convention of Catholic Total Abstinence Societies in Boston, June 17th, to make arrangements for the parade of the order October 10.

A PRETTY COTTAGE HOUSE
WITH LARGE L. AND 1-4 ACRE OF LAND,
AT PUBLIC AUCTION
IN CENTRE OF QUINCY, MASS.

WILL BE SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION ON THE PREMISES,

Tuesday, June 23, 1885,
AT 4 O'CLOCK, P. M.

A 1 1-2 Story Cottage and about 1-4 acre of Land, which has of late been occupied by GEO. H. HITCHCOCK, ESQ., situated nearly opposite the centre depot in Quincy. The Cottage has nine apartments all in good repair; two large piazzas; an excellent cellar, and a well of the purest water. It is heat by a furnace and lighted by gas.

There is a handsome driveway with a long row of beautiful ornamental shade trees.

There are but a few places thrown in the market that presents more points of interest to the visitor than this. Many of the darkest nights are made cheerful and pleasant by the sweet music given by the professors of music at the Coliseum, near by.

Quincy is one of the most romantic and attractive places on the Atlantic Shore; and a delightful drive of two miles carries one to the ocean's waves.

The place is centrally located, being but two minutes' walk from schools, stores, and churches. Only one minute's walk from railroad depot, where forty-two trains run to and from Boston, daily.

Parties looking for a delightful home in the centre of Quincy, can find no better.

Sale positive to the highest bidder, weather fair or foul. Terms at sale. The house will be open for inspection on day of sale.

All information in regard to the above described property will be cheerfully given by the Auctioneer, at his office and sale rooms in Court House building, Quincy, Mass.

Be on hand sharp at 4 P. M., June 23d, the day of sale.

The auctioneer will sell at auction in any part of the United States by giving him reasonable notice.

Quincy, June 13. 2w

SEALER'S NOTICE.

The subscriber, Sealer of Weights and Measures —FOR THE—
TOWN OF QUINCY,

FOR the present year, hereby gives notice to the inhabitants of said town, that he will be at the Selectmen's Room on the four following THURSDAYS:—June 18, 25; July 2, and 9, from 9 to 12 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of Sealing such Beams, Weights and Measures as shall be brought to him for that purpose.

Also, that he will be found at his store, No. 86 Hancock Street, any day after that time.

FRANCIS A. SPEAR, Sealer.

"Any person using any scales, weights, measures or milk cans after a sealer of weights and measures has demanded permission to test the same, and has been refused such permission, shall be liable to a penalty of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars."

"If any person shall knowingly use any false weight, measure, milk can, scale, balance or beam, or shall alter any weight, measure, milk can, scale, balance or beam, after the same shall have been adjusted and sealed, so that the same thereby shall not conform to the public standard, and shall fraudently make use of the same, he shall forfeit for each offence the sum of fifty dollars, one-half to the use of the city or town, and one-half to the use of the complainant."

Board of Health

OF THE

TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

Old Colony Accident.

Monday morning the Old Colony Railroad met with quite a serious accident, at South Boston, but one which miraculously did not result in a death or alarming injury. The first inward train which leaves Quincy at 6.09 A. M. and containing many of our townspeople whose business calls them early to the city, collided near the D street crossing with the regular outward train which had left Boston at 6.25. Both locomotives and tenders and the first car on each train were badly damaged, and the passengers considerably shaken up. It seems the Old Colony Company were repairing the bridge over the New York and New England Railroad, and on this day were using but one track for both the inward and outward trains. Precaution had been taken to prevent accident; flagmen had been stationed and the engineers notified, but nevertheless the accident occurred, doing a damage of $4000 to $5000, and injuring several persons. The report of the Railroad Commissioners published below, will show where the blame is placed.

Several Quincy parties were among the injured, and some quite seriously. Mr. Charles T. Foster, who works at the machine shop in South Boston, and is in the habit of getting out at the crossing. He was riding in the smoking car next the engine, and had just arisen from his seat when the collision occurred. He was thrown down, and in the confusion that followed, he was trod upon by the crowd. He at first believed himself uninjured, but on reaching his place of business was unable to go to work, and shortly after came home. He was attended by Dr. Gilbert, who found several bruises on the chest. No bones were broken, and it is thought there are no internal injuries. He is doing nicely.

Mr. J. I. Crowell, who resides on Newcomb street, was in one of the passenger cars and without a minute's warning was thrown forward into the corner, stunning him for a few minutes. The blow broke one of his left ribs over the lung in two places. He was removed to his residence and will be confined sometime. Yesterday he was quite comfortable. He is unable to sleep, and at times suffers considerable pain.

Mr. Richard Newcomb was another of the injured. For a day or two after the accident he was able to be about the streets, but has been confined to the house since Wednesday. Yesterday he was very sore. His injuries were a jamming and scraping of the stomach, but it is believed he is not ruptured as once supposed.

Among the Atlantic parties injured were Messrs. F. B. Bartlett, S. M. Bennett, David Nelson, Michael H. Lyons, Thomas Lowry and John T. Hunt. Mr. Bartlett was in the baggage car, and was thrown forward and badly shook up. A trunk also fell upon him. It is believed no bones are broken, but he will be laid up some time. Mr. Lyons had a rib broken, and was more or less bruised. Mr. Lowry, whose leg was broken a year or more ago, had it wrenched again. The others' injuries were not serious, and the men are at work.

Conductor Ellis of the inward train; John Saunders the baggage-master of the same train; John Bartlett a brakeman of the outward train, and many others were somewhat injured.

The report of the Railroad Commissioners on the accident is as follows:

The head collision on the Old Colony Railroad, June 8, was investigated on the day of its occurrence. During the repairs outward and inward trains were necessarily run on a single track for a short distance. Every possible precaution was taken to prevent accidents, and full notice in print was given in advance as to the signals, speed and other regulations. But the engineer of train No. 12, who received the notice and receipted for it on Friday, June 5, forgot to read it until after the collision on the 8th, running in spite of the order and of the red target which forbade him to enter the track. His train collided with outward train No. 9, damaging engines and cars to the amount of about $3000, but fortunately inflicting no serious injury either upon passengers or train hands. No blame attaches to any one except the engineer, who admits that the collision would have been impossible if he had read the notice which he received. His neglect is the more unaccountable because of his high standing and his long and faithful service. For the board,

THOMAS RUSSELL, Chairman.

FLORAL FESTIVAL. The annual Floral Festival of the First Church Sunday School, which is to be celebrated a week from Sunday, promises to be as interesting as any heretofore held. Arrangements are being made to have elaborate floral decorations and the children are being trained to sing many new songs. One of the speakers will be the Rev. Kristofer Janson the widely famed Norwegian writer and preacher; and we are asked to give notice to any Swedes and Norwegians in town that Mr. Janson would be pleased to baptize their children. Other children will be baptized by the minister of the church, the Rev. D. M. Wilson. Services will begin at 3 P. M.

NEPONSET. A large vase for flowers has just been placed in front of the new depot at Neponset. The Old Colony seem to be willing to do justice to this ancient name. We wish some of the old citizens of this place, who opposed the railroad, could have lived to see these modern improvements.

PIANO TUNER. We are glad to hear that Frank A. Locke, the piano tuner and repairer, who so recently opened an office in Quincy, is meeting with such success. We predicted success from the start as we knew the citizens would take pride in making anything that was to benefit the town and for the convenience of its people, a success.

BASE BALL.

THE ST. JOHNS AT LAST WIN A GAME.

Braintrees and Neponsets Tied for First Position.

The scheduled game between the Braintrees and Samosets did not take place last Saturday, because of a previous engagement of the former with the Concords, and consequently the Neponsets by their victory over the Hyde Parks, were able to tie them for first position. The defeat of the Rangers by the St. Johns, places the former on an equal footing with the Samosets, as to per cent. The St. Johns by their victory have increased their per centage from .00 to .20. The Ranger-St. Johns game was however played under protest and may be decided no game.

Below is the standing of the clubs to date, and it will be noticed that those which adopted the name of the locality they hail from, are in the van:

| | Played | Won | Lost | Per cent |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Braintrees, | 5 | 4 | 1 | .80 |
| Neponsets, | 5 | 4 | 1 | .80 |
| Hyde Parks, | 4 | 2 | 2 | .50 |
| Rangers, | 6 | 2 | 4 | .33 |
| Samosets, | 3 | 1 | 2 | .33 |
| St. Johns, | 5 | 1 | 4 | .20 |

ST. JOHNS VS. RANGERS.

AROUND THE BASES.

Nines composed principally of Alerts and the Second Nine of the Adanas Academy, were matched at the Greenleaf street grounds on Wednesday. The Alerts won after defeat seemed certain by a score of 14 to 9.

The second nine of the St. John's and a nine from the Braintree Military Company, will be matched on French's Common, Braintree, this afternoon.

Last Saturday afternoon at the South Quincy grounds, the young Pioneers of West Quincy defeated a nine from Braintree, 25 to 13.

There was a match game at Wollaston, Wednesday, between the Stars of East Milton and Bristols of Wollaston, which was won by the former by a score of 38 to 30. Umpire James Haley.

The games in the Old Colony League arranged for to-day and June 17, are as follows: To-day,—Braintrees at Quincy; Hyde Parks at East Weymouth; Neponsets at South Abington.

June 17,—St. Johns at Hyde Park; Neponsets at Braintree; Rangers at South Abington.

CRICKET.

QUINCY VS. CHELSEA.

The above clubs met on the Quincy grounds last Saturday to decide their first game in the League Championship; both teams were strongly represented. The Chelsea boys were anxious to win their first game, while the Quincy boys were determined to add another victory to that of the previous Saturday. The Quincy Captain won the toss and sent the Chelseas to the bat to face the bowling of Burnie and Grierson, who both bowled in splendid form, but Martin and Capey alone made any stand, each batsman scoring 8, and the innings closed for 33 runs.

Quincy now took the bat, Caven and H. O'Neil defending the wickets against the bowling of the Keen brothers, who both bowled in good style, but the Quincy batting was equal to the task set them, and before the second fell had passed the Chelsea total, Caven hit out in splendid style for 21, and H. O'Neil played carefully for 15, whilst Graham run up his score of 10 in his usual quick style. Burnie also showed some good play for 8, and the innings closed for 73; thus leaving the Quincy boys victorious by 40 runs, and scoring their second victory in the League. Subjoined is the score:

Quincy Business Concerns.

JOHN O. HOLDEN, JEWELLER.

The jewelry and watch repairing business, now conducted by Mr. John O. Holden, was established by his father, Mr. John Holden, in Boston in 1825, and was removed to Quincy in 1840. With perhaps three or four exceptions no store in town has been continued so long under the same name. For the past twenty-five years the present proprietor, Mr. John O. Holden, has conducted the establishment in such a business-like manner that he is known throughout this section as a thoroughly trustworthy and reliable dealer. In watches he handles all the reliable makes of American manufacture, and guarantees that every watch sold shall be worth the money paid for it. He thoroughly understands the requirements of the trade, and has numerous customers, not only from this, but from all adjoining towns. Purchasers can repose the utmost confidence in all representations made and can trust to his judgment in the selection of style and goods. Mr. Holden is also agent for the Cunard and Allan Lines of Steamships, and has for sale drafts on England, Ireland and Scotland.

CITY STEAM LAUNDRY.

The work done at the City Steam Laundry, near the Public Library, is unsurpassed for general excellence. The entire business of the establishment is under the supervision of the proprietor, Mr. E. D. West, (formerly L. B. West & Son,) who is a person of long experience. Much of the work is done by hand. He employs skilled help and satisfies his customers.

BUSSELL, PHOTOGRAPHER.

While the productions of the camera have approached perfection much depends on the skill of the operator in securing a good picture. All children's photographs in Mr. Bussell's studio are taken by the instantaneous process, and no picture is allowed to go out until it is completely finished. He is a thorough artist.

THE ROBERTSON HOUSE.

This is a large and well kept house. The tables are excellent. Mr. N. C. Severance is the efficient and affable manager and all guests are treated in the most courteous and liberal manner.

THE POLICE COMMISSION BILL. The bitter fight which has been going on in the lower branch of the Legislature over the enactment of the Boston Police Commission bill was ended on Tuesday, and the bill was enacted by vote of 114 to 28, with 6 pairs. The scenes in the House during the afternoon were such as have seldom, if ever, been witnessed in the Massachusetts Legislature, and the Speaker was several times obliged to threaten to report members to the House or to call upon the Sergeant-at-Arms to preserve order, that official having been summoned and having all his force at the doors and in the lobbies. During the contest the Speaker has used up two gavels, and for fear that the third would give way also he was prepared with an ordinary carpenter's hammer.

First Regatta of Quincy Club.

The first race of the Quincy Yacht Club was sailed off Hough's Neck last Saturday afternoon, but because of the lack of a breeze was far from satisfactory. At first there was a fair southeast breeze, but this died out and many yachts had to give up the race, and row for home. In the first class the Queen Mab and the David Crockett were the only two to start, and neither of them completed the race. In the second class there were eight starters, the Tartar, Herald, Wildfire, Spray, Pet, Diadem, Parole, Imogene, who endeavored to sail a seven mile course. The first two were the only ones to complete it however, the Tartar being about eighteen minutes ahead. In the third class there were but three starters, the Mirage, Flora Lee, and the Elsie. The course was six miles. The Flora Lee took the lead at the start and was the only boat to return in the limit of time. The summary:

SECOND CLASS.

| | length sail'd | time cor. | time |
|---|---|---|---|
| | ft | h m s | h m s |
| Tartar, E. L. Dennie. | 13 11 | 3 08 25 | 2 42 44 |
| Herald, G. F. Smith | 29 09 | 3 26 15 | 3 00 07 |

THIRD CLASS.

Flora Lee, D. H. Lincoln. 17 01 2 45 30 2 19 57

The judges were Messrs. Charles H. Porter, George W. Morton and George A. Ordway. The Tartar and Herald received respectfully the first and second prizes in their class, and the Flora Lee was awarded the first in the third.

SALT SPRAY.

Secretary Faxon's yacht, the Spray, broke her rudder in trying to help herself along.

The David Crockett and the Herald were the only sloop rigs entered, all the others being cat rigged.

The Dorchester Yacht Club has an open regatta next Wednesday.

The pennant regatta of the Hull Yacht Club takes place next Saturday.

The Boston Yacht Club has its second club race next Saturday.

The Boston Courier says the Tartar seems to be the "Queen Mab" of her class, judging by the way she sailed in the race last Saturday.

It is expected that Quincy will be represented to-day in the Winthrop sweepstakes race. Eleven o'clock is the hour of start.

A SCIENTIFIC FACT.

"Royal" the only Baking Powder free from Lime and Absolutely Pure.

Lime is the serious defect found in most of the cream of tartar baking powders. As a matter of fact, chemical analysis has found it in all such powders except the "Royal." Its presence is caused by the use of adulterated cream of tartar in the effort to reduce their cost of production.

Lime adds to the weight, while it detracts from the strength of the baking powder. It also renders the food less wholesome, giving rise to dyspepsia and kindred ailments. Baking powders containing lime produce less leavening gas, and therefore in use are more expensive than a first-class, pure article.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar that is first specially refined and made chemically pure. No tartrate of lime or other impurity can find its way into the "Royal," and to this fact its great superiority in strength, wholesomeness, and keeping quality is due.

All this adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing the Royal Baking Powder, but as all its ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is free from every extraneous substance—"absolutely pure." Nor does it contain any ingredients except those necessary to make a pure, wholesome, and perfect baking powder.

Professor McMurtrie, late chemist in chief to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, after analyzing the various baking powders of the market, testifies to the absolute purity of that used in the Royal Baking Powder as follows:

"I have examined the cream of tartar manufactured by the New York Tartar Company and used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of their baking powder, and find it to be perfectly pure, and free from lime in any form.

A Song for a Little Girl.

BY WM. JAMES.

Oh, how I love the springtime,
So pleasant and so sweet,
The bright blue sky above me,
The daisies at my feet;
The joyous birds are singing,
The air is full of glee,
God surely made the springtime,
For a little child like me.

The violets are beautiful,
The buttercups are bright,
The streams are music making,
The world is filled with light;
I feel so very gladsome,
I wish that I could fly
With the sweet swift birds soaring,
Away unto the sky.

On the green grass I sit me,
And there I play for hours,
And loving little fingers,
Deck my young head with flowers.
Oh, yes, I love the springtime,
Soft breezes toss my hair,
New life in all its beauty,
Is round me everywhere.

—Dorchester Beacon.

Farm and Garden.

June and Summer.

There is enough, and in variety enough, in the new month of June and the new season of summer to kindle the finer feelings to delicious ecstacy, without calling in the aid of labored expression or appealing to any of the recognized arts of rhetoric. All healthy persons who know by experience or sympathy what the country is when dressed out in its verduous attire, instinctively long to feast their eyes upon it now, and to let their feet press the yield turf of June. The year opens to us all in its heightened beauty now, bearing the rich promise of the glory of autumn. Life pulses everywhere in its ever old, ever new rhythms of motions. The universal law of expansion is on all sides in active operation. The buds are all blossoms now, or nascent fruitage. What were mouse ears of leaves or little frills of green on every twig and bough but a little while since, to-day hides the skeleton frame of the tree and bush and the occupied nests of birds besides. The meadows are gaily pranked out in colors of almost every known shade and variety. * *

The citizen who has not revelled in the sight of green fields and the melody of bird-song for long months, is lifted up in spirit by the green leaves in the streets and squares, and the fleeting glimpses of summer beauty which he daily catches in his suburban flights. Summer is a volume crowded with suggestions for him on every page. In point of fact, all of us like to welcome the season of verdure and fruits back again, spite of its thunders and tornadoes, its fierce July suns and its simmering August heats. We feel that these are requisites in the due correction of the dreary, biting winter and the weary, reluctant spring.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Asparagus Beds.

Deacon Hathaway of Beverly has a bed of asparagus that has borne a crop every year since 1860, and this year it is better than ever.—Herald. Thomas Powderly of South street, Randolph, says he can go five better. He set his bed in 1880, and let it grow till 1888 before he cut it, and has had the best of asparagus ever since. Mr. Powderly recommends the following: Dig a trench around the bed in the fall and fill it with manure, then cover it, and cover the bed with earth, to protect the roots from frost, and so it will shed the snow water, which is injurious. In the spring open the trench, spread the manure upon the bed, and refill the trench, and continue each year as before, and you will have all the asparagus you want, and of the best. He recommends the cutting of the seeds in the fall before they are ripe, and have a chance to fall to the ground, as they are destructive to the growing roots. Those who would like to grow asparagus would do well to take Mr. Powderly's advice.—Randolph Register.

☞ Oscar L. Dorr of Sharon is probably the largest market gardener in Massachusetts. He will have more than 300 acres of hoed crops this year. His fields and crops are worth coming 100 miles to see.—Sharon News.

☞ It is estimated that a ten-week-old chick will cost ten cents.

Anecdotes.

"What is an epistle?" asked a Sunday school teacher of her class.

"The wife of an apostle," replied the young hopeful.

"Ma, lend me a pencil; I want to draw some ladies!"

"Why, Johnny, this is Sunday."

"Well, I'll draw them in their Sunday clothes."

A waggish guest before whom has been placed a dish of fish turns to his fair neighbor and says: "Miss, will you have some of this dead fish?"

"Dead fish? Oh—ugh—how horrible! Oh, no; none for me, thank you!"

Mrs. Benderly, on returning to her house from a walk, went into the kitchen and said to the colored cook: "Matilda, I hear from the neighbors that you have been having visitors here while I was away. That must not happen again."

"All right, mum. I'll told de culled gemman, what am payin' me 'tenshuns dat after dis he must call on me while you am in de house."

☞ An English traveller in looking over some American town names, came across the well known ones of Pawtucket, Shetucket and Nantucket. "Haw! haw!" he exclaimed. "I'm blessed if the whole family didn't take it!"

Conundrums.

What lane do the ladies like best to walk in? Mousseline-de-lane.

Why is the letter D like a sailor? It follows the C (sea).

Why is a student of theology like a merchant? He studies the prophets (profits).

What is that which occurs once in a minute, twice in a mommeut and not once in a thousand years? The letter M.

What sort of snuff is that which the more you take of it the fuller the box will be? Candle-snuff.

Alcohol. Effect upon the Brain.

In time the free use of liquor hardens and thickens the membrane enveloping the nervous matter, the nerve-corpuscles undergo a "fatty degeneration," the blood-vessels lose their elasticity; and the vital fluid, flowing less freely through the obstructed channels, fail to afford the old-time nourishment. The consequent deterioration of the nervous substance—the organ of thought—shows itself in the weakened mind,* that we so often notice in a person accustomed to drink, and at last lays the foundation of various nervous disorders, epilepsy, paralysis, and insanity.

IN THE VICINITY.

—Milk retails at four cents a quart in Sharon.

—General Manager Kendrick, of the Old Colony Railroad, will have his summer residence this season at Hull.

—Medford had a mock trial on Friday evening of last week; Ex-Selectman Dill was charged with emotional insanity.

—A Hingham dealer has an ice chest capable of holding a ton of butter at once, the tubs being run in and out on car tracks.

—Weymouth Iron Company have shut down for two weeks during which time the annual inventory of stock will be taken.

— In Weymouth, in every case but one, abutters have objected to the granting of liquor licenses. The single exception was that of a hotel.

—At a recent town meeting in North Abington, it was voted 182 to 11, to build water works, and supply the village with water from Big Sandy Pond.

— There are two banana plants in front of the residence of James W. Tufts on High street, Medford, and they are attracting a great deal of attention.

—The fertilizer business at Bradley's works at Weymouth this season has been very brisk, about 1800 tons having been, as we are informed, the product of only one week's operations.

— The Norfolk County Gazette, says, "Parties from Boston were in Milton last week looking for a site for manufacturing purposes, but were frozen out by the high price demanded for land—twenty-five cents per foot."

— Kiles Gleason, proprietor of the restaurant in the Old Colony depot, Boston, died at his residence, Harrison Square, Tuesday night of pneumonia. He commenced business at the Old Colony depot twelve years ago with a small capital and leaves a fortune of about $200,000.—Milton News.

—The Weymouth Gazette says, "Mr. D. S. Baxter, carpenter and builder, of Quincy, bought some two years ago the factory on Bridge street, North Weymouth, formerly known as A. R. Moulton's, last occupied by A. N. Sanders & Co., which has been remodelled and finished in a thorough, workmanlike manner, into four fine tenements.

— Our genial young friend, Brother Lemuel W. Standish of the Stoughton Sentinel, took unto himself a wife Monday of last week, and we join the brethren of the craft in hearty congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. S. are visiting friends in New York, and the "devil" is making things lively in the printing office and editorial sanctum.

"Good morning, Murphy. Are those your children?"

"Yis, sor; that is my small potato crop, sor."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because, sor, they are all little Murphies."

Then the boss set up the candy to the gossoons.—Georgia Cracker.

SKATING RINKS. The Milton News says: "Not many years have passed away since roller skating was the fashionable amusement of the hour in large cities and watering places both in England and Ireland. Rinks sprang up here and there with a mushroom growth, and after a short lapse faded as rapidly away."

Cambridgeport's unsuccessful skating rink has been transformed into a theatre.

Ohio means to suppress skating rinks and has put a tax of $2000 on each one in the state.

A skating rink is being built on an excursion steamer which will picnic out of St. Louis during the summer.

TROUBLES OF YOUNG CITIES. The Brockton Eagle says "now the city of Brockton is surrounded, from Jan. 1st to December 31st in every year, with men with schemes calculated to deplete the city treasury. For instance, the city has spent some thousands of dollars on fire extinguishers. To-day they appear to be practically worthless, at least no one is praising them, for the city is not in the market to buy, yet some scheme for spending money that shall displace apparatus secured by former investments is always at hand."

☞ A lecturer shouted in his speech "We must return to the food of our fathers. And what was it, I ask?" A voice across the hall replied, "Thistles."

☞ The Supreme Court was examining an applicant for admission to the bar. "Young man, define mandamus." "That's what a man does when you decide a case against him." That young man is now tending bar.

☞ "Why is a young man like a kernel of corn?" asked a young lady. "Because," said another, "he turns white when he pops."

For the Patriot.

Village Improvement.

CANADA, June 1.

There are so many ways in which a society can work in the line of improvement, that it seems desirable to work economically, and the cost of our trees thus far, and the fact that so many must be replaced, lead to the thought that the Society ought to be raising its own trees, and it has been suggested that the members obligate themselves to set out ever so few trees to be used in the future. If the love of trees is not inborn, it is certainly a taste to cultivate, and one needs to see forests in their native grandeur to realize what fine trees will do in making our homes attractive.

If we can have a large number of trees given us next Spring, would it be judicious to expend our money in hand in the Autumn? This is to be considered at the coming general meeting in July. The gentleman who will give these to us, says it is best to remove them in the spring, in late April.

Maples here have put out nine inches of new wood within two weeks, and are sturdy every way. The forests of sugar maples are very grand, so thickly do the trees crowd, that light scarcely penetrates their leaves, and their masses of foliage of vivid green, and the straight trunks growing to great height are beautiful beyond description.

The sidewalks here are different from ours, being verdant banks of grass, strawberry blossoms, and large violets and ferns that grow like small shrubs. Then a ditch separates these from the single carriage track, and with holes, gullies and corduroy bridges, interspered with small places made of small branches and twigs, all washed out in winter, so a horse can trot only a few feet, and hills that multiply the distance indefinitely; all these form the highway, and an enthusiastic citizen in Quincy, who is interested in roads, ought to see these and he would decide that with many sprinkling carts, Quincy could wait or work patiently to make better roads.

The Secretary is only a one-hundredth part of the Village Improvement Society, but would urge all interested to attend the coming meeting in July at the President's house, and to consider how to carry out our proposed work with economy. Our citizens have shown appreciation of the work the little Society wishes to do, and confidence in its officers, but tree planting is new to those who have taken the lead, and much is to be learned by study and experience.

Here away from the trade and traffic of cities, all feel a love for trees that some of our citizens evidently do not share, judging by late pieces of mischief on Granite street. Here where the world's pulse beats firm and strong, unaffected by the excitement of the political or social world, where the necessities of life seem few, people love these gifts of trees that nature is ready to multiply when she has only room, and the thousands of acres of woodland that are dotted with fertile farms seem to us more fit temples of worship than any made with hands.

The three trees that Quincy can point to with pride and pleasure, the grand old oak on the Quincy farm, and the lindens on the Butler estate, give us an idea of what individual trees may become, so when any member of the society will nurse a single tree he may be doing something that will be of untold pleasure to some who come after us.

A. E. F.

From our Regular Correspondent.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, JUNE 6, 1885.

Among the departmental changes which go on almost unnoticed is one that has displeased a majority of the clerks. Department libraries have for many years been sustained by the Government, and increased by small annual appropriations. The libraries thus provided for by Congress have been kept for the use of the employes of the respective departments and in selecting the volumes to be purchased the aim has been to get books for which the greatest demand was made. Consequently the libraries now contain about the same proportion of works of fiction, humor, poetry, history, science and travel. Congress appropriated $500 for the purchase of new books for the Treasury Department this year, and when a list of desired books was submitted to the new secretary, he struck from it all the novels, and political and humorous works. The books that remained were histories, works of finance, political economy, coinage and kindred matters supposed to be of use in the Treasury Department. Other Cabinet officers adopted the same policy, each taking the position that Congress originally contemplated for these libraries the purchase of books in some way relating to the workings of the departments, and of some value as books of reference.

The new institutions that are to go up in Washington next are the Catholic University and the Army Medical Museum. Monetary considerations would have given the University to Philadelphia, but the future of this city, its great attractions for students and even of letters, the facilities afforded by the museums, observatory and other scientific institutions, together with the advantages to be derived from the meetings of Congress, turned the scale in favor of Washington.

The Medical Museum is to be built on the Government reservation where the Smithsonian Institution, and the National Museum are. The old Museum building is on Tenth street, and is the same in which President Lincoln was shot. On account of its historical interest it will not be destroyed. Opposite to it is the house to which the dying President was carried, and in which he breathed his last. It is a unpretentious, rather small red brick residence, bearing a marble tablet. On this is the date of Mr. Lincoln's death in gilt letters, that have become dim with time. ADAMS.

Mortgagee's Sale.

PURSUANT to the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Charles A. Green and Mary A. Green, to Charles V. Poor, dated July 1st, 1871, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds for the County of Norfolk, Lib. 469, Fol. 249, which mortgage has been duly assigned to Perez G. Porter, will be sold at public auction, for breach of the condition of said mortgage on WEDNESDAY the twenty-fourth day of June, A. D., 1885, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, on the premises:

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, called Squantum, bounded and described as follows, viz:—Beginning at a point in the westerly line of Green street, so-called, one hundred and thirty feet southerly from the southerly line of Ocean street, thence running westerly by land late of said Mary A. Green, one hundred and sixty feet, northerly by land released to said Mary A. Green, by said Charles V. Poor, one hundred and sixty-five feet to said Ocean street; thence turning and running easterly by said Ocean street, one hundred and seventy-five feet to said Green street; thence southerly by said Green street one hundred and thirty feet to the point of beginning. Containing twenty-five thousand five hundred square feet more or less, according to a plan drawn by H. H. Moses, dated June 28, 1871. The other portion of said land described in said mortgage having been released by said Poor in his lifetime, being the premises described in said mortgage.

Terms made known at the time and place of sale.

PEREZ G. PORTER, assignee and present holder of said mortgage.

DO THE RIGHT THING.

Common Sense Talk to Bilious People, Clear Testimony of a Witness.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: About 4 years ago I began to suffer from a liver difficulty. During the attacks I experienced severe pain, accompanied by what I cannot describe better than by calling it a drawing in sensation. The agony of it was almost beyond endurance. None of the usual medicines employed in such cases had any effect upon me. From time to time I was laid up and unable to attend to any business. This covered a period of a year.

Finally Mr. Lloyd, a druggist of this city suggested your FAVORITE REMEDY as an excellent thing for the Liver. I had not taken the whole of the first bottle before I found most decided relief; the pain passed away, and to my delight I regained the power to enjoy and digest my food without the former distress. Nature seemed to be set going again. I cannot better express my appreciation of Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY than by telling you that since my personal knowledge of its virtues I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and acquaintances.

Yours truly, S. PEPSON.

222 Alexander Avenue.

Mr. Pepson is one of Albany's old and respected residents, and consents to the publication of the above letter.

Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Rondout, N. Y.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventive of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. $1 bottle, 6 for $5, by all druggists.

REGULATIONS

OF THE

Board of Health

OF THE

TOWN OF QUINCY.

THE Board of Health of a town shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety, respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and causes of sickness within its town, . . . . whoever violates any such regulations shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 18.

The Board shall give notice of all regulations made by it by publishing the same in some newspaper of its town, . . . such notice shall be deemed legal notice to all persons. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 19.

REGULATION 1. Every householder shall keep his premises free from all nuisances and sources of filth that are injurious to the public health and safety.

REGULATION 2. All privy vaults and cesspools shall be emptied before the fifteenth day of May. During the summer season they shall be disinfected and emptied as often as shall be necessary to keep them free from offensive odors.

REGULATION 3. From the fifteenth day of May to the first day of October, no privy vault or cesspool shall be emptied between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and ten o'clock in the evening.

REGULATION 4. No person shall deposit the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or any other filth, upon any premises within the limits of this town, without first having obtained a permit to do so from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 5. No privy vault or cesspool that is not water-tight shall be maintained within two rods of any well, spring, or other source of water supply used for drinking purposes.

REGULATION 6. Water from the kitchen sinks shall not be allowed to run under any house, nor shall any cesspool for the retention of such waste water be within five feet of any house, except the cesspool be cemented water-tight.

REGULATION 7. All putrid or decaying animal or vegetable matter, manure, garbage and every kind of filth, must be removed from all cellars, yards and outbuildings before the first day of June.

REGULATION 8. No person shall throw or deposit, in any street, side-walk, court, square, public place or vacant lot, or into any pond, creek, or river, any dead animals, decaying vegetables, offal, dirt, garbage, refuse, manure, or the contents of any privy vault or cesspool, or filth of any kind.

REGULATION 9. No person shall be allowed to maintain a piggery within the town without a permit from the Board of Health.

REGULATION 10. Any well, spring, cistern or other source of drinking water that is contaminated from any surface drainage, cesspool, privy, sink spout or other source of water pollution must be disused.

REGULATION 11. No person shall be allowed to carry on any offensive trade or manufacture without the consent of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 12. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of cholera, small-pox, diptheria, croup, scarlet fever, measles, or any other disease, dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health, and upon the death, recovery, or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 79.

REGULATION 13. When a physician knows that a person whom he is called to visit is infected with any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the Board of Health. Public Statutes, Chap. 80, Sec. 80.

REGULATION 14. No child, or adult person belonging to the household in which any such contagious disease exists, or whose residence has a common entrance with such household, shall be allowed to attend any public or private school, within four weeks from the commencement of any such case of contagious disease.

REGULATION 15. Every child, or adult person, after recovery from any contagious disease, before being admitted to any public or private school, shall present to the teacher of the same, a certificate signed by a physician, or member of the Board of Health, stating that he is free from infection.

REGULATION 16. No person, teacher, or scholar shall become a member of any public or private school, until he has shown satisfactory evidence that he has been successfully vaccinated.

All complaints in relation to nuisances and sources of filth, injurious to the public health and comfort, must be made in writing to the Board of Health, or its agent.

Whenever complaint shall be made as aforesaid, the Board of Health, or its authorized agent, shall proceed to examine the premises complained of, and shall take measures to abate the nuisance, if such is found to exist, after giving legal notice to the parties entitled thereto.

These rules and regulations, and all the Statutes of the Commonwealth relating to health and disease, shall be strictly enforced in the town of Quincy.

On the morning of the Seventeenth of June, at 10.45 o'clock, the annual competitive declamations by the students of the Adams Academy, for the Adams Gold Medal and a special prize by Dr. Everett, took place at the Academy. There was a large attendance of the friends of the pupils, among them we noticed Dana Estes of Boston, Col. Theodore Lyman of Brookline, Prof. B. A. Gould, Capt. E. S. Huntington, Gen. Samuel Quincy, William W. Greenough, Col. Charles H. Porter, Theo. King, Jr., and numerous other prominent gentlemen and ladies.

Thirteen young students, six of whom belong in Quincy, competed for the prizes. As a whole, the declamations were very satisfactory and a credit to the school, but all were unanimous in endorsing the award of judges of the gold medal to B. A. Gould, one of the Quincy boys residing at Wollaston. Gladstone himself would have been proud to have heard his speech in Parliament so eloquently produced.

Dr. Everett's special prize was given to K. F. Page, of Brookline, and although a member of the fourth class, the expression, feeling and emphasis given, would have done credit to much older students or speakers.

The judges were Jeffrey R. Brackett, Esq., Rev. Rufus Ellis, D. D., and the teachers of the Academy.

The exercises were prefaced by a few remarks and plain truths by Dr. Everett. In speaking of the financial condition of the school, he said it had suffered from hard times as had other institutions, and that to be self sustaining it must be better supported than in the past year. He assured all that the Academy would be reopened in the Fall, and that he had released the boarding house. He had heard the rumor that the school would not reopen, but wanted all to understand it would.

The following were the exercises:

Milton Gleanings.

There is a good prospect that all the streets of East Milton are to be sprinkled. A subscription paper has been circulated, and we learn with good success. Co-operated work is needed, and already $175 has been pledged. G. H. Loud will do the job if the subscriptions will warrant it, and he will obtain water from Rogers' quarry.

Children's Day will be observed at the East Milton Congregational Church to-morrow. Rev. Stacey Fowler is expected to preach again. In the evening there will be a Sunday School Floral concert.

An accident to the engine on the Granite Branch, Saturday, at East Milton caused a delay of three-quarters of an hour.

It was Parents' Day at the Intermediate and Primary schools in the East District on Tuesday. The Grammar schools have theirs later.

Do you know Mr. Babcock since he has a "clean face."

☞ Harper's Magazine for July has been received. The opening article is about the Mohamadians in India illustrated. "Midsummer on Mount Desert" a poem illustrated; "A day's drive with Montana Cowboys" with graphic pictures; "The city of Buffalo," profusely illustrated; an Adirondack sketch full of the charms which holds all lovers of wild country life and sports; the second paper in the series of "Great American Industries," a full and interesting exposition with abundant illustrations, and the story of the champion yacht, America, by its owner, Gen. B. F. Butler.

GERMANTOWN'S HOLIDAY.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE ANCIENT "TOWN" OBSERVED ON THE SEVENTEENTH.

The morning of the day was all that could be desired; promptly at the rising of the celestial orb, the howitzers of the Marine Artillery belched forth sonorous sounds, and the bells in the town, of all sizes, peeled forth in honor of the nation's jubilee, and with the firing of crackers by the younger portion of the community, the blowing of tin horns, the braying of the four-footed quadrupeds, the barking of dogs, the peculiar noises of Sir Thomas and marm cats, the crying of children, the dismal groaning of those parents and other mortals who were inclined to sleep, was a day that never can be erased from the memories of those so unfortunate as to have heard the row; it was likened unto a tail of a comet coming in contact with the earth and giving it particular fits. It was thought best on the part of those so effected to arise from their couches and say: Good Lord, deliver us, poor sinners, from evil, and we will sin no more.

Promptly at the hour assigned, the military made their appearance in front of the Custom House; the spacious windows being filled by the elite of the town and neighboring ones. Cheer upon cheer greeted them upon every side. The commanding and dignified appearance of the scared veteran hero, Major General Wright, astriding so gracefully his Arabian charger, Josephus 1st, caused a look of wonderment and admiration impossible to describe. We do not think it is hardly fair to particularize any of the companies, they all looked finely, but we must be pardoned in saying in the command of Col. Johnson's, we observed a number of his men who presented a strikingly soldierly appearance.

After the formation of the civic procession which was very imposing; the order for marching was given, and the clock-like procession of execution in several of the companies could not fail to draw favorable comments from the sidewalk pedestrians. After marching through the spacious streets and broad avenues of the town, passing by the princely residences, where the latch strings were out, they proceeded to Hough's Neck to an elegant tent of Yales, decorated in a superb manner, where about four hours were spent, although some of the gentlemen's collars were very limpid being excessively warm in listening to the various gentlemen and ladies who took part in the exercises, which gave unqualified approbation. After the close of the services the procession reformed and marched to the elegant and commodious hotel which we have been informed was loaned for the occasion by the enterprising proprietor, where a sumptuous repast was provided by the world renowned caterers, Messrs. Bacon, Baldwin and Taylor, in its magnificent dining room, which cannot be excelled; about 700 persons took part in the proceedings. After a sufficient time had been given to do ample justice to the good cheer set before them, the company was called together by the honored and indefatigable Collector of the Port, Capt. Tier, who prefaced the intellectual feast by a few well chosen and felicitous remarks. A joyous and mirthful time was then had. Your reporter, I regret to say was suddenly obliged to leave on pressing business, and could not obtain the first part of the proceedings. He returned in season to hear the remarks of your honorable and much admired patriarch, General Wilson of Quincy. On responding to his sentiment he was received with vociferous applause, which made the building tremble.

GEN. WILSON'S SPEECH.

After the kind expressions of feeling so generously manifested towards me, my heart is so filled with gratitude that I am obliged to confess, although very reluctantly, that after having partaken so sumptuously of the good cheer set before me, I am almost too full for utterance, and feel like exploding. I am taken flat aback to find words to express myself as I could desire. But I must say that it affords me great pleasure to meet you on this memorable occasion, as it serves to extend our social relations, and I trust still farther, to extend the bonds of friendship which will unite us more firmly together.

Mr. President, the memory of this day should ever be hallowed in the hearts of us all and especially by myself who took such an active part in its proceedings. If my memory serves me correctly, I joined a famous company, dignified by the title of the Quincy Roarers, on the 16th of April 1765, at the age of 17, as Second Lieutenant and was ordered to Cambridge, Mass. Our company was attached to the Brigade of Gen. Greene, and, I regret to say, among the troops most destitute at that time were those belonging to our old Commonwealth. My recollections are very vivid to an occurrence of the day we marched to Bunker Hill, or Breeds. The officers of our Regiment were in council at Head Quarters. Gens. Washington, Putnam and several other officers, whose names I cannot recall were present. Our commander made a soldier-like address to Gen. Washington. His appearance and manners made a great impression upon me. He was 39 years old, well built and vigorous, when he said to me, being a distant relative, "now George I hope you will do your duty and not flinch," I can never forget my feelings. He said very emphatically, "we must drive the enemy from the town; Let His Majesty's Ships be their only place of refuge."

Now ladies, gentlemen, and veterans of the army and navy, could we only have had a plenty of powder and kept it dry, the result of the day might have been different. I must not detain you longer but will tender you my most sincere and heartfelt thanks for your attention, and affectionately take my leave of you.

After Gen. Wilson took his seat the applause was deafening, and the chairman in order to soothe the feelings of the old gentleman, who was very much overcome, was handed a glass of champagne, but out of respect to his neighbor Esquire Faxon, reluctantly refused. The beautiful song of our native land was proposed to be sung. The president requested the distinguished quartette to do so, and it was sung with such pathos and expression of feeling, that it created the wildest enthusiasm. Young Walter was obliged to be sent home in a carriage he was so much overcome.

The Chairman very graciously called upon your young and enterprising townsman, Hon. Mr. Souther. On responding he received quite an ovation.

HON. MR. SOUTHER.

After listening to the remarks of my venerable friend my feelings have been so wrought up by excitement, that the boxes of my head pumps are sucked dry, and it is difficult for me to collect my thoughts, being so unexpectedly called upon. But my kind friends, I most highly appreciate the feelings of my venerable friend, that the memory of this day should always be cherished and held sacred to our observance, as a national holiday. This fact I admit and am compelled to confess, we are very re-miss in our own town, in carrying out such arrangements without strong efforts are made. I won't detain you, but must say to you, Mr. Chairman, and your committee of arrangements, I thank you for the civilities you have extended to me, and must say I trust I shall be able to reciprocate those favors on the coming Fourth of July, in my own town, and I trust, through God's blessing, we may all live to witness another anniversary, such as this.

Our distinguished temperance friend, Bro. Faxon, was next called upon. On rising to respond he was very much annoyed by the sudden reports of the corks being drawn from champagne bottles, and very quickly excused himself, and went in the name of the law and the Metropolitan police force of Massachusetts, after the offenders, and it is said they were fined $10 and cost.

Many other speeches were made by prominent gentlemen present, and I regret to say in the excitement arising from the noise and confusion, it was impossible for me to do justice to them;—although the festivities were kept up to a late hour.

It affords me pleasure to say that nothing occurred to mar the festivities of the day, excepting the non-arrival of the steamer Great Eastern; but that difficulty was readily obviated by the influence of our distinguished fellow-citizens, Rear Admirals Washburn and Ford, with the Naval Department at Washington, whereby the Honorable Secretary of the Navy kindly consented that the renowned gun boat Tallapoosia, the terror of the seas and the human race, should supply her place. The beautiful and commodious Yacht, Florence, by the courtesy of her commander, Capt Kemp, rendered valuable aid.

We regret to say that President Cleveland and his Cabinet was not present, on account of business, but intend doing so 1975.

BASE BALL.

NEPONSET DEFEATS BRAINTREE AND TAKE THE LEAD.

The St. Johns Win Two and Lose One And Are Now Number Four.

Each club in the Old Colony League has played two or three games since our last issue and the relative standing of the clubs has changed somewhat. Last Saturday the Braintrees, Neponsets and Rangers won. On the 17th the St. Johns won twice and the Neponsets and Rangers one each. Thus Neponset secures the lead, with Braintree second. The Hyde Parks step down from the third to fifth position, while the Rangers and St. Johns become three and four respectively, and the Samosets bring up in the rear.

Below is the standing of the clubs this morning:

| | Played | Won | Lost | Per cent |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Neponsets, | 7 | 6 | 1 | .857 |
| Braintrees, | 7 | 5 | 2 | .714 |
| Rangers, | 8 | 4 | 4 | .500 |
| St. Johns, | 8 | 3 | 5 | .375 |
| Hyde Parks, | 7 | 2 | 5 | .275 |
| Samosets, | 5 | 1 | 4 | .200 |

BRAINTREES VS. ST. JOHNS.

At the South Quincy grounds last Saturday the Braintrees and St. Johns were matched. The Braintrees were without the service of four of their best men, Chamberlain, Rudderham, O'Dowd and Mulligan and they looked a little disheartened at the start, especially when the St. Johns scored two in the first innings and blanked their opponents. Coughlin pitched finely for the Braintrees, however, ably filling Chamberlain's place, and retired the St. John's men in one-two-three order in the second, third and fourth innings. In the fifth innings after Ford flied out, Barrett got his base on balls, second on error, and scored on a wild pitch. Ogle and Lynch were out on flies. In the sixth Collins reached third on a base hit and errors, but was left. The two runs in the seventh were scored by Galvin and Ford, the former having made a base hit, and the latter given his base on balls, and both scoring by errors. In the eighth it was one-two-three order, although Collins went the rounds of the bases by an overthrow to first, only to be out at the home plate. In the ninth Ford made a base hit and scored by a pass ball and wild pitch, and the St. John's total score was six. Barrett pitched finely.

Although Braintree was whitewashed in the first innings two base hits and errors allowed Ruffin to score in the second while Pitts was left on third. In the third Whitcomb and Downey scored two unearned runs. In the fourth the St. Johns went to pieces and Barrett left the box, and interrupted the game a few minutes, when he resumed his place. Pitts got his base on error, and Burrell by a passed third strike, the former to score by errors and the latter on Coughlin's base hit. Coughlin scored on Whitcomb's base hit and fine base running; Downey reached first on error and both scored on pass balls. M'Laughlin flied out, Paris struck out, and Ruffin closed the innings at first. It was one-two-three order in the fifth and sixth. In the seventh Woodsum made a base hit, stole second and third and scored on pass ball. In the eighth Whitcomb was the only one to see first, and he was left on base. They did not need the ninth innings to increase their score, for they had nine to their opponents six. Below is the score:

ST. JOHNS VS. HYDE PARKS.

The game at South Quincy on the morning of the Seventeenth was not satisfactory to the crowd, unless in that it was a victory for the St. Johns. The Hyde Parks played a weak game both at the bat and in the field and completely went to pieces in the sixth innings and gave up the game with the following score:

ST. JOHNS VS. HYDE PARKS.

At Hyde Park on the afternoon of the Seventeenth, the St. Johns and Hyde Parks were again matched. The Quincy club was composed of Barrett, pitcher; Sullivan, catcher; J. Lynch, first base; Collins, second base; Rudderham, third base; Lynch, short stop; Galvin, left field; McManners, centre field; and Downey, right field. The St. Johns were at the bat 43 times, scored 14 runs, made 17 base hits with a total of 24, assisted 21 times, and made 9 errors. The Hyde Parks were at the bat 35 times, scored 5 runs, made 6 base hits with a total of 6, assisted 15 times and made 21 errors. The score by innings was;

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: About 8 years ago I began to suffer from a Liver difficulty. During the attacks I experienced severe pain, accompanied by what I cannot describe better than by calling it a drawing in sensation. The agony of it was almost beyond endurance. None of the usual medicines employed in such cases had any effect upon me. From time to time I was laid up and unable to attend to any business. This covered a period of a year.

Finally Mr. Lloyd, a druggist of this city suggested your FAVORITE REMEDY as an excellent thing for the Liver. I had not taken the whole of the first bottle before I found most decided relief; the pain passed away, and to my delight I regained the power to enjoy and digest my food without the former distress. Nature seemed to be set going again. I cannot better express my appreciation of Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY than by telling you that since my personal knowledge of its virtues I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and acquaintances.

Yours truly, S. PEPSON.

222 Alexander Avenue.

Mr. Pepson is one of Albany's old and respected residents, and consents to the publication of the above letter.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

FAVORITE REMEDY

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. ## "IF WE KNEW."

If we knew, when walking thoughtless
Through the noisy, crowded way,
That some pearl of wondrous whiteness
Close beside our pathway lay,
We would pause where now we hasten,
We would often look around,
Lest our careless feet should trample
Some rare jewels to the ground.

If we knew what forms were fainting
For the shade that we should fling,
If we knew what lips were parching
For the water we could bring,
We would haste with eager footsteps,
We would work with willing hands,
Bearing cups of cooling water,
Planting rows of shading palms.

If we knew what lives are darkened
By some thoughtless word of ours,
Which had ever lain among them
Like the frost among the flowers;
Oh, with what sincere repentings,
With what anguish of regret,
While our eyes were overflowing,
We would cry, forgive! forget!

If we knew? alas! and do we
Ever care or seek to know
Whether bitter herbs or roses
In our neighbors' gardens grow?
God forgive us! lest hereafter
Our hearts break to hear Him say,
Careless child, I never knew you,
From My presence flee away.

Farm and Garden.

Floral Hints.

At this season of the year, the best disposition of the greenhouse or pot plants is to turn them out of their pots into the open ground of the garden. Here they can remain until the last of August, when they will have made a good growth and be in far more vigorous condition than if kept in pots. They should be attended to promptly at the close of the Summer and not delay until cool weather comes.

By the end of August such plants should be lifted and potted in good soil, preparatory to the blooming season in Winter. It is a good practice to cut around the plants before removing them from the soil. This operation is performed with a narrow, sharp spade, and close enough to the plant to allow the soil or ball of earth attached to the roots to be placed in the pot it is to occupy, and to have a little room to spare for fresh soil around the sides.

The effect of cutting around the plants is to reduce the roots, thereby causing a new growth of rootlets. If this is done about two weeks before they are to be lifted, there will be a mass of young roots when the plants are taken up, and these will be ready to work actively in the fresh soil provided for them at the sides of the pots. If the plants are not cut around before removal, they will take a somewhat longer time to recover from their moving. A plant that has already acquired as large a size as is desirable can be plunged in the open ground in its pot, setting the rim of the pot below the surface of the soil. When lifted at the close of Summer it should have considerable of the soil removed, the roots shortened in, and be repotted with fresh soil. There is no better treatment of the calla than to turn it out of the pot and set it in the garden until the last of August, and then repot it.—Sunday Budget.

Sea-Weed as a Manure.

Sea-weed mixed with the mud taken from shallow coves, when it is gathered with rakes in scows, makes a good absorbent for the cow yard and pig sty. It is sometimes used as a top-dressing for grass land, but this must be attended with considerable loss of ammonia, as it decays rapidly. The most economical use of it is, to spread it broadcast upon land that is to be immediately plowed for corn and potatoes, or other main crops. It is a favorite fertilizer for the rutabaga and sweet German turnip crops. A drill is opened with the plow, the furrow is filled with the weed, and then covered by turning two furrows over it. The mangold and sugar beet may be profitably raised in the same way. This covering the fresh gathered weed with a few inches of earth leaves nothing to waste. We have found it to be an excellent fertilizer for asparagus, spreading it upon the surface of the bed and forking it in. We have used it for forty years, and with the addition of superphosphate or bone-dust for top-dressing, desire no better general fertilizer.—American Agriculturist.

Anecdotes.

"Patrick, were you a minor when you landed in America?" asked Romanzo, our genial deputy collector.

"No, sir; I was a bricklayer.

"What is a lake?" asked the teacher. A bright little Irish boy raised his hand.

"Well, Mikey, what is it?"

"Sure, it's a hole in the kittle, mum."

Mother—"So you think of getting married, John?"

Son—"Yes, mother."

M.—"Is the young lady pretty?"

M.—"Can she cook?"

S.—"Dunno."

M.—Make bread, wash, mend and take care of a house?"

S.—"Dunno."

M.—"Is there anything she can do in the way of honsekeeping?"

S.—"Dunno."

M. (despairingly)—"Can she do anything?"

S. (with animation)—"She can. She's one of the best roller skaters that goes to the rink."—Boston Courier.

IN THE VICINITY.

— Rockland schools close June 26. Norwood's the 19th.

— Abington voted last week to issue $100,000 water bonds.

— Gov. Robinson has signed the Metropolitan police bill.

— The Cohasset Cottager is making it hot for illegal liquor dealers.

— The Dedham Transcript complains of the poor gas in that town.

— Walpole voted last Saturday to build a new school house in the centre of the town.

— The Boston Courier presents its readers with the cards of over 250 leading hotels.

— The Norfolk Club met at Young's, Boston, last Saturday. They are to entertain Senator John A. Logan, Monday, June 29.

— Stoughton talks of celebrating the Fourth, with antiques, band concerts morning and evening, games and races, childrens entertainments and fireworks.

— The Social Union of Hyde Park are arranging for a procession of horribles on July 4th. It will start at five in the morning. There will also be fireworks in the evening.

— The Ridge Hill farms at Wellesley are being restored to their former glory. Among the recent arrivals at the zoological gardens are an African yak, a South American peccary and two trick mules.

— Stoughton is said to be the banner town for prohibition and drunkenness. With the prohibition law rigidly enforced, the lockup is well supplied with drunks. The "pocket business" does it.

— Melville Gardens at Downer Landing were opened last Saturday. They will be conducted as usual by James D. Scudder, and will present the old time attractions. Edmand's band and Downer Landing clam bakes are appreciated by all.

— At a town meeting in Rockland last week the act of the Legislature allowing water to be taken from Big Sandy pond for a supply for the towns of Rockland, Abington and South Abington was accepted by a vote of 299 to 6. Water Commissioners were chosen.

— The weight of Otis Bisbee's family residing in East Bridgewater makes a grand total of 1800 pounds, says the Brockton Gazette. The oldest child is forty years and the youngest fifteen. The individual weight is as follows: Otis Bisbee, 223; Eliza W. Bisbee, 223 1-2; Joseph F. Bisbee, 213; Frederick G. Bisbee, 214 1-2; John R. Bisbee, 211; Clarence H. Bisbee, 222 1-2; Hattie F. Ames, 180; Ida M. Ames, 167; Charles O. Bisbee, 147.

Temperance.

Furnished for publication by the W. C. T. Union

Mental and Moral Powers.

"So intimate is the relation between the body and the mind that an injury to one harms the other. The effect of alcoholized blood is to weaken the will. The one habitually under its influence often shocks us by his indecision and breaking his promise to reform. The truth is, he has lost, in a measure, his power of self-control. At last he becomes physically unable to resist the craving demand of his morbid appetite. Other faculties share in this mental wreck. The intellectual vision becomes less penetrating, the decisions of the mind less reliable, and the grasp of thought less vigorous. The logic grows muddy. A thriftless, reckless feeling is developed. Ere long, self-respect is lost, and then ambition ceases to allure, and the high spirit sinks."

"Buddhism, a species of Paganism is held by more than one-third of the human race. Where Paganism exists the sphere of woman is sufficiently limited to gratify the most fastidious.

The Temperance Instruction Bill.

The following is the bill amended by the Senate, and which is now before the House for consideration, concerning temperance instruction in public schools:

SECTION 1. Physiology and hygiene, which shall include special instruction as to the effects of alcoholic drinks, stimulants and narcotics on the human system, shall be taught as a regular branch of study, to all pupils in all schools supported wholly or in part by public money, except special schools maintained solely for instruction in particular branches, such as drawing, mechanics, art, and like studies. All acts or parts of acts relating to the qualifications of teachers in the public schools shall apply to the branch of study prescribed in this act.

SECT. 2. All penalties now fixed for neglect to provide instruction in the branches of study now prescribed by law shall apply to the branch of study prescribed in section one.

SECT. 3. This act shall take effect on the first day of August, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five.

Household Receipts.

RHUBARB CUSTARD PIE. Stew rhubarb in just as little water as will cook it thoroughly. Whip very light, using, if you have it, a Dover eggbeater. Add to one cup of this one cup of sugar, one-half tablespoonful of flour, two well-beaten eggs. Bake in an open crust like a tart pie. It is much improved by adding to the top a meringue made with the whites of two eggs. It should be eaten cold.

PORK CAKE. One pound of salt pork chopped fine and free from lean and rind; let it boil two minutes in one-half pint of boiling water; when cool add one cup of molasses, two cups of sugar, three eggs, two teaspoonfuls soda, one of cinnamon, one of cloves, one of allspice, one pound chopped raisins, flour to make a stiff batter. Bake slowly in a pan loaf.

BUNS. Break one egg into a cup and fill with sweet milk; mix with it a half-cup of yeast, a half-cup of butter, one cup of sugar, enough flour to make a soft dough, flavor with nutmeg. Let rise till very light, then mould into biscuit with a few currants. Let rise the second time in pan, bake, and when nearly done glaze with a little molasses and milk.

Tired, Languid, Dull

Exactly expresses the condition of thousands of people at this season. The depressive effects of warm weather, and the weak condition of the body, can only be corrected by the use of a reliable tonic and blood purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Why suffer longer when a remedy is so close at hand? Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will give you untold wealth in health, strength, and energy.

Firms Advertising "Home work."

There are a large number of firms in Boston who have been for sometime defrauding poor women about the country out of their money, by promising them work at remunerative prices, but requiring each one to send one dollar so as to protect the company against loss.

We are pleased to learn that Post-office Inspector Hartshorn is endeavoring to put a stop to these bogus concerns. He has visited several firms recently. he first was at 153 Milk street. Mr. Verables, the proprietor, has been advertising in papers North, South, East and West, calling the attention of young women to the excellent opportunity afforded them to make a good living by painting on glass photographs to be furnished by the Globe Company upon the receipt of a deposit of $1; that, if the labor was satisfactorily performed, all the work they could do would be furnished and prompt pay guaranteed. It is also stated in the advertisement that anybody can do the work, it is so simple, whereas, as a matter of fact, very few people, unless they have a decided talent for painting, can anywhere reach a satisfactory result. That these advertisements have had a good result is shown by the fact that this company is in the receipt at every mail of a very large number of letters, estimated by the postoffice officials at anywhere from 150 to 250 per day. The poor woman or girl who is anxious to obtain a livelihood eagerly grasps at the chance of earning a good living, and sends for a sample picture together with a book of instructions. The picture is generally a negative of some distinguished statesman or actress which the ambitious seeker after work is expected to paste on an oval piece of glass, and then paint so as to make the picture look like an oil painting. To get these samples and book of instruction, as above stated, requires the deposit of $1 or more. When the victim sees that she has been misled, no attempt is made to paint the picture, and in 75 cases out of 100 nothing further is heard of the matter, unless, as in the instances where complaints were made to the authorities.

Mr. Hartshorn next called upon the proprietors of the Kensington Art Company, doing business at No. 19 Pearl street, Boston. Circulars have been sent broadcast throughout the country by this firm, the inducements being quite as flattering as those offered by Globe Company. The applicant received in return by mail only a small pamphlet, a Christmas card worth 2 or 3 cents, and a single piece of cheap cotton velvet, with a flower traced upon it as a sample.

The Pioneer Manufacturing Company and several other firms have been visited and Hartshorn has asked the Washington authorities for instruction to withhold the mail of all of the concerns doing what he believes to be a fraudulent business, and the indications are that for the present, at least, there will be a diminution in the receipts of all the firms whose business has been to defraud unsuspecting people.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

PATENTS

Obtained, and all business in the U. S. Patent Office, or in the Courts attended to for MODERATE FEES.

We are opposite the U. S. Patent Office, engaged in PATENT BUSINESS EXCLUSIVELY, and can obtain patents in less time than those remote from WASHINGTON.

When model or drawing is sent we advise as to patentability free of charge; and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS WE OBTAIN PATENT.

We refer, here, to the Post Master, the Supt. of the Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circular, advice, terms, and reference to actual clients in your own state or county, address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.,

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.
